The following Obituary was taken from;
WILLIAM"S HISTORY OF WASHINGTON CO.,OHIO, p. 550

STEPHEN DEVOL,sr., emigrated to Ohio after peace with the Indians. He had learned the ship-building trade in Rhode Island, and was the builder of the first ocean ship, BRIG. ST. CLAIR, which entered the gulf from the Mississippi. This vessel is spoken of at some length in other chapters. In 1802 Mr. Devol removed his family to Waterford, and the following year, October 23, 1803, died. His wife, Rosannah Cook, was born April 14, 1751. She died November 10, 1835. Their family consisted of ten children.

PRESBERRY was born in 1770. He settled in Morgan county, where he died at the age of ninety two years.

JOSEPH, was born in 1772, he settled in Morgan county , and lived to be more than ninety years old.

PHILIP, was born in 1774; and was lost at sea.

WING, was born in 1775; he settled, and died in Muskingum township. These four had all been sailors before coming to Ohio, and after the settlement of the family here made ocean voyages. In older years They entertained their friends with stories of seafaring life. Philip was at aone time in the bottom of a wrecked vessel three days, living on cracker diet, and water caught by spreading clothes in the rain.

SARAH, the fifth child, died in earlylife.

COOK, the fifth son, was very young when the family came to Ohio, having preceded the other members of the family. From tradition we learn that the did good service as a scout during the Indian War. After the establishment of peace he married Hannah Convers, and settled inQuigley Hollow. He is buried in Waterford cemetery, where a stone bearing the following, marks his grave.

IN MEMORY OF
COOK DEVOL

Who died August 9, 1831, in the fifty-fith year of his age. He emigrated from Rhode Island at the early period of 1791, and suffered many privations and hardships during the Indian War, in the early settlement of Marietta.

"Therefore be ye all ready, for ye know not the hour the Son of Man cometh."

ALFAXID, the sixth of the sons of Stephen Devol, was killed by his team running away.

CHARLOTTE, died at New Albany, Indiana.

STEPHEN,JR., was born at Tiverton in 1786 and died in Waterford in 1875. (see following)

ROSANNAH, the youngest daughter, was born in 1792. She was married to Benjamin F. Stone of Rainbow.

OBITUARY

STEPHEN DEVOL, jr., was born at Tiverton, Rhode Island, March 2, 1786. He came to Ohio with the family and was seventeen years old at the time of the death of his father. His educational facilities were necessarily very limited, but he became inured to hard, patient labor, and until the beginning of the sickness which terminated his life, Mr. Devol rarely sought rest. He married for his first wife, Betsy Gray, December 5, 1808. She was the daughter of Captain William Gray, of the Waterford garrison. Two children were the fruit of this marriage, Tillinghast, the oldest, born 1809, followed flat-boating and steam-boating and acquired considerable money. He died at St. Louis. While Hiram, the second child, was yet a babe, Mr Devol was bereaved of both wife and child.

April 10, 1811 was muster-day, and Mrs. Devol desired to cross the river to witness the drill of the militia Co. of which her husband was a member. While crossing, the skiff which was in charge of her little brother Willie Gray, became unmanageable and upset near the shore. Mrs Devol and her child were drowned; her brother escaped by crawling to the shore on the bottom of the river.

Mr. Devol married for his second wife, Rebecca Wilson in March 1815; one year later he followed her remains to the grave.

He married, October 27, 1818, Silence Buell, widow of Mathew Buell. Her maiden name was Silence Hatch and she was born in Connecticut, June 23, 1795. By her first husband, Mathew Buell, she had three children, William, Louisa and Helen, the last of whom married James Sheldon and resides in Zanesville. By this marriage Mr. Devol had five children: Theodore, born February 28, 1820; Hiram, born February 7, 1824, died September 6, 1829; Emily (Hayward), born September 1827; Hiram F. born August 6, 1841; Betsy (McCaddon), born January 12, 1835, and Louisa (Shaw), December 29, 1836.

One of his most interesting characteristics was his hospitality. Early in life he joined the Methodist Church, and from that time on his house was made a stopping place of preachers and members. During the early days of Methodism in this county, churches were supplied entirely by circuit preachers, "who had no home but the back of a horse." They visited each preaching place periodically, and the membership being widely scattered people came great distances to church. The quarterly meeting services were particularly well attended. The meeting-house stood on one corner of Mr. Devol's farm, and his doors were always open to all who came. Circuit preachers, local preachers, and laymen with their families, made themselves at home at his house, but not always at the farm, for the even temper of the boys was not unfrequently disturbed by having a sufficient number of horses to take care of to supply a cavlry company. As many as forty guests sometimes dined at the Devol residence, But Methodists were not the only class who were benefitted by his hospitality. Farmers who came to the Featherston mill and waited for their grists also found confortable entertainment here. The Masonic lodge, of which Mr Devol was a member, were sometimes given a banquet.

Mr. and Mrs Devol spent the last years of their life at the house of their daughter, Mrs Hayward. Mr Devol died at Waterford, January 21, 1875, having almost completed his ninetieth year.

Theodore, oldest son of Stephen Devol, jr., was born 1820. In 1842 he married Jane F. Clark, who was born in 1825 in Waterford. He settled in Muskingum township, where he now owns a fine farm. His family consists of five children, viz: Frances H. (Barker), Muskingum twp; Stephen C. Noble county; Augusta J., Milton H. and Louis A. Muskingum township. Stephen C. was in the Thirty-sixth regiment during the war.

SILAS DEVOL

Son of Jonathan Devol & Priscilla Allen

Excerpt- from "Early Pioneer Settlers of Ohio, Hildeth, M.D.1852)

Silas Devol was a trader, and lived in Boston at the beginning of the war of Independence. He joined the infant navy of the country, and acted as captain of marines, under Abraham Whipple, during the first year of the war. He was at length taken prisoner, and died in the murderous British prison ships at New York, with thousands of his countrymen. His wife and three children were left destitute at Boston. Capt. Devol, although then poor, and supporting his own family with his labor, brought the three children to his house and fed and clothed them as his own.

Excerpt- from, "History of Washington Co., Ohio, Williams 1881

Three brothers, Allen, Isaac and Daniel Devol came to the county in its first settlement. The were nephews of Gilbert, Sr., Stephen, Sr., and Capt. Jonathan, Sr. and grandsons of the original settler at Tiverton, R. I.

Allen came with the first company to Marietta in the spring of 1788. In the winter of the following year he drew a donation lot, and joined the second association in April, 1789. He lived at the garrison until the close of Indian hostilities, and then began improving his land on Round bottom, just below the cemetery. Previous to his coming to Waterford, he was married to Ruth Jennings, by whom he had seven children: Simeon, settled opposite Coal Run; Lucinda, wife of Wayne Sprague lived on Big Run, Adams township; Daniel on the plain below Berverly; Bennett in Zanesville; Betsey married a Mason lived opposite Lowell; Allen, jr., in Round Bottom; Charlotte, opposite Lowell.

Daniel, went south, married a Spanish woman, and located at Mobile, Alabama, where he died in 1824.

Isaac, settled in Adams township, Ohio.

Sarah married James McFarland; Mariah married Luther Barker who removed to McConnelsville.

Captain Jonathan Devol built his house upon the land now owned by Robert Ward, (1881) at the place on the Muskingum where he afterwards built a mill.

Rapidly reviewing his history, it is found that Jonathan Devol was born in Tiverton, Rhode Island, in 1756, and there in 1776 he married Miss Nancy Barker, daughter of Captain Isaac Barker, a noted ship builder and ship master, who was lost at sea several years before his daughters marriage.

At the time of the formation of the Ohio Co., Captain Devol, who was an ingenious mechanic, built the "MAYFLOWER", in which the first company came down the Ohio. He settled first at Belpre, where he became famous by reason of his construction of the first floating-mill. After the peace, which ended the Indian war, he removed to Marietta and cultivated the land of Paul Fearing, and in 1796 made a settlement on the Muskingum.

The community in Wiseman's bottom was fortunate in having among its numbers two men of such marked mechanical skill as Colonel Joseph Barker and Captain Jonathan Devol. Both of them were skilled architects. Captain Devol being a shipwright by trade, and Colonel Barker a house-builder. About the year 1800, shipbuilding having become an important industry at Marietta and on the Muskingum, these men readily took part in the work for which they were so well adapted by previous education and natural skill. The dense forest on either side of the river furnished excellent material for the work. Giant oaks were felled, and under the skilful hands of these men were joined together and moulded into symmetrical shape. Noting first the work of Colonel Barker, we find that his shipyard was on his farm on the east bank of the Muskingum. In 1802, he constructed two ocean vessels. One was a brig built for Messrs. Blennerhassett and Woodbridge, and named the Dominic, after the name of Mr. Blennerhassett's oldest son. The other schooner, called the Indiana. This last named vessel, together with the Louisa, built in 1803, were for E. W. Tupper, of Marietta. During the fall of 1806, he was employed by Herman Blennerhassett to construct fifteen large bateaux for the use of the expedition of Aaron Burr to Mexico. The fate of these boats and this intended expedition is more fully described elsewhere. (History of Washington Co., Ohio)

Note: Colonel Barker, no doubt was a brother-in-law of Capt. Devol

Captain Devol's ship building was quite extensive. He also worked along the Muskingum upon his farm. In 1801 he built a sloop of four hundred tons for B. J. Filman, a merchant of Marietta. The vessel was wholly constructed of black walnut, and was name after the river by whose side it was built. In 1802 he built two brigs, of two hundred tons each, the Eliza Green, and the Ohio. In 1804 the schooner Nonpareil was built. The passage of the embargo act, in 1807 suspended all further operations in this line.

Excerpts from: MEMOIRS OF THE EARLY PIONEER SETTLERS OF OHIO, pages, 241-257
Published by H. Derby & Co., Cincinatti, 1852

Jonathan Devol was born at Tiverton, in the colony of Rhode Island, in the year of 1756. His ancestors were of French descent. His father settled in Rhode Island, and was a dealer in West India produce. The mother belonged to the sect called Quakers, who in that day composed a large portion of the inhabitants; the mild sway of Roger Williams encouraging perfect freedom of conscience and good will to all mankind. The family was quite numerous, he being the youngest of seven sons of Jonathan Devol.

Schools of learning, before the Revolutionary War, were of rare occurrence, and his whole education was embraced in one year's schooling. It fortunately happened that his father possessed a small library of choice books, from the perusal of which he reaped valuable instruction, and acquired a taste for reading that never forsook him in after life.

When quite young he learned the trade of a ship carpenter, and in manhood became quite noted for his skill in construction of boats of beautiful model and rapid sailing. One of his boats took a purse of fifty guineas, in a race between some gentlemen amateurs of Newport and Providence, where this manly sport was brought to great perfection.

When the war for independence broke out between Great Britain and the colonies, he took the side of his country, and before he was twenty years old, received a commission as ensign. In October, 1775, on the first call for troops for the interior defense of the colony, he marched with a part of a company of men, and joined the regiment to which he belonged, on the hights back of the town of Newport. In December following, he was appointed to the same rank, in a regiment to which he enlisted for a year. In June, 1776, he was commissioned as a liewtenant in the continental service. In December following he was promoted to the adjutancy of the first regiment in a brigade raised to repel the British, who had invaded Rhode Island.

In July, 1777, he resigned that post. In September of the same year, he acted as a volunteer in the badly conducted expedition of Gen. Spencer, against the British in Rhode Island. After the evacuation of the island, in January, 1780, he retired to Tiverton and was appointed to a captaincy in the militia.

In 1776, Capt. Devol married Miss Nancy Barker, the daughter of Capt. Isaac Barker, for many years a noted ship-master of Newport. Her father was lost at sea some years before the war, and she, with her widowed mother and several sisters, now resided on a farm, near the center of the island, on the road from Howland's ferry to Newport. When the British troops took possession of the place, many of the inhabitants were suffered to remain quietly in their homes. Mrs Barker was one of this number, and three or four of the officers were quartered the winter following at her house. They, however, treated her and the young ladies very politely and paid her nonorably for their board. The fiery and patriotic spirit of the young lieutenant could not brook the thought of his betrothed remaining in the society of the enemies of his country, lest their fascinating manners and rich dresses should lessen her devotion to the Whig cause. He accordingly, after giving her timely notice, planned an expedition on to the island with a party of men, and one dark wintry night, at the imminent hazard of his life from the sentries, brought off his intended wife in safety. Shortly after this event, they were married at the house of an elder sister, near Fairhaven. This union proved to be a very happy one, though checkered with many vicissitudes. She was the mother of thirteen children, and shared with him the dangers and privations of settling a new country in the wilderness, amidst the horrors of an Indian war.

After the close of the Revolution, and he had witnessed the triumph of his country over her enemies,he settled down in a quiet at Howland's ferry. Here he carried on the boat-building, and kept a small store of groceries.

When the Ohio Company was formed in 1789, he became one of the associates. In the Autumn of that year, he joined the little band of pioneers who preceded the actual settlers with their familes, and spent the winter on the Youghiogheny river, at Simrel's ferry. Here he was employed by Gen. Putnam to superintend the building of a large boat for the transport of the advance guard of the Ohio Company and their provisions to the mouth of the Muskingum. She was named by the adventurers, the May-flower. This is said to have been the first decked boat that ever floated on the Ohio. She was built with stout timbers and knees like a gallery, Here he was employed by Gen. Putnam to superintend the building of a large boat for the transport of the advance guard of the Ohio Company and their provisions to the mouth of the Muskingum. She was named by the adventurers the May-flower. This is said to have been the first decked boat that ever floated on the Ohio. She was used in transporting a number of families from Buffalo, above Wheeling to Marietta in the summer of 1788.

After the pioneer corps had established themselves at the mouth of the Muskingum, he was actively engaged in the erection of the stockaded garrison, called Campus Martius. This imposing structure answered the double purpose of a fort and for dwelling-houses. Within these walls the colonists were safe from the attack of Indians. The block-houses, as well as the dwellings which formed the curtains between, were built of planks four inches thick, and eighteen or twenty inches wide, sawed by hand from the huge poplar trees which grew near the ground occupied by the garrison. These were dovetailed together at the corners, and with the smooth surface left by the whip-saw, gave to the exterior a finished and beautiful aspect. The fort, as it may well be called, was a square of one hundred and eighty feet on each side, as figured in the preceding volume. (Memoirs of the Early Pioneers of Ohio, Hildreth, 1852) The settlers were allowed to build a part of the dwelling houses in the curtains for themselves, after the plan laid down by Gen. Putnam. Capt. Devol built one on his own account, forty feet long by eighteen wide, and two stories hight, furnished with neat brick chimneys, a kiln being made and burned the first season.

Mrs Devol, with five children, came on and joined him in December, as narrated in the Pioneer, Vol. II. The summer of 1789 was spent in completing the works at Campus Martius. In February 1790, he moved his family to Belpre, and settled on a small farm. During the first six months of the year the settlers suffered very much from a want of food, as more fully noticed in the history of Belpre.

Early in January, 1791, the Indian war broke out and the inhabitants were compelled to leave their improvements and go into the garrison.

During the first two years of the settlement their meal was all ground on hand-mills, with great labor and fatigue. The active mind of Mr. Devol suggested a remedy for this inconvenience. Some time previous, in conversation with Mr. Greene, he learned that he had seen floating mills in Holland. He directly proposed a project for a grist-mill, to be built on boats, and anchored in the Ohio, at some ripple within sight of the castle, where it would be safe from their savages foes. A few intelligent men joined and a company was formed for executing the work, and in the course of the year 1791, a mill was completed and put into operation. This floating boat was built on two boats, one a large pirogue, formed out oa an immense hollow sycamore tree, the other a large flat boat.

During the period of the Indian War the small-pox and scarlet fever both visited the inhabitants. By the latter disease Mr Devol lost his oldest son, a lad of fourteen years, and two other of his children.

In person Capt. Devol was of a medium size and hight muscular, and well-proportioned; quick and rapid in his motions like the movements of his mind; a well formed head; light complexion; reddish-colored hair; blue transparent eyes, sparkling with good humor and intelligence; a well-proportioned nose, of a Roman cast; broad, positive chin, indicative of decision and firmness. In his youthful days, in the full, showy dress of the period of the Revolution, he was said to have been, by one who knew him well, the most perfect figure of a man to be seen amongst a thousand.

Mrs. Devol died in 1823, during the great epidemic fever which pervaded all the valley of the Ohio. He died in 1824, aged sixty-eight years, greatly lamented by all who knew him.

The Last Will and Testament of:

GILBERT DEVOL, Esquire

Will Bk. 3, p. 151 - Washington Co., Ohio

In the name of God - Amen.

I Gilbert Devol of Waterford, in the County of Washington, State of Ohio, being of sound mind and memory, tho advanced in years and calling to mind, the mortality of my body and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die. I do make and ordain this my last will and testament that is to say as touching my worldly estate, after which I give and bequeath to my loving wife, Ann Devol - ALL THAT PERSONAL PROPERTY, which she brought to me, and one half of the remainder of my personal property at her disposal. I also give and bequeath to my wife one third of the improved farm which I now live and together with the mansion house, all which personal and real estate I give her in liew of her dower or power of thirds during her natural life.

Out of respect to my daughter-in-law, Sally Devol, widow of my son, Wanton Devol, late of Waterford, deseased. I give and bequeath to her the house which she now lives in and five acres of land beginning on the River Road, at the corner orchard of the partition fence adjoining the upper end of my orchards. Thence ranging west, so far as that a south line shall contain five acres together with all the privileges there unto belonging to her, the said Sally Devol, her heirs and assigns forever.

The said five acres to be set off exclusive of the road on the bank of the river.

I give and bequeath to my grandson, Philip Devol, four lots of land which I have purchased of, John Dodge, Joseph Thompson, John White and James Whitney, administrators of the estate of Gilbert Devol, Jr., and are numbered 21, 22, 23, and 24. He is to have said lots of land under the incumberance of my former gifts to my wife and to his mother, Sally Devol, during his natural life, after which it is to fall to Gilbert Devol, son of the said Philip Devol, as an estate of inheritance.

I give and bequeath to my grand son, Alpha Devol an additional lot of land of seven acres, which adjoines the north-east corner of Lot No.21, clear from all incumberances.

5th, In taking into consideration the services, which I have formerly rendered to my daughters, Mrs Sary Hinkley, - Polly McClure, Priscilla White, and Bathsheba Beedle, and in consequence of them holding their equal shares of lots belonging to the estate of my son, Gideon Devol, late of Waterford, deceased.

I give and bequeath to my said daughters, one dollar each and order and direct that after my decease, that my exec u tor should pay the same out of my estate.

6th, In addition to my former gift to my daughter-in-law, Sally Devol. I give unto her the privilege of taking fruit out of my orchards for her family's use, in bearing season, not exceeding one fourth part of said fruit.

7th, I do hereby order and direct that my executor shall and dispose of a tract of uninproved lands which I own lying in the Fifth Township and Twelvth Range, and in Section No 4 and 10, and is an undivided third part of a section and fraction drawn in the name of my son, Johnathan Devol and laying in the Ohio Company Purchase and said land to be disposed of for the purpose of paying my just debts, and settling up my estate.

8th, I do hereby appoint and ordain my grandson, Philip Devol, my executor, placing full power in him to settle up my estate agreeable to this my last will and Testament. I hereby disaunulling all former wills and Testaments, and ratifying and confirming this my last will and Testament.

Signed, Sealed, and Acknowledge to be his last will in presence of us the subscribing Witness. Jonathan Devol, Seth Baker, Stephen Devol,

In front of these witnesses, where of I have hereunto set my hand and seal, this 21st day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty two.

GILBERT DEVOL, ESQ. (Seal)

(Note: Philip Devol, appeared in court and refused to accept the full responsibility of the estate. Anne Devol, widow, refused in favor of Samuel Beach, Esq. of Waterford.)

HISTORY of
JUDGE GILBERT DEVOL, Esquire

Quoted from: William's History of Washington County, Ohio, p.549
Pub.1881, 1976, The Bookmark, Ind.

" The little State of Rhode Island was the birthplace of the most numerous family of the Muskingum valley settlers. THE DEVOL FAMILY. Their paternal ancestor was a Frenchman, who settled in Tiverton, Rhode Island, and engaged in the West India trade. His wife was a Quaker of the mild, peace loving school.

Judge Gilbert Devol, was one of seven sons, three of whom became residents of this county, and the sons of the fourth also joined the pioneer band. Two of the brothers and one of the nephews were settlers of Waterford township.

Gilbert Devol was born in Tiverton, Rhode Island, in 1736. In 1788 he emigrated with his wife and family to Ohio, and stopped in Marietta until April, 1793, when he joined the second association and came to Waterford with the first nineteen. At the opening of the Indian War, he lived in the block-house on the Waterford side of the river, but afterwards removed his family to the garrison. At the close of the war, he settled on the bottom below Beverly, where he died in 1821. He was a man of more than ordinary prominence in the early community. He had served as judge in Rhode Island, and was always known by that title here.

"McCullock, a fellow settler, was deceived by an Indian stratagen and came very near being lured to his death. Some of the Indians were dressed in match coats and hats, similar to those of the soldiers in the garrison, and he went readily toward them until warned by Wanton Devol, who cried out at the top of his voice: "They are going to shoot you!" McCullock sprang back just in time to save his life. The only Indian who received any harm in the brief skirmish, was one who was shot a very long distance off by JUDGE DEVOL, who fired through one of the loop-holes of the fort, with an old ducking gun of a very great length of barrel. The Indian was one who supposing themselves beyond the reach of a musket ball,were making very offensive and tantalizing gestures."

Various township meetings were held at which the proposition to form a State government was fully discussed and strongly opposed.

On the 17th of June 1801, an Anti-State Meeting was held at Marietta, made up of delegates from the several townships as follows:

Marietta, The Hon. Paul Fearing & Elijah Backus;
Belpre, Isaac Pierce & Silas Bent;
Waterford, JUDGE GILBERT DEVOL & Robert Oliver
Adams, Joseph Barker;
Newport, Philip Witten & Samuel Williamson;
Middletown, (later Athens) Alvin Bingham;

Provision was made for three such officers by a law adopted from the Pennsylvania code, by the governor and judges in 1795 and confirmed by the territorial legislature in 1799. County Commissioners were to be appointed by the court of quarter sessions.

The following is a letter written by:
JUDGE GILBERT DEVOL,Esq.
To his good friend, Benjamin Dana. The original letter is in the Postal History Collection of Jerry B. Devol, Route 3, Devola, Ohio 45750.

The letter was addressed to Benjamin Dana, Residing with John W. Dana Esqr, Pomphret, State of Vermont. The letter apparently carried outside the mails by General Cogswell, and delivered by him to the post office at Rutland, Vt., Sept. 4th, 1812, and 10 cents postage rate.

My Respected friend,

I imbrace an oppertunity by General Eli Cogswell to convey a few lines to you, but having nothing pleasing to write excepting our general state of health and a promising season.

I have to informe you of the Death of my son, Wanton about six week past in addition to my other misfortunes, which you are already acquainted with, all which has almost brought me down to great measure supports me under these sore trials. But I forbear. The scene is too distressing to dwell upon. William Gray Esqr. was buried last Sunday; he died after about nine or ten days sickness. He has left an unhappy family and his affairs remained in a bad situation as likewis involved many others whose affairs remained unsettled in his hands which was verry numerous. I omit writing any thing of your affairs. Mrs Dana will write by the same oppertunity. She was at my house the day before yesterday and concerted with Gen'rl Cogswell about taking a letter to some convenient Post where it would soonest come to hand. I avail myselfe of the same oppertunity. Mrs Dana told me the other day she had received a letter since your arrival at your father's and that you would have made a tower to the state of New Hampshire before her letter could reach your father's.

In your travils you will have a good oppertunity to lern the politicks of the Eastern States, which I am happy to learn from late papers are like to be firmly united in opposition to the war measures of our present administration, and that they deem it unconstitutional to place the militia under the officers of the United States, except in certain cases which does not now exist. I read a Providance paper this morning, giving an account of the doings of their legislature, which does them honour. In that paper, I also observed an account of the action of Commodore Rogers, withe the British frigate Belvidare, from a Halifax paper. It seems by that account that the Commodore did not find another little belt.

Cap't. Bryaon states t t after discovering our fleet to be ships of war and could not answer his priveate signals, he took them to be inamies and stood from them, but they soon came up with him and Rogers commenced the action, which lasted untill another frigate came up and likewise ingaged him but with little effect. It must seem from that statement that the Belvidare must have handled them both verry roughly or they would not have suffered him to proceed to Halifax to carry the proclamation of war. Indeed our army does not present a much better prospect. It appears that General Hull was sent on the Western Quarter in order to take Fort Malden, but our brave Cap't. Sharp pushed forward of the main body of the army and met with sufficiant of the British and their allies to take him and fifty of his comrades into Fort Malden. You remember his letter to Griffin Greene.

The Democrats of our Quarter have lately a story circulating amongst them, that the Emporer of France has made a treaty with Mr. Barlow, in which he has done us compleat justice. Consisted in, the answer was that he has agreed to make good all damage we had sustained by captures & ect. What short sited fools must such men be. I stated a caise to one of them in this manner; Suppose yourselfe possessed of a large sum of money, and on travling the highway, you was met by a robber, and striped of all you had, but before you parted he was assailed by two honest travilers, whome he feared would bring him to Justice. He said it was a similar caise, but I told him, all the diffarence was in the caise of the French treatment, was an hundred times more agravating, for conditions required by France was that we should go to war with England, in which caise we are liable to suffer an hundred fold more loss in property, and thousands of lives besides.

But why should I write you on Politicks while you have ten times the means of information that I have. Therefore I hope you will make your visit as short as possible. I am almost alone and time hangs heavy for want of Conversation with those of similar sentiments. My best compliments to yourselfe, your father and family.

Williams History, p. 537 - 550

Gideon owned a donation lot on the plain adjoining the present site of the Beverly Fair grounds. He had improved fourteen acres on his farm, when he met an untimely death. He went hunting on a cold day and was found at the trunk of a tree, frozen to death. He was buried on his own farm, in a small lot which has since become a family burying ground.

An incident is told in this connection of the fidelity of a favorite dog. He was found guarding the body of his master, and was unwilling to permit anyone to touch it. When the body was removed the animal seemed grief-stricken, refused food and finally starved to death.

"During the Indian war the most active and brave of the young men were deputized to act as rangers. It was their duty to make daily circuits of four or five miles and report the condition of affairs at the garrison. One who served in this dangerous office and remained to clear and cultivate the land he had helped to defend, was Andrew McClure. He was born in Maine in 1771. In his eighteenth year the settlement of the Northwestern Territory attracted his attention, and possessing a brave heart, he resolved to link his fortunes with the pioneers of the border. Not being a member of the Ohio company he drew a lot in the donation tract, in in April, 1789, joined the second association and came to Waterford with the nineteen first settlers. He was regarded a valuable man in the settlement, and during the Indian troubles his skill and courage became celebrated. In 1794, he married POLLY DEVOL, and the following year built a cabin and began cultivating the farm just above Wolf Creek. His family consisted of nine children, one of whom was Henry McClure, mentioned under the head of Dunham township. In 1806, McClure having met with financial misfortune, removed to Federal Bottom, where he took charge of the saw mill. He died in Lancaster, Ohio, in 1830. His wife survived him for twenty five years.

"About 1812 Andrew McClure took on similar terms, another lot, two hundred yards above the mouth of Congress Run, on which he also built a log house. Andrew had been a scout in the Indian War, and was somewhat unsteady and inclined to drink too much. He married Polly Devol, sister of Gedeon. She was a notable housekeeper and an exemplary woman. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, a useful member of society, and reared seven children, most of whom turn out well."

In the summer of 1790 General Putnam, who had contracted with William Duer, of the Scioto company, to erect houses at Gallipolis for the expected French emigrants, employed, at his own expense, Captain William Burnham and forty men, to perform the work. General Putnam expended two thousand dollars, which was a total loss. The Scioto company had been premature in selling lands and inducing emigration before they had completed their purchase of Congress. The company failed, and Duer became a bankrupt. The poor duped Frenchmen arrived in this country in the summer, and on the sixteenth of October were at Marietta on their way to the village which Putnam's men had built for them. They came to Marietta in six Kentucky flatboats, and numbered four hundred souls. The odd dress, wooden shoes, and strange tongue of the emigrants made them the subject of much curious observation, and awakened a general interest among the settlers. There was no little pity for these unfortunate foreigners among those at Marietta who knew the probabilities in regard to their losing the lands which they expected to settle upon, and the almost penniless condition of the majority made their situation doubly deplorable. All that was possible was done to make their condition bearable, and a few of the French who remained permanently at Marietta were cared for until able to provide for their own wants. The greater proportion of the four hundred tarried briefly and went on to Gallipolis, and, owing to the troubles which soon after beset the Ohio company settlers, the woes of the French were less thought of than would otherwise have been the case. The Ohio company was obliged to exert every power to provide for its own emigrants. The total number of men in the company's territory was now upwards of three thousand. The total number arrived was about five hundred, but fully two-fifths had come as adventurers, or if emigrating with the intention of making a permanent settlement, had either returned to New England, or sought homes in Pennsylvania, Virginia, or Kentucky. During the first year the number of males who came to the colony was one hundred and thirty-three; during 1789 the number was one hundred and fifty-two, and during 1790, one hundred and sixty-five. Nearly one hundred families had come to the settlement during the three years.

In conclusion we present General Putnam's list* of the arrivals in the Ohio company's purchase during the first three years of settlement.

*Among the papers of General Putnam there appears a list of the settlers in the Ohio company's purchase during the years 1788, 1789 and 1790, or to the opening of the Indian war. This list, which is undoubtedly reliable, forms the only complete record of the settlement of Washington county, and has never heretofore appeared in print. It includes all who came to the county during the years above mentioned, except those men who were hired by the Ohio company, most of whom had no intention of remaining permanently in the colony. Many of those whose names are given did not continue in the Ohio company's lands, but either removed to other settlements in Ohio, Virginia or Kentucky or returned to New England. Those who remained through the Indian war (or fell victims to it) are indicated by a star. The French settlers, and those who removed to Gallipolis (quite a large class) are designated by General Putnam, and as we have thought that part of the record might be of interest to many readers, it is copied with the original indications or notes opposite the names. The whole is a literal transcript of the original document by the painstaking and careful superintendent of the colony.

written in large letters "For Ohio." He joined the second association in the spring of 1789, and at the opening of the Indian war was chosen commander of the garrison. When peace had been established he purchased a farm near the mouth of Wolf creek, and lived there until his death in 1812. His family consisted of ten children, four boys and six girls. The four boys were: William, who lived on the Peninsula; Austin, settled in Massachusetts; Chauncy, in Brown county, and Hanford in Beverly, where he engaged in tanning. Betsy, the eldest of the girls, married Stephen Devol, 2d (an account of her death is given in the sketch of "Federal Bottom;") Polly was married to William Fisher; Debra, to Jesse Loring, of Belpre; Rebecca, to Rotheus Hayward; and Clarissa, to Josiah Hart, a tanner in Waterford.

In a small community versatility is one of the most useful traits of character. Complete division of labor is impossible, and the man who can turn his hand to whatever the eye sees to do, is held in the highest esteem. The man in the early settlement of Waterford more than any other blessed with this kind of genius was Major Dean Tyler. He possessed a brilliant mind, liberal college education, an agreeable person and refined manners. He was brave and active in time of danger, cool and thoughtful in time of peace. Judge Cutler in his diary tersely sums up the regard in which he was held. He says: "When I came here (in 1795) I found Major Dean Tyler, a graduate of Harvard college, a scholar and a gentleman." He was a native of Haverhill, Massachusetts. In early life he formed an attachment to a young lady, which cast a dark shadow over his whole life. The path of these lovers was full of rough places, and young Tyler sought to free himself of haunting dreams by going to Europe. On his journey he had many perilous experiences and narrow escapes. Jealousy subsided, and he determined to return to the woman of his choice. But it was too late. Her death had taken place in the meantime, and he was conscious of being the cause. The shock threw him into a delirium, and he narrowly escaped death. After a slow and tedious recovery he left the scenes of his boyhood and joined the colony at the mouth of the Muskingum. In April, 1789, he drew a donation lot and came to Waterford. The block-house on the west side of the river, opposite the site of the present town of Beverly, was named in his honor and used by him as a residence until his death. Here he instructed the youth and held services on Sunday. He never married, but sought to drown his melancholy in books, and in his later life in the inebriating bowl.

The Dodge family is conspicuous in the history of the Waterford settlement. The family is descended from Lord John Dodge, of Rotham, Kent county, England, to whose ancestors were granted estates in Chestine county, by Anne for service done in the reign of Edward First, and for valiant conduct at the sieges of Berwick and Dunbar. The grandson of Lord John Dodge was Captain John Dodge, who came to Ohio in 1788, and the following year, in partnership with Colonel Robert Oliver and Major Haffield White, built the first mill in Ohio, near the forks of Wolf creek. He entered six lots in the "donation tract." Part of his land was in the present territory of Watertown township, where he lived. Captain Dodge brought with him from Beverly, Massachusetts, his wife, who was Susanna Morgan, a relative of General Daniel Morgan, and a woman of much strength and beauty of character. Their children were John and William M., born in Massachusetts; Susannah, Sidney, Ethel, Solomon, Mary, and Andrew, born in this county. Captain Dodge died October 8, 1805.

John Dodge, the eldest son, inherited that part of the estate which his father had received from Judge Cutler in exchange for a tract of six hundred acres on Federal creek, in Athens county. The lot originally embraced sixty-eight acres. The first business house in the township was on this lot, and it seemed to possess peculiar advantages as a village site. Mr. Dodge laid out his land in town lots, setting apart lots for churches and other purposes. He named the town Beverly in honor of his native home in Massachusetts. He assisted to found a college for general educational purposes, and used his influence and capital for the encouragement of business enterprise. He married, in 1806, Mary B. Stone. Their children were: Israel S., who was for forty years a prominent physician in Cincinnati; Christopher, William M., Mary M., Sidney, Elvina, and John. Mary Stone Dodge, his wife, died in 1822. He married for his second wife Nancy N. Patterson, of Virginia, by whom there were two children—Patterson Oliphant Dodge and Colina N., wife of S. B. Robinson, esq. Mr. Dodge died January 11, 1854. His wife had preceded him twelve years.

During the Indian war the most active and brave of the young men were deputized to act as rangers. It was their duty to make daily circuits of four or five miles and report the condition of affairs at the garrison. One who served in this dangerous office and remained to clear and cultivate the land he had helped to defend, was Andrew McClure. He was born in Maine in 1771. In his eighteenth year the settlement of the Northwestern Territory attracted his attention, and possessing a brave heart, he resolved to link his fortunes with the pioneers of the border. Not being a member of the Ohio company he drew a lot in the donation tract, and in April, 1789, joined the second association and came to Waterford with the nineteen first settlers. He was regarded a valuable man in the settlement, and during the Indian troubles his skill and courage became celebrated. In 1794 he married Polly Devol, and the following year built a cabin and began cultivating the farm just above the mouth of Wolf creek. His family consisted of nine children, one of whom was Henry McClure, mentioned under the head of Dunham township. In 1806, McClure having met with financial misfortune, removed to Federal Bottom, where he took charge of the saw-mill. He died in Lancaster, Ohio, in 1830. His wife survived him twenty-five years.

The little State of Rhode Island was the birth place of the most numerous family of the Muskingum valley settlers,—the Devol* family. Their paternal ancestor was a Frenchman, who settled in Tiverton, Rhode Island, and engaged in the West India trade. His wife was a Quaker of the mild, peace-loving school. The family consisted of seven sons, three of whom became residents of this county, and the sons of the fourth also joined the pioneer band. Two of the brothers and one of the nephews were settlers of Waterford township.

Gilbert Devol was born in Tiverton, Rhode Island, in 1736. In 1788 he emigrated with his wife and family to Ohio, and stopped in Marietta until April, 1788, when he joined the second association and came to Waterford with the first nineteen. At the opening of the Indian war, he lived in the block-house on the Waterford side of the river, but afterwards removed his family to the garrison. At the close of the war, he settled on the bottom below Beverly, where he died in 1821. He was a man of more than ordinary prominence in the early community. He had served as judge in Rhode Island, and was always known by that title here. He had a large family. Gideon owned a donation lot on the plain adjoining the present site of the Beverly fair grounds. He had improved fourteen acres on his farm when he met an untimely death. He went out hunting on a cold day and was found at the trunk of a tree frozen to death. He was buried on his own farm, in a small lot which has since become a family burying-ground. An incident is told in this connection of the fidelity of a favorite dog. He was found guarding the body of his master, and was unwilling to permit anyone to touch it. When the body was removed the animal seemed grief-stricken, refused food, and finally starved to death.

Wanton, second son of Judge Devol, was one of the forty-eight who first arrived at Marietta. He married Sally Lake, of Rhode Island before emigrating, and by her had a large family. He came to Waterford in the spring of 1789, but it appears, from family records, did not move his family here at that time. He died in 1812, at the age of fifty years. His sons were Alpha, who was born in the Campus Martius, in 1789. He was soon after brought with his mother to Waterford, where the family lived till the close of the war. He married Nancy Champlain, of Connecticut, and settled, first, on Federal Bottom and then on the opposite side of the river, where he died in 1871.

Phillip, second son of Wanton Devol, was born in the garrison in 1791. He married Hannah Hatch, of Connecticut, and settled near the mouth of Tuttles run. He died in 1852.

William, the third son, was born in 1793. He married Sally Silva, and lived where Beverly now stands. He died in 1823.

The daughters of Wanton Devol, were Ruth, died in 1873, aged seven years; Nancy, wife of William Brown, died in Kansas in 1878; Hannah, wife of Charles Story, of Round Bottom, this township; Sally, born 1805, lives on the homestead.

Silas, the youngest son of Wanton Devol, was born in 1802, died on the homestead in 1865.

*Sometimes spelled Duval.

Jonathan, third son of Gilbert Devol, came with his parents from Rhode Island, and was in the garrison at Waterford during the Indian war. He married Clara Sherman, and after the close of hostilities, improved his farm on Wolf creek, where he built a mill. His family consisted of three daughters and two sons, viz: Lucy, wife of John Burris; Betsy, wife of Elmer Drury, of the "Tick Ridge" settlement; and Cynthia; Gideon moved out of the county, and Wanton was drowned in the Muskingum while engaged in keel boating.

Gilbert, forth son of Judge Gilbert Devol, studied medicine and engaged in the practice of his profession in Belpre township.

Isaac, fifth son, was drowned when a boy.

The daughters of Judge Devol were, Sally Hinkley, of Athens county; Betsy Cushing, of Round Bottom settlement; Basha White, of Athens county, and Polly, wife of Andrew McClure.

Stephen Devol, sr., emigrated to Ohio after peace with the Indians. He had learned the ship-building trade in Rhode Island, and was the builder of the first ocean ship—brig St. Clair, which entered the gulf from the Mississippi. This vessel is spoken of at some length in another chapter. In 1802 Mr. Devol removed his family to Waterford, and the following year, October 23, 1803, died. His wife, Rosannah Cook, was born April 24, 1751 (O. S). She died November 10, 1835. Their family consisted of ten children. Presberry was born in 1770. He settled in Morgan county, where he died at the age of ninety-two years. Joseph was born in 1772; he settled in Morgan county, and lived to be more than ninety years old. Philip was born in 1774, and was lost at sea. Wing was born in 1775; he settled, and died in Muskingum township. These four had all been sailors before coming to Ohio, and after the settlement of the family here made ocean voyages. In older years they entertained their friends with stories of seafaring life. Philip was at one time in the bottom of a wrecked vessel three days, living on cracker diet, and water caught by spreading clothes in the rain. Sarah, the fifth child, died in early life. Cook, the fifth son, was very young when he came to Ohio, having preceded the other members of the family. From tradition we learn that he did good service as a scout during the Indian war. After the establishment of peace he married Hannah Convers, and settled in "Quigley Hollow." He is buried in Waterford cemetery, where a stone bearing the following marks his grave:

In memory of
COOK DEVOL,
Who died August 9, 1831, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. He emigrated from Rhode Island at the early period of 1791, and suffered many privations and hardships during the Indian war, in the early settlement of Marietta.

"Therefore be ye all ready, for ye know not the hour the Son of Man cometh."

Alfaxid, the sixth of the sons of Stephen Devol, was killed by his team running away. Charlotte died at New Albany, Indiana. Stephen, jr., was born at Tiverton in 1786, and died at Waterford in 1875. Rosannah, the youngest daughter, was born in 1792. She was married to Benjamin F. Stone, of Rainbow.

Theodore, oldest son of Stephen Devol, jr., was born in 1820. In 1842 he married Jane F. Clark, who was born in 1825, at Waterford. He settled in Muskingum township, where he now owns a fine farm. His family consists of five children, viz: Frances H. (Barker), Muskingum township; Stephen C., Noble county; Augusta J., Milton H. and Louis A., Muskingum township. Stephen C. was in the Thirty-sixth regiment during the war.

Three brothers, Allen, Isaac and Daniel Devol, came to the county in its first settlement. They were nephews of Gilbert, sr., Stephen, sr., and Captain Jonathan, sr., and grandsons of the original settler at Tiverton, Rhode Island. Allen came with the first company to Marietta in the spring of 1788. In the winter of the following year he drew a donation lot, and joined the second association in April, 1789. He lived at the garrison until the close of Indian hostilities, and then began improving his land on Round bottom, just below the cemetery. Previous to his coming to Waterford, he was married to Ruth Jennings, by whom he had seven children: Simeon, settled opposite Coal run; Lucinda, wife of Wayne; Sprague lived on Big run, Adams township; Daniel on the plain below Beverly; Bennett in Zanesville; Betsey (Mason), opposite Lowell; Allen, jr., in Round bottom; Charlotte, opposite Lowell.

Daniel Devol went south, married a Spanish woman, and located at Mobile, Alabama, where he died in 1824.

Isaac Devol settled in Adams township, where an account of him is given.

Simeon M., son of Allen Devol, was born January 14, 1800. He was married January 10, 1822, to Rubia Sprague, who was born in Waterford township January 18, 1795. The fruit of this union was ten children, five of whom are still living—Emeline M., Ruth B., William A., Betsy, and Adelia. Mrs. Devol died November 24, 1864. William A., the seventh child, was born in Adams township, February 23, 1824. September 25, 1859, he married Catharine, daughter of Peter Angle, of Waterford township, who was born June 3, 1840. Their family consists of three children—Eva E., Roscoe G., and Howell S. Eva E. is married to Russell A. Humiston, of Adams township.

Captain Daniel Davis, one of the Waterford associates, came to Marietta from Killingly, Connecticut. His family were William, afterwards captain of militia and magistrate; Jesse, afterwards colonel of militia and magistrate; Asa, Daniel, jr., and Hezekiah; Betsy married first to Mr. Perrin, and then to Mr. Wilson; and another daughter who married Colonel James Mann. They were all very respectable people and acquired property.

Benjamin Convers, esq., emigrated with his family from Killingly to Marietta, and thence to Waterford the following spring. He died of small-pox at Waterford the first year of the settlement. His family were James, who died about 1804; Daniel was taken prisoner by the Indians and afterwards became a successful merchant at Zanesville; Wright settled at Baton Rouge, Louisiana; Simeon and Grosvenor, both respectable and prosperous men; one of the daughters married Jasper Stone, esq.; another Benjamin Beadle.

George Wilson, David Wilson, and William Wilson, came from Killingly, Connecticut, to Marietta in 1788. They joined the second association in the spring of 1789, and were valuable members of the colony during the Indian war. William was drowned in 1797. Jeremiah Wilson, at Coal Run, is a descendant of this Wilson family.

LATER SETTLERS.

Robert Leget, son of John Leget, was born in Pennsylvania in 1795. He lived in Waterford from 1799 until his death in 1876. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and justice of the peace for twenty-five years. The office of magistrate was once no trifling honor. Judge Cutler and Colonel Robert Oliver had served in that capacity and given the office a dignity which was not lost until later years. Robert Leget married Susanna Featherston, who was born in 1798 and died in 1872. Their daughter Jane was born in 1817 at Beverly. She was married in 1853 to Augustus Cram, who was born in 1813.

Jesse Brown was born in Connecticut in 1776. He immigrated to Ohio in 1800, and settled in Waterford township. His wife, Relief Story, was born in 1781. Both died in Morgan county in 1816. Mrs. Harriet Culver, of Waterford; S. S. Brown, of Waterford, and Parley Brown, of Iowa, are the only children.

S. S. Brown was born in 1807. In 1835 he married Harriet Lagrange, who was born in New York in 1811. They have seven children living, one of whom was in the army from 1862 to 1865. Mr. Brown served as school director for fifteen years.

John Bacon, whose settlement is mentioned in the history of Watertown township, was born in England in 1764. He first emigrated to New York, and then to Ohio soon after the Indian war. His death occurred in Waterford township in 1854. Sarah Comer, his wife, was born in 1774, and died in 1848. Their children were: William, born 1795, died 1880; Sarah, born 1797; John, born 1798, died 1861; Martha, born 1800; Mary Taylor, lives in Noble county; Martin, born 1803; Ellen, born 1805, deceased; Isaac, born 1807, died 1878; Martha, lives in Marietta; Maria, lives in Iowa; Eliza, born 1815, died 1830; Melissa Beach, lives in Waterford township; Bentrand, lives in Iowa, and Martin, who was born in 1804. In 1829 Martin married Mary M. Hurlbut, who died in 1866. In 1868 he married Sarah Mason, who was born in Adams township in 1830. Mr. Bacon is father of five children, viz.: Rachel J. Lawrence, of Waterford township; Mary E. Hill, of Watertown; Betsy Baldwin, of this township; Andrew J. and John E. He has buried three children—Emily, Merandah and Sarah. Mr. Bacon is one of the wealthiest farmers in the township, owning nine hundred and ninety-five acres of land.

Captain Rotheus Hayward was a lineal descendent of Thomas Hayward, who emigrated from England in 1635 and was one of the founders of Bridgewater, Massachusetts. Rotheus, the oldest son of Joseph Hayward, of Eaton, Massachusetts, came to Marietta in 1805. He there became acquainted with Panthia Nye, whom he

Isaac Fowler and his son Isaac, Jr., signed the Pledge of Allegiance to the Colonies at Newburgh in 1775.[e] In 1785 Isaac Fowler and his son Isaac Fowler, Jr., were assessed at Newburgh.[f] His son was still called Isaac Fowler, Jr., in 1787 when he quitclaimed a tract of land to Samuel Merritt.[g] The date of Isaac Fowler's death has not been ascertained. He was not listed as a householder on the Census of 1790.

AN ARMORY OF AMERICAN FAMILIES OF DUTCH DESCENT

Contributed by William J. Hoffman, F.G.B.S.

(DE) MANDEVILLE

Gillis Jansz (de) Mandeville and his wife Elsge Hendricks, with 4 children, came to America in 1659, sailing from Holland Feb. 12, on the Faith (HSYB 1902).

On the passenger list Gillis Jansz is indicated as coming "from Garder", that is from Garderen a village in the N. W. corner of the province of Gelderland, Netherlands. In Record 38 (1907):284 there has been published a genealogy of the de Mandeville family. In this article a few data are given concerning his presumed relatives in the Netherlands and it is there stated that Gillis was possibly a son of Jan Jansz de Mandeville a candidate minister at Kootwijck near Voorthuysen, villages in the immediate neighborhood of Garderen. Gillis was indeed a son of the Rev. Johan (Jan) de Mandeville whose full name was, however, not Jan Jansz but Jan Michaelsz de Mandeville.

At the end of the 16th century there lived at Nymegen, a city in the province of Gelderland, Dr. Med. Michael Jansz de Mandeville. It is unknown from where he had settled there,[1] but his family came presumably originally from France, for Mandeville is the name of two villages in Normandy, one in the Departement of Eure, the other in Calvados.

In 1601 Dr. Michael was appointed "ordinaris medicus" and rector or principal, of the Latin School at Nymegen.[1] Through his supervision he improved the practice of medicine there and this, and his own practice, demanded so much of his time that in 1607 the magistracy asked him to resign as principal of the Latin School in order to devote his entire time to medicine. In 1617 he and seven of his children received the burgherright of Nymegen and the next year he was honored by being appointed a schepen and a member of the City Council of the city of his adoption. In 1635 the plague raged at Nymegen. Ministering to the sick to the last he played a heroic part. He finally was stricken himself and succumbed to the dreaded disease. A grateful city honored his memory by providing a college education for his children and by appointing first his son Dr. Emanuel and afterwards the latter's son Dr. Gualtherus to the position of city-physician.

Dr. Michael de Mandeville had married Maria van de Rade, a daughter of Aegidius (Gillis) van de Rade and Sara his wife.

Eleven children were born to Dr. Michael and his wife. The oldest son Jan, the father of the American settler, was born in abt. 1601. On March 3, 1623 he entered Leiden University. His name was entered as "Joannis Mandewijl, Nymegen, 22 (years old), T(heology). Four years later he was joined there by his younger brother Emanuel who took the course of medicine. It is possible that Johan (Jan) de Mandeville had already followed courses in theology elsewhere (possibly at the Collegiate Theological School at Leiden, not connected with the University). It was rather old to start one's university career at the age of 22 in those olden days, and in 1624 he received already permission to lecture on the Hebrew language, in the place of professor l'Empereur, at the Atheneum at Harderwijk, Gelderland.[2]

In 1628 he was appointed a proponent or candidate minister at the village of Kootwijk, not far from Harderwijk and two years later he became a minister in the neighboring village at Garderen where he died in 1657. There is a tombstone with a rather illegible inscription of a Mandeville burial in the church at Garderen which may refer to the Rev. Johannes de Mandeville.

In 1640 he had written a Latin Carmen which he had dedicated to the Estates of Gelderland for which this august body voted him a suitable reward.

The name of Rev. Johan's wife has not as yet been found. Two years after his death his son Gillis, named probably for his uncle Aegidius (Gillis) de Mandeville, which name descended from the van de Rade family, sailed for New Netherland.

The de Mandevilles remained a professional family in the Netherlands. Of especial interest is Dr. Bernardus de Mandeville (a great-grandson of Dr. Michael) who settled in England and was the author of The Fable of the Bees or Private Vices, Publick Benefits of which a new edition, copiously annotated by F. B. Kaye, was published in 1924.

The de Mandeville family was armigerous. A seal of "Michaell Mandeville" (the grandfather of the American settler) schepen of Nymegen, on a document dated Nov. 8, 1632, shows a winged stag rampant (contourné). In a previous article (Neeff-Nevius) I have mentioned the existence of a roll-of-arms of the Gelderland-Overyssel Student Society. In the Leiden volume Emanuel de Mandeville (the uncle of the American settler) had his arms entered in abt. 1627 when a student there. The blazon is: Or a winged stag rampant Proper with antlers Or. Crest, a demi-eagle displayed Argent.

[1] At the baptism of Dr. Michael's youngest son and namesake, in 1622, there stood sponsor Bernard de Mandevill. This is probably Bernardus Mandewijl, a minister in Friesland at Goenga, Gauw and Offingawier. He died at Goenga Oct. 3, 1649 after having served the ministry for 40 years, according to an inscription on his gravestone in the graveyard there. In a window of the church at Offingawier there is mentioned that he received in 1601 the degree of Juris Utriusque Doctor.

Gualtherus de Mandeville when a student at Leiden in 1656 joined the same Society and had his arms also entered. They are practically the same as those of Emanuel with the exception that the tincture of the stag is Gules and that it has a branch with green leaves in its mouth.

I have followed Emanuel's arms in the illustration.

That the above described arms were used by the progenitor of the family in America follows from the information contained in the article regarding the de Mandeville family, RECORD 1907:286:

de Mandeville

"The seal (on Gillis de Mandeville's Will, dated 15 Sept. 1696) is an elaborate and costly cutting. The shield is charged with an animal which, under a powerful magnifying glass resembles a horse rampant. A plumed helmet surmounts the shield, the plumes forming the mantling on either side. There is no crest."

There was in Holland also another de Mandeville family, at least they bore different arms, namely: Argent a fess Gules, in dexter chief a crescent Gules (Alberdinck Thym, Patriciaat van Amsterdam). These arms were borne by Robbert Willemsz de Mandeville from Middleburg who settled at Amsterdam where he received the burgherright June 18, 1649. He was besides bierbeschoyer, inspector of the tappers of Amsterdam, a well-known painter (Bredius, Kuenstler Inventare). He married Clara Roodenburg, daughter of Horatius Roodenburgh, bailiff of Schoonhoven and grand-daughter of Dirck Roodenburg a poet (Oud Holland, 1895:65).

In Amsterdam settled also Emanuel de Mandeville from Middleburg, born about 1609. He was a merchant at Amsterdam and married there in the Walloon church 1st 1634 Elisabeth Beth and 2nd in 1645 Maria Kinselant. The fact that the name Emanuel occurs in both the Middleburg-Amsterdam and the Nymegen families may indicate relationship, although they bore apparently different arms.

DE GROOT

In Colonial Families of America, V:317 ff. appeared a well-authenticated article on the pre-American ancestry of Staes Jansz de Groot who arrived here in 1663 on the Bontekoe (The Spotted Cow). He was a native of Tricht, a village in the province of Gelderland, Netherlands.

Opp. page 318 are shown what are supposed to be the arms of the family, with a curious "explanation"! of these on p. 317.[1]

[1] Similar "explanations" are found here and there in genealogical and heraldic publications. One of the most ridiculous examples is that contained in the History of the Cornelius Family in America, Grand Rapids, Michigan, 1926.

It is such a heraldic curiosity that it bears repeating here.

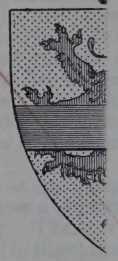
The Cornelius arms are: Ermine a chevron Sable between three balls Gules. Crest: on a wreath a dexter hand Proper issuing from a cloud, sinister, holding a cross patée fitchy. These arms are "explained" in the following manner:

"The crest consists of a hand extended from a cloud of smoke and grasping a battle ax.

A mistake has been made in these arms which have apparent from Rietstap's Armorial Général.

An uncle of the American settler, Cornelis de Groot, was "Tricht ende Buurmalsum", a position also held by Quirijn de G father, and in which Cornelis was in turn succeeded by his son Pi

In the Archives of the Geldersche Leenkamer, the Court of L Gelderland, has been preserved a document, dated Nov. 13, 1 Pieter de Groot affixed his seal in his capacity of a schepen. The inscription "Cornelis de Groot" and belonged undoubtedly to I The arms on the seal show: Or a lion rampant Gules (crowned Or Crest a demi-lion Gules. (The tinctures of the arms in Rietst tioned later, have been followed.)



Cornelis de Groot used the same arms, when a schepen of "Tricht ende Buurmalsum", on a document dated May 8, 1635. These same arms were used by Hendrick de Groot on Jan. 19, 1544 schepen of Zalt Bommel; by presumably the same Hendrick de Groot on Sept. 29, 1565 schepen of Zalt Bommel and Hendrick de Groot in 1560 rentmeester, manager of an estate. Also by Ghijsbrecht de Groot, Apr. 27, 1520 tenant-in-tenure of a parcel of land in Gelderland and finally in 1681 by Cornelis de Groot schepen of Culemborg.

There is, therefore, ample evidence in regard to these arms from the authentic records. These arms are also mentioned in the Dutch genealogical magazine Wapenheraut 1918, No. 22:449 and the arms shown in the magazine De Navorscher, 57 (1922):87 presumably refer also to this family.

Another family, or possibly another branch of the same family, was also living at Zalt-Bommel where they belonged, as did the family of the American settler, to the magistracy of the city. Instead of a fess they bore two bars, which in final analysis may very well have been a differencing. It is these arms which ar Rietstap's Armorial Général and copied therefrom in Coloni America. But the family to which the American settler belonge with the fess as shown herewith. (I have followed the tinctu Rietstap.)

A few additional data about the family of the American se interest. In the church at Tricht has been preserved the gra and surrounded by a scroll of leaves (meant is the mantling) and surmount helmet with closed visor. This all rests on a scroll foundation containing sans Peur which translated means Truth without Fear. The square refers t balls signify the practice of medicine. The shield surmounted by the helme refers to military service and also indicates the time of the crusaders. Th name Cornelius (a scroll with the name Cornelius, under the arms, drape draped over the crusader's sword. The shield also has the ermine indicat royalty."

To serious students of heraldry this particular kind of explanation is absurd and has no foundation of fact. Arms can only be explained when they that is alluding to the name of the bearer. Or when they are descriptive of an event in the life of him to whom the arms were granted or who assumed t refer to an occupation, to the name of a house in which the family lived or the from. But apart from these and similar obvious allusions others must be belong to a school of heraldry which has long since been discredited.

Isaac Fowler and his son Isaac, Jr., signed the Pledge of Allegiance to the Colonies at Newburgh in 1775.[e] In 1785 Isaac Fowler and his son Isaac Fowler, Jr., were assessed at Newburgh.[f] His son was still called Isaac Fowler, Jr., in 1787 when he quitclaimed a tract of land to Samuel Merritt.[g] The date of Isaac Fowler's death has not been ascertained. He was not listed as a householder on the Census of 1790.

AN ARMORY OF AMERICAN FAMILIES OF DUTCH DESCENT

CONTRIBUTED BY WILLIAM J. HOFFMAN, F.G.B.S.

(DE) MANDEVILLE

Gillis Jansz (de) Mandeville and his wife Elsge Hendricks, with 4 children, came to America in 1659, sailing from Holland Feb. 12, on the Faith (HSYB 1902).

On the passenger list Gillis Jansz is indicated as coming "from Garder", that is from Garderen a village in the N. W. corner of the province of Gelderland, Netherlands. In RECORD 38 (1907):284 there has been published a genealogy of the de Mandeville family. In this article a few data are given concerning his presumed relatives in the Netherlands and it is there stated that Gillis was possibly a son of Jan Jansz de Mandeville a candidate minister at Kootwijck near Voorthuysen, villages in the immediate neighborhood of Garderen. Gillis was indeed a son of the Rev. Johan (Jan) de Mandeville whose full name was, however, not Jan Jansz but Jan Michaelsz de Mandeville.

At the end of the 16th century there lived at Nymegen, a city in the province of Gelderland, Dr. Med. Michael Jansz de Mandeville. It is unknown from where he had settled there,[1] but his family came presumably originally from France, for Mandeville is the name of two villages in Normandy, one in the Departement of Eure, the other in Calvados.

In 1601 Dr. Michael was appointed "ordinaris medicus" and rector or principal, of the Latin School at Nymegen.[1] Through his supervision he improved the practice of medicine there and this, and his own practice, demanded so much of his time that in 1607 the magistracy asked him to resign as principal of the Latin School in order to devote his entire time to medicine. In 1617 he and seven of his children received the burgherright of Nymegen and the next year he was honored by being appointed a schepen and a member of the City Council of the city of his adoption. In 1635 the plague raged at Nymegen. Ministering to the sick to the last he played a heroic part. He finally was stricken himself and succumbed to the dreaded disease. A grateful city honored his memory by providing a college education for his children and by appointing first his son Dr. Emanuel and afterwards the latter's son Dr. Gualtherus to the position of city-physician.

Dr. Michael de Mandeville had married Maria van de Rade, a daughter of Aegidius (Gillis) van de Rade and Sara his wife.

Eleven children were born to Dr. Michael and his wife. The oldest son Jan, the father of the American settler, was born in abt. 1601. On March 3, 1623 he entered Leiden University. His name was entered as "Joannis Mandewijl, Nymegen, 22 (years old), T(heology). Four years later he was joined there by his younger brother Emanuel who took the course of medicine. It is possible that Johan (Jan) de Mandeville had already followed courses in theology elsewhere (possibly at the Collegiate Theological School at Leiden, not connected with the University). It was rather old to start one's university career at the age of 22 in those olden days, and in 1624 he received already permission to lecture on the Hebrew language, in the place of professor l'Empereur, at the Atheneum at Harderwijk, Gelderland.[2]

In 1628 he was appointed a proponent or candidate minister at the village of Kootwijk, not far from Harderwijk and two years later he became a minister in the neighboring village at Garderen where he died in 1657. There is a tombstone with a rather illegible inscription of a Mandeville burial in the church at Garderen which may refer to the Rev. Johannes de Mandeville.

In 1640 he had written a Latin Carmen which he had dedicated to the Estates of Gelderland for which this august body voted him a suitable reward.

The name of Rev. Johan's wife has not as yet been found. Two years after his death his son Gillis, named probably for his uncle Aegidius (Gillis) de Mandeville, which name descended from the van de Rade family, sailed for New Netherland.

The de Mandevilles remained a professional family in the Netherlands. Of especial interest is Dr. Bernardus de Mandeville (a great-grandson of Dr. Michael) who settled in England and was the author of The Fable of the Bees or Private Vices, Publick Benefits of which a new edition, copiously annotated by F. B. Kaye, was published in 1924.

The de Mandeville family was armigerous. A seal of "Michaell Mandeville" (the grandfather of the American settler) schepen of Nymegen, on a document dated Nov. 8, 1632, shows a winged stag rampant (contourné). In a previous article (Neeff-Nevius) I have mentioned the existence of a roll-of-arms

Goenga, Gauw and Offingawier. He died at Goenga Oct. 3, 1649 after having served the ministry for 40 years, according to an inscription on his gravestone in the graveyard there. In a window of the church at Offingawier there is mentioned that he received in 1601 the degree of Juris Utriusque Doctor.

Douglas,

According to Chamberlain and Clarenbach, page 37 of their book, Mary Davol was the daughter of John, whose father was Benjamin, whose father was Jonathan whose father was William. This is what I have in my data base, the Audley information came from another source as I have other Audley/Mosher connections.

Sorry about the empty email I just sent. Here's what I intended to write.

My line goes to Thomas Mosher (1698-1776) who married Hanna Davol(!), Richmond, RI., son of Nicholas who married Elizabeth Audley, whose father Hugh (1633-1713) was married Rebecca Maxson. Perhaps Thomas was a younger brother or cousin of Hugh b 1690. Perhaps Sarah and Hanna were sisters (?).

Sorry about the empty email I just sent. Here's what I intended to write.

My line goes to Thomas Moeller (1658-1778) who married Marina Daniel(). Richmond, RI, son of Nicholas who married Elizabeth Audley, whose father Hugh (1633-1713) was married Rebecca Maxson. Perhaps Thomas was a younger brother or cousin of Hugh b 1680. Perhaps Sarah and Hanna were sisters (?)

THE DE MANDEVILLE FAMILY

LINEAGE OF TRYNTJE MANDEVILLE VANDERVEER WIFE OF CORNELIS JANSZ VAN DER VEER and GREAT-GRANDMOTHER OF ELIZABETH POLHEMUS HENDRICKSON

Based on The Record, Vol. 38, No. 4, pp. 284-286 - Article by Lucy Dubois Akerly; Vo. 69, No. 3, pp. 222-224 - Article by William J. Hoffman

By permission of The New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, 122 East 58th St., New York, New York 10022

1. DR. MICHAEL JANSZ de MANDEVILLE, lived at the end of the 16th century at Nymegen, a city in the province of Gelderland, Netherland. It is unknown from where he had settled there,but his family came presumably originally from France, for Mandeville is the name of two villages in Normandy.

In 1601 Dr. Michael was appointed "ordinaris medicus" and rector or principal, of the Latin School at Nymegen. Through his supervision he improved the practice of medicine there and this, and his own practice, demanded so much of his time that in 1607the magistracy asked him to resign as principal of the Latin School in order to devote his entire time to medicine. In 1617 he and seven of his children received the burgherright of Nymegen and the next year he was honored by being appointed a schepen and a member of the City Council of the city of his adoption. In 1635 the plague raged at Nymegen. Ministering to the sick to the last he played a heroic part. He finally was stricken himself and succumbed to the dreaded disease. A grateful city honored his memory by providing a college education for his children and by appointing first his son Dr. Emanuel and afterwards the latter's son Dr. Gualtherus to the position city-physician.

Dr. Michael de Mandeville had married Maria van de Rade, a daughter of Aegidius (Gillis) van de Rade and Sara his wife.

Eleven children were born to Dr. Michael and his wife. The oldest son Jan, the father of the American settler, was born in about 1601.

2. JOHAN (JAN) de MANDEVILLE was born about 1601. On March 3, 1623 he entered Leiden University. His name was entered as "Joannis Mandewijl, Nymegen, 22 (years old). T(heology)." Four years later he was joined there by his younger brother Emanuel who took the course of medicine. It is possible that Johan (Jan) de Mandeville had already followed courses in theology elsewhere (possibly at the Collegiate Theological School at Leiden, not connected with the University). It was rather old to start one's university career at the age of 22 in those olden days, and in 1624 he received already permission to lecture on the Hebrew Language, in the place of professor l'Empereur, at the Atheneum at Harderwijk, Gelderland.

In 1628 he was appointed a candidate minister at the village of Kootwijk, not far from Harderwijk and two years later he became a minister in the neighboring village at Garderen where he died in 1657. There is a tombstone with a rather illegible inscription of a Mandeville burial in the church at Garderen which may refer to the Rev. Johannes de Mandeville.

The name of Rev. Johan's wife has not as yet been found. Two years after his death his son Gillis, named probably for his uncle Aegidius (Gillis) de Mandeville, which name descended from the van de Rade family, sailed for New Netherland.

3. GILLIS (YELLIS) JANSEN de MANDEVILLE, came to America in the de Trouw (Faith), 12 Feb. 1659, with his "wife and four children of 1¼,5,6, and 9 years." The children's names are not given and Yellis is called Gilles Jansen Van Garder. (Garderen in the Veluwe, Guelderland, Holland.) He paid f50 for the passage of his wife and himself, and f10 for each child; or 90 guilders in all.

Riker states that Yellis de Mandeville bought a farm at Flatbush (probably the land in the jurisdiction of Hempstead, valued above all his other possessions, devised by will to his son Hendrick), and received afterwards a grant of 30 acres at Greenwich, N. Y., laid out 5 Dec. 1679; patented 30 Dec., 1680.

No lands granted or sold to Yellis de Mandeville are recorded in the Flatbush Records,but many Dutch Patents and Indian Deeds were destroyed or sent to England after 1664.

No New Amsterdam Records mention him, but we find Gilles Janszen Mandiviel and his wifeElsje Hendricx as members of the New York Dutch Church, 31 May, 1677, and Jillis, Elsje and Grietie Mandeviel living above the ancient pond Kalch-hock in 1686. The Mandeville estate extended from below 14th street to 21st street, though not parallel to either, and from the Hudson River to Warren Road. This part of Manhattan Island was known as Greenwich,Sappokaniken, Shappanaconk, or New Nordwyck.

Yellis and his wife were sponsors at a baptism, 16 March 1701, and his will proved 22 May, following , by his widow. This will, dated 15 Sept. 1696,signed Yeelise de Mandville, mentions all his children:

i. Hendrick
+4 ii. Tryntje, b. ca. 1652-3
iii. David
iv. Grietie

4. TRYNTJE (CATHERINE) MANDEVILLE, born in Holland about 1652-3, married Cornelis Janses Vanderveer.

The de Mandeville family was armigerous. "The seal (on Gillis de Mandeville's Will, dated 15 Sept. 1696) is an elaborate and costly cutting. The shield is charged with an animal which, under a powerful magnifying glass resembles a horse rampant. A Plumed helmet surmounts the shield, the plumes forming the mantling on either side. There is no crest."

For documentation see The Record, Vol. 38, No. 4, and Vol. 69, No. 3, as noted at the beginning of this lineage. Anyone interested in further details, please refer to same.

YELLIS JANSEN DE MANDEVILLE OF GARDEREN, HOLLAND, AND GREENWICH VILLAGE ON MANHATTAN ISLAND, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

Contributed by Lucy Dubois Akerly.

1. Yellis[1] Jansen de Mandeville,* the founder of the family in this country is traced as early as 1657 at Voorthuizen, a village near Garderen in Holland. His father's name was Jan, perhaps that Jan Jansen who in 1627 was Candidate at the Reformed Church at Koolwyck, also near Garderen, and died at the latter place in 1657.

The Garderen Marriage and Baptismal Registers before 1664, are unfortunately lost, but there is a tombstone in the ancient

* In English Giles, variously spelled Yellis, Gellis, Iilles or Jillis, in the public records and elsewhere.

The name de Mandeville, also written Magnavilla, Magnavil, Mannueile, Mauneville, signifying of, or from the great town, originated in Normandy, and is one of considerable antiquity. Mandeviel is a frequent appellation in the Low Countries, and this spelling is usual in the early Dutch Records in America.

church there, mostly unintelligible, to a younger son of the de Mandeville family who died 14 Oct., 165–.

Yellis de Mandeville came to America in the de Trouw (Faith), 12 Feb., 1659, with his "wife and four children of 1¼, 5, 6 and 9 years." The children's names are not given, and Yellis is called Gilles Jansen Van Garder. (Garderen in the Veluwe, Guelderland, Holland.)

He paid f50 for the passage of his wife and himself, and f10 for each child; or 90 guilders in all.*

The name of Gillis de Mandeivile on the original list of the vessel Moesman, in April, 1659, indicates that he was not a passenger, but only a debtor to the Dutch West India Company, for a small sum advanced by them.†

Yellis probably lived for a time somewhere on Long Island. Two of his children were from New Amersfoort (Flatlands). He was perhaps that Gilles Jansen rated there in Sept., 1676, for 10 morgens of land, etc.‡

Riker states that Yellis de Mandeville bought a farm at Flatbush (probably the land in the jurisdiction of Hempstead, valued above all his other possessions, devised by will to his son Hendrick), and received afterwards a grant of 30 acres at Greenwich, N. Y., laid out 5 Dec., 1679; patented 30 Dec., 1680.

No lands granted or sold to Yellis de Mandeville are recorded in the Flatbush Records, but many Dutch Patents and Indian Deeds were destroyed or sent to England after 1664.

No New Amsterdam Records mention him, but we find Gilles Janszen Mandiviel and his wife Elsje Hendricx as members of the New York Dutch Church, 31 May, 1677, and Jillis, Elsje and Grietie Mandeviel living above the ancient pond Kalch-hock in 1686.§

The Mandeville estate extended from below 14th street to 21st street, though not parallel to either, and from the Hudson River to Warren Road. This part of Manhattan Island was known as Greenwich, Sappokaniken, Shappanaconk, or New Nordwyck.

Yellis sold to David Mandeville, doubtless his son, on 14 May, 1700, 53 morgens of land (126 acres), including the Greenwich bowery then occupied by the said David Mandeville, and apparently meadows on the west side of the Hudson River. The land was particularly described in a grant from Governor Nicholls, and in a deed of Johannes Vanbroughen and Jacob Veranger to Jacob Vandegrift; the latter sold the same to Yellis Mandeville, 2 June, 1679.‖

Yellis and his wife were sponsors at a baptism, 16 March, 1701, and his will was proved 22 May, following, by his widow.

This will, dated 15 Sept., 1696, signed Yeelise de Mandville, mentions all his children, eldest son Hendrick, son David, daus.

Tryntje, now wife of Cornelis Jansen de Seenn; Aeltie, now wife of Lowren Johnsen; Gerritie, now wife of Pieter Meet; Griettie, now wife of John Meet. Elsie, his wife, to be sole executrix, after her death their sons Hendrick and David. The original will may befound in the Surrogate's Office in New York City. The signature only is in Mr. Mandeville's handwriting, and bears an unidentified heraldic seal.*

The names of Yellis's children as transcribed in Liber II, 108, N. Y. Wills, contain several mistakes, repeated in the published Wills of the N. Y. Historical Society, and elsewhere. Issue:

2 i. Hendrick,[2] prob. b. in Guilderland, Holland, about 1650; see beyond.

3 ii. David, prob. b. in American; see beyond.

iii. Tryntje (Catherine), prob. b. in Holland, about 1652–3, doubtless the eldest daughter. Her husband, from Alkmar, Holland, called Cornelis Jansen de Seenn by her father, was doubtless Cornelis Jansse Seeu, who took the Oath of Allegiance at Flatbush, Sept., 1687, having been here 27 years. In the Otter in which he crossed the Atlantic, Feb., 1659, and at the baptisms of some of his children, he figures as Cornelis Jansen Van der Veer, or from the ferry. He was landowner, magistrate and patentee at Flatbush. Children: Cornelis;[3] Neeltje, m. 13 Aug., 1658, Daniel Polhemus; Dominicus, bap. 16 Nov., 1679; Jan; Maria, bap. 30 July, 1682; Hendrickje, bap. 27 Aug., 1684; Jacoba, bap. 9 April, 1686; and perh. Jacobus and Michael.†

iv. Aeltje (Elsie), m. Laurens Jansen de Camp. They were members of the Dutch Church in New Utrecht in 1677, and after 1687 removed to Staten Island, N. Y. For their children: Joannes, bap. 2 April, 1677, sponsors Joannes Gillisz and Tryntje Gilles; Johannes; Styntje; Hendrick; Aegidius; Werachie, and Aeltje, see Onderdonck's Mss. L. I. Dutch Records, and Morrison's De Camp Genealogy.

v. Gerritie (Gertrude). The marriage banns of Gerritie Gillis, maiden of Nordwyck (Greenwich, N. Y.), and Wiert Eppens, bachelor, from Ester Buzum, were published in the New York Dutch Church, 15 Sept., 1681, and they were married 7 Oct., the same year, at Bergen, N. J. Gerritie and her husband generally known as Wiert Epke Banta, were members of the Hackensack Dutch Church. Banta, b. at Minnertsga, Holland, in May, 1658; d. before 3 July, 1689, when his relict m. Pieter Jansen Meet.‡

The latter was on the Bushwick Assessment Roll, 8 July, 1683, and still alive 15 Sept., 1696.

The marriage of his widow to Increase Power, b. near Boston, was registered at Hackensack, 24 July, 1699, where he was a Church member in 1715.

For Gerritie's Banta children, Wiert, Henricus, Elsje and Jacob, see A Friesland Family, Banta.

Increase and Gerritie Power had: Tryntje and Sara, bap. 18 March, 1700; Jacob, bap. 25 May, 1702; David, bap. 1 April, 1703; Isaac, bap. 1 Feb., 1707. These baptisms were all recorded at Hackensack save Jacob's. He was baptized in the New York Dutch Church, where most of the baptisms mentioned in this sketch will be found.

vi. Grietie (Margaret), of New Amersfoort, m. 11 May, 1687, in New York, where both were then residing, Jan Pieterse Meet, from Old Amersfoort, in the in the Diocese of Utrecht. Jan Meet (Meeck, Mead), b. in Holland about 1660, was son of Pieter Jansen Meet, whose second wife was Gerritie Mandeville (ante). Jan sold a lot in Flatbush in Feb., 1692–3, and was one of the Pacquenac, N. J., Patentees in 1695.* In 1703 he was apparently of New York with one male, one female and six children in his family. Issue: Pieter, bap. 20 Oct., 1689; Johannes, bap. 25 March, 1691; Jacob, bap. 18 Jan., 1693; Christina, bap. 27 Oct., 1695; Elsje, bap. 12 July or Aug., 1696, at Hackensack; Maria, bap. 31 May, 1700; Gilles, bap. 14 Oct., 1702.

vii. Jan (prob.), Bergen, the De Camp Genealogy, and Munsell's American Ancestry, all attribute a son Jan to Yellis de Mandeville, some say b. at 1655, and of Westchester Co.; evidence neither quoted nor found. Probably Joannes Mandeville, sponsor at the baptism of Joannes de Camp in 1677; Johannes Mandeviel, witness at the baptism of Henricus Banta (ante), and Jan above were indentical. There are numerous entries relative to Jan Gilles in the early Dutch Records, but no others with the surname Mandeville attached.

viii. William, prob. son of Yellis, is said to have lived on the paternal estate at Shappanaconk. William Mandeviel, merchant of New York, d. at Seatalcott, in the North Riding of Yorkshire on Long Island, where the principal part of his property was situated. Letters were issued to his widow, Elizabeth, 30 Oct., 1679.†

* Bergen's Early Settlers of Kings Co., N. Y.

† N. Y. Wills.

If William were son of Yellis, he was prob. b. in Holland, having reached man's estate in 1679, and was perhaps ae. 1¼ in April, 1659 (ante).

2. HENDRICK[2] DE MANDEVILLE (Yellis[1]), of New Nordwyck and Hempstead, N. Y., and Pacquenac, N. J., prob. b. in Holland about 1650; d. at Pacquenac, now Mountain View, about 1712. His marriage entry reads: "Hendrick Jilliszen de Mandeviel, j. m., Uÿt Gelderl[t]. & Annetje Pieterse Scholl, j. d., woonende d' Eerste op Noortwyck, & twede op Hempstede, ingeshreven 6 Iuni, 1680, getrouwt den 18 Iul. op N. Amersfoort."*

The Dutch Church Records of Flatbush, L. I., where the above marriage was also recorded give Hendrick's then residence as New Nordwyck, showing that Nordwyck, in connection with the Mandevilles, whether accompanied by the word new, or not, meant Greenwich, N. Y., or adjacent parts.

Annetje Scholl, b. in Hempstead, bap. in New Amsterdam, 16 July, 1662, was daughter of Pieter Jansen Scholl (Scholt, Schal), from the Hague, Holland, who was sometime of Byooklyn and Flatbush, N. Y., and on the Hempstead Census in 1673. Her mother was Margaritje Provoost.

Adam Mott, Jr., sold to Hendrick Mandefell 50 acres in the south woods at Hempstead, 18 March, 1684, and Peter Johnson Scoll, the 14th of the next June gave 50 adjoining acres to his beloved son-in-law Hendrick Mandefell.† No further disposition of this land is to be found in the printed Town Records of Hempstead.

Hendrick Mandevele witnessed a deed of Robert Bedell, Jr.'s, at Hempstead, 7 April, 1687.

On 11 May, 1695, having purchased the Indian title to the same, Major Anthony Brockholst and Capt. Arent Schuyler in behalf of themselves and their associates, Samuel Bayard, George Ryerson, John Mead (Jan Meet, ante), Samuel Berrie, David and Hendrick Mandeville, obtained a patent for 5,500 acres of land from the East Jersey proprietors at Pacquenac, or Pompton Plains, N. J.‡

Hendrick de Mandeville may have removed thither about 1700, but in 1703, Hendrick Gillise, perhaps Mandeville, living in New York, had one male, one female and three children in his family.

Hendrick Mandeviel, wid[r]., and Elizabeth Jans, maiden, from New Albany (near Camden, N. J.), both living in New Amsterdam were m. there 21 April, 1699. She is also called Herris, Harris and Berry.

Children of Hendrick and Elizabeth Mandeville:

v. Johannes, b. it is said about 1700; m. 9 Nov., 1725–6, Elizabeth Bruin of Second River (Belleville, N. J.).
vi. Hendrick, of Pompton Plains, N. J., bap. 24 May, 1704, in New York; d. 2 Sept., 1790; m. in 1726, Elizabeth Vreeland, b. in 1703; d. 17 July, 1781.
vii. Gilles, of Pompton Plains, b. 25 Jan., 1708; d. 8 Aug., 1776; m. 8 June, 1729, Leah Bruin, or Brown, of Second River, b. 18 June, 1709; d. 1 July, 1799.

For the descendants of Johannes, Hendrick and Gilles Mandeville, above, see Munsell's American Ancestry.

3. David[2] Mandeville (Yellis[1]), of New Amersfoort and New York City, was prob. b. on Long Island, and the youngest of the family. His Greenwich and Pompton land purchases have already been noted.

David Mandeville, bachelor, from New Amersfoort, m. 19 July, 1700, in New York, Marytie Van Hoesen (Van Hoese, Van House, Van Goese), maiden from Albany, the former living in New York, the latter in New Albany.

Marytje was doubtless a descendant, or kinswoman, of Jan Frans Van Hoesen, one of the earliest patentees of Claverack, N. Y., which would account for her grandsons going to reside there about 1778.

Catherine Van Huse of New York, deeded three or four English acres at Bassen Bowery (Greenwich, N. Y.), to her daughter Marytie Mandeville, 16 Jan., 1724, David Mandeville being then alive. Deed recorded for Yellis Mandeville, 5 Oct., 1762.†

American Ancestry, following some Mandeville Mss., confounds two David Mandevilles. One was of Weehauken, it is said, and kept the ferry. The same person did not marry successively Marytie Van Hoesen and Jannetie Wortendyk, or

In the List of the N. Y. Volunteer Companies, 1738, are the names of John and Jelyes Mandevele.
iv. David, bap. 6 April, 1709; nothing further known.
v. Casparus, bap. 27 July, 1712; nothing further known.
vi. Catherine, bap. 9 Oct., 1715; d. before 1744; 2d wife of William Waldron, m. 6 Oct., 1734; b. 10 Feb., 1708; d. 5 Dec., 1764. Issue: Aggie; David; Maria; Maria, No. 2, and Samuel.

4. David[4] Mandeville (Hendrick,[3] Yellis[1]), bachelor, from Hempstead, living at Pegquenck, N. J., and Jannetje Jacobs Woertendyk, maiden from the Bowery, N. Y., were m. 10 June, 1709.*

American Ancestry states that Hendrick Mandeville had a son David, but omits the proof, but as Hendrick, son of the first Yellis de Mandeville was of Hempstead, L. I., and Pegquenck, N. J., and David above, of the same localities, and Antie Hendrickse Mandeville of Pegquenck, was born in Hempstead, we conclude that David was son of Hendrick. Further David Mandeville, Sr., is not known to have been of Hempstead, and had a son David, bap. in 1709 (ante), and would hardly have called a second son David, had he already one of the name living.

Jeannetie Jacobs, bap. in New York, 16 March, 1687, was daughter of Jacob Cornelissen Stille and his second wife, Marytie Hendrix. Her grandfather, Cornelis Jacobsen Stille, or Van Vreelandt, was in New Amsterdam as early as 1631, and resided at the head of what is now Chatham Square. His descendants assumed the names of Woertendyk and Somerendyk.† Issue:

Rachel was bap. 20 Feb., 1703; was sponsor for her grandson, Jelis M. The latter and Daniel Birdsall are called "cousins" (nephews?), in the will of Cornelius Mandeville. The said Daniel Birdsall m. 20 Dec., 1757, Hannah, prob. dau. of Jacob Mandeville, before mentioned, and b. 7 Nov., 1737. She was not the dau. of Cornelius Mandeville, as his child, Hannah, was neither 18, nor m. at the date of his will in 1768.

7. CORNELIUS[4] MANDEVILLE (David,[3] Hendrick,[2] Yellis[1]), of Cortlandt Manor, or Peekskill, N. Y., bap. 11 May, 1720; went from Garrison, Putnam Co. (then Dutchess), to Cortlandt Manor, where he bought 64 acres of Schurman Travis, 2 Dec., 1752, and 99 acres on 4 May, 1763, of Wm. Horton. Cornelius Mandeville sold before 2 March, 1763, a lot to David Pennoyer, on the road to Travis Landing, and another lot to David Bernard before 3 Aug., 1764. His holdings were in the heart of Peekskill.

The will of Cornelius Mandeville dated 24 March, 1768, proved 30 May, the same year, names wife Rachel, children David, John, Nathan, James, Martha, Anne and Hannah Mandeville. Wife Rachel and cousins Joshua Nelson and Daniel Birdsall executors.†

Rachel Horton, his wife, according to the statement of her granddaughter, Johanna Odell, came from Long Island. Mr. George W. Cocks of Glen Cove, L. I., believes Rachel to have been the dau. of Joseph and Rachel (Coles) Horton. The said Joseph, doubtless a descendant of Barnabas Horton of Southold, L. I., was of North Castle, Westchester Co., N. Y., in 1725, and of Oyster Bay, L. I., in 1730.

Rachel (Coles) Horton was dau. of Nathan Coles of Musketa Cove, whose will mentions his grandson, Lazarus Horton. Note that one of the sons of Cornelius Mandeville was called Nathan.

9. JURIAN[4] MANDEVILLE (Yellis,[3] David,[2] Yellis[1]), bap. 17 Aug., 1726; called Gerard in his marriage entry 14 March, 1749, to Dorothea Vander Hoef, and elsewhere Jurgen. The English equivalent of Jurian and Jurgen is George, nevertheless he is apparently the son Jeremiah of his father's will, perhaps from the Dutch nickname Jurrie. He is called Jeremiah in various deeds conveying his father's estate. Issue:

i. David,[5] bap. 11 Oct., 1749.

v. Rachel, bap. 20 Feb., 1760.
vi. Matthews, bap. 11 April, 1762, of Claverack.

Johannes, Yellis, Lea and Matthew were alive in 1778, and shared in their grandfather's estate. An interesting account of this land will be found in the Mail and Express, 20 Feb., and 9 March, 1897.

The compiler desires to thank all those who furnished data for this brief sketch, particularly Mr. Rufus King, Mrs. Roe, Miss E. J. Hudson, Messrs. Theo. M. Banta, Franklin Couch and Hopper S. Mott.

THE MANDEVILLE FAMILY.

Line of descent of Henry Addison Mandeville, M. D.

The family of Mandevilles appear in the English records at a very early date. The Mandevilles came originally from France and had, no doubt, a common origin with the English branch. Giles Jansen de Mandeville, the American ancestor of the family, was born in France and, tradition says, fled from Normandy to Holland; came to America in 1647 in company with Gov. Stuyvesant, and settled as a farmer on Manhattan Island, north of New Amsterdam, near what is now the foot of Twelfth Street, New York, on the North River, then called Shappanaconck, his farm extending from Fourteenth to Twenty-first streets, and from the river to the Warren Road. His dwelling was standing in 1890. He married, in the Province of Guilderland, Holland, Elsje Hendricks, and had seven children, of whom Hendrick was the eldest.

Hendrick Mandeville, eldest child of Giles Jansen and Elsje (Hendricks) Mandeville, was born in Guilderland, Holland, about 1646. He resided first at Flatbush, L. I. He bought lands at Pompton Plains and Pacquenac (now Mountain View), N. J., about 1701. He resided in a stone dwelling at Pacquenac. He married, first, Annetje Pieterse Scholl, of Hempstead; he married, second, Elizabeth Jansen Berry, of New Albany and New York, and had six children, among whom was Giles.

Giles Mandeville, youngest child of Hendrick Mandeville, was born at Pompton Plains, January 25, 1708. He married, about 1731, Leah Bruin or Brown, of Second River, and had eight children, among whom was Anthony.

Anthony Mandeville was born March 7, 1742, at Pompton Plains. He was a man of wealth and some prominence. He married, first, Williampe Van Houten; second, Margaret Jones; third, Charity Van Devort. He had six children, among whom was Giles A.

Giles A. Mandeville, son of Anthony Mandeville, was born May, 1777, at Pompton Plains. He was a farmer and resided in the brick house in the central part of the Plains. He married, September 20, 1798, Elizabeth Doremus, and had ten children, among whom was Thomas.

Thomas Mandeville, son of Giles A. and Elizabeth (Doremus) Mandeville, was born at Pompton Plains, February 13, 1803. He married Hester Secor, of New York City, and had ten children, the eldest of whom was Giles Henry.

Rev. Giles Henry Mandeville, D. D., son of Thomas and Hestor (Secor) Mandeville, was born in New York City, December 12, 1725. He returned with his parents, in early childhood, to the place of his father's birth, in New Jersey. He attended a preparatory school at Hackensack, N. J., and was graduated at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, in 1848, and pursued the prescribed theological course of three years in the seminary of the Reformed Church in America, connected with the college, and in 1851 he was licensed to preach and ordained to the ministry, and the same year accepted a call to the Reformed Church, of Flushing, L. I. During his pastorate, which was a very successful one, he wrote a history of Flushing, a most excellent work and a valuable contribution to the history of Long Island. In 1859 he was called to the pastorate of the Reformed Church, at Newburgh, N. Y., where he labored successfully for ten years, when he accepted a call and became pastor of the Reformed Church, of Harlem. After eleven years' faithful service he resigned his charge to devote himself to the cause of education, to which he had already given much time and attention and for many years had been a member of the Board of Education of the Reformed Church. He was elected provisional president of a Michigan college established in 1866, which, owing to unwise management, had become seriously involved. Dr. Mandeville succeeded in placing the college on a firm basis after two years of arduous and incessant labor. After being relieved of the provisional presidency, he resumed his former position and devoted himself exclusively to the interests of the Board of Education. He was made Corresponding Secretary, with the direction of its affairs under his guidance. To him is committed, by virtue of his position, the task of keeping alive the interests of the denomination in its various struggling institutions in the West, as well as to hold them to the duty of providing for the support of young men who are studying for the ministry.

AN ARMORY OF AMERICAN FAMILIES OF DUTCH DESCENT

CONTRIBUTED BY WILLIAM J. HOFFMAN, F.G.B.S.

(DE) MANDEVILLE

Gillis Jansz (de) Mandeville and his wife Elsge Hendricks, with 4 children, came to America in 1659, sailing from Holland Feb. 12, on the Faith (HSYB 1902).

On the passenger list Gillis Jansz is indicated as coming "from Garder", that is from Garderen a village in the N. W. corner of the province of Gelderland, Netherlands. In RECORD 38 (1907):284 there has been published a genealogy of the de Mandeville family. In this article a few data are given concerning his presumed relatives in the Netherlands and it is there stated that Gillis was possibly a son of Jan Jansz de Mandeville a candidate minister at Kootwijck near Voorthuysen, villages in the immediate neighborhood of Garderen. Gillis was indeed a son of the Rev. Johan (Jan) de Mandeville whose full name was, however, not Jan Jansz but Jan Michaelsz de Mandeville.

At the end of the 16th century there lived at Nymegen, a city in the province of Gelderland, Dr. Med. Michael Jansz de Mandeville. It is unknown from where he had settled there,[1] but his family came presumably originally from France, for Mandeville is the name of two villages in Normandy, one in the Departement of Eure, the other in Calvados.

[1] At the baptism of Dr. Michael's youngest son and namesake, in 1622, there stood sponsor Bernard de Mandevill. This is probably Bernardus Mandewijl, a minister in Friesland at

In 1601 Dr. Michael was appointed "ordinaris medicus" and rector or principal, of the Latin School at Nymegen.[1] Through his supervision he improved the practice of medicine there and this, and his own practice, demanded so much of his time that in 1607 the magistracy asked him to resign as principal of the Latin School in order to devote his entire time to medicine. In 1617 he and seven of his children received the burgherright of Nymegen and the next year he was honored by being appointed a schepen and a member of the City Council of the city of his adoption. In 1635 the plague raged at Nymegen. Ministering to the sick to the last he played a heroic part. He finally was stricken himself and succumbed to the dreaded disease. A grateful city honored his memory by providing a college education for his children and by appointing first his son Dr. Emanuel and afterwards the latter's son Dr. Gualtherus to the position of city-physician.

Dr. Michael de Mandeville had married Maria van de Rade, a daughter of Aegidius (Gillis) van de Rade and Sara his wife.

Eleven children were born to Dr. Michael and his wife. The oldest son Jan, the father of the American settler, was born in abt. 1601. On March 3, 1623 he entered Leiden University. His name was entered as "Joannis Mandewijl, Nymegen, 22 (years old), T(heology). Four years later he was joined there by his younger brother Emanuel who took the course of medicine. It is possible that Johan (Jan) de Mandeville had already followed courses in theology elsewhere (possibly at the Collegiate Theological School at Leiden, not connected with the University). It was rather old to start one's university career at the age of 22 in those olden days, and in 1624 he received already permission to lecture on the Hebrew language, in the place of professor l'Empereur, at the Atheneum at Harderwijk, Gelderland.[2]

In 1628 he was appointed a proponent or candidate minister at the village of Kootwijk, not far from Harderwijk and two years later he became a minister in the neighboring village at Garderen where he died in 1657. There is a tombstone with a rather illegible inscription of a Mandeville burial in the church at Garderen which may refer to the Rev. Johannes de Mandeville.

In 1640 he had written a Latin Carmen which he had dedicated to the Estates of Gelderland for which this august body voted him a suitable reward.

The name of Rev. Johan's wife has not as yet been found. Two years after his death his son Gillis, named probably for his uncle Aegidius (Gillis) de Mandeville, which name descended from the van de Rade family, sailed for New Netherland.

The de Mandevilles remained a professional family in the Netherlands. Of especial interest is Dr. Bernardus de Mandeville (a great-grandson of Dr. Michael) who settled in England and was the author of The Fable of the Bees or Private Vices, Publick Benefits of which a new edition, copiously annotated by F. B. Kaye, was published in 1924.

The de Mandeville family was armigerous. A seal of "Michaell Mandeville" (the grandfather of the American settler) schepen of Nymegen, on a document dated Nov. 8, 1632, shows a winged stag rampant (contourné). In a previous article (Neeff-Nevius) I have mentioned the existence of a roll-of-arms

Goenga, Gauw and Offingawier. He died at Goenga Oct. 3, 1649 after having served the ministry for 40 years, according to an inscription on his gravestone in the graveyard there. In a window of the church at Offingawier there is mentioned that he received in 1601 the degree of Juris Utriusque Doctor.

of the Gelderland-Overyssel Student Society. In the Leiden volume Emanuel de Mandeville (the uncle of the American settler) had his arms entered in abt. 1627 when a student there. The blazon is: Or a winged stag rampant Proper with antlers Or. Crest, a demi-eagle displayed Argent.

Gualtherus de Mandeville when a student at Leiden in 1656 joined the same Society and had his arms also entered. They are practically the same as those of Emanuel with the exception that the tincture of the stag is Gules and that it has a branch with green leaves in its mouth.

I have followed Emanuel's arms in the illustration.

That the above described arms were used by the progenitor of the family in America follows from the information contained in the article regarding the de Mandeville family, RECORD 1907:286:

de Mandeville

"The seal (on Gillis de Mandeville's Will, dated 15 Sept. 1696) is an elaborate and costly cutting. The shield is charged with an animal which, under a powerful magnifying glass resembles a horse rampant. A plumed helmet surmounts the shield, the plumes forming the mantling on either side. There is no crest."

There was in Holland also another de Mandeville family, at least they bore different arms, namely: Argent a fess Gules, in dexter chief a crescent Gules (Alberdinck Thym, Patriciaat van Amsterdam). These arms were borne by Robbert Willemsz de Mandeville from Middleburg who settled at Amsterdam where he received the burgherright June 18, 1649. He was besides bierbeschoyer, inspector of the tappers of Amsterdam, a well-known painter (Bredius, Kuenstler Inventare). He married Clara Roodenburg, daughter of Horatius Roodenburgh, bailiff of Schoonhoven and grand-daughter of Dirck Roodenburg a poet (Oud Holland, 1895:65).

In Amsterdam settled also Emanuel de Mandeville from Middleburg, born about 1609. He was a merchant at Amsterdam and married there in the Walloon church 1st 1634 Elisabeth Beth and 2nd in 1645 Maria Kinselant. The fact that the name Emanuel occurs in both the Middleburg-Amsterdam and the Nymegen families may indicate relationship, although they bore apparently different arms.

DE GROOT

In Colonial Families of America, V:317 ff. appeared a well-authenticated article on the pre-American ancestry of Staes Jansz de Groot who arrived here in 1663 on the Bontekoe (The Spotted Cow). He was a native of Tricht, a village in the province of Gelderland, Netherlands.

Opp. page 318 are shown what are supposed to be the arms of the family, with a curious "explanation"! of these on p. 317.[1]

[1] Similar "explanations" are found here and there in genealogical and heraldic publications. One of the most ridiculous examples is that contained in the History of the Cornelius Family in America, Grand Rapids, Michigan, 1926.

It is such a heraldic curiosity that it bears repeating here.

The Cornelius arms are: Ermine a chevron Sable between three balls Gules. Crest: on a wreath a dexter hand Proper issuing from a cloud, sinister, holding a cross patée fitchy. These arms are "explained" in the following manner:

"The crest consists of a hand extended from a cloud of smoke and grasping a battle ax, or a Greek cross, and resting on a strand of rope (meant is the wreath). This signifies martyrdom. (NOTE: The explanations between parentheses are by me, W. J. H.) The coat-of-arms consists of a shield, on which are delineated the square (meant is the chevron) and three balls

Geoffrey de Mandeville

A Surety for the Magna Charta.

Geoffrey de Magnaville, or de Magna Villa, in Normandy, was among the companions of the Duke of Normandy when he invaded and conquered England, and obtained as his share of the spoils of conquest many valuable manors in a dozen English counties, and seated himself at Waldene. He was constituted constable of the Tower of London for life, and at his decease was succeeded by his son,

William de Mandeville. He had two children by his wife Margaret, only daughter and heiress of Eudo, dapifer, or steward, to King William,

Beatrix de Mandeville, (see below), and

Sir Geoffrey de Mandeville. In 5 Stephen, he had livery of his inheritance, and was advanced in 1139, by special charter from King Stephen, from the degree of baron by tenure to the dignity of the earldom of Essex, in order to secure his services. But the Empress Maud, by a more ample charter, allured him to her party, confirming to him whatsoever his ancestors had owned or enjoyed, particularly the constableship of the Tower of London, with the lordship of the castle under it, to strengthen and fortify at his pleasure, and bestowed upon him the hereditary sheriffalty of London and Middlesex and of Hertfordshire, and the lands and office of Eude le Dapifer, his grandfather, and numerous other valuable immunities. As soon as King Stephen heard of this he seized the earl and made him disgorge everything conferred upon him, or inherited, to regain his liberty. Wherefore, the earl and his brother-in-law, William de Saye, in revenge, raided the king's property and churches whenever they could. At last, being publicly excommunicated for his many outrages, Mandeville besieged Burwell Castle, in Kent, and was mortally wounded, 14 September, 1144.* His effigy may be seen in the New Temple, London.

This noble outlaw married Rohesia, or Rohais, daughter of Alberic, second feudal Baron Vere, of Kensington, great high chamberlain of England, 1133, and Earl of Oxford, and had Ernulf de Mandeville. Disowned.

Sir Geoffrey de Mandeville, second Earl of Essex, o. s. p. 21 October, 1169.

Sir William de Mandeville, third son, who succeeded as the third Earl of Essex; created also Earl of Albermarle, in 1180, o. s. p., 14 November, 1189, when the earldoms expired, and his lordships and estates devolved upon his aunt,

Beatrix de Mandeville, aforesaid. She married first, Lord Hugh de Talbot, from whom she was divorced, and m. secondly, Lord William de Saye, and had by him,

Geoffrey de Saye, father of the Surety for the Magna Charta, of this name,

* See Round's "Geoffrey de Mandeville".

WILLIAM DE SAYE, eldest son, who o. v. p. s. p. m., whose only child,

BEATRIX DE SAYE, heiress also of William, third Earl of Essex, married, his first wife, Geoffrey fitz Piers, or Peter, who was Baron Mandeville, jure uxoris. He was made justiciar of England by King Richard, and created, 27 May, 1199, Earl of Essex by King John, and d. 14 October, 1213. They had MAUD, wife of Lord Henry de Bohun, a Surety for the Magna Charta.

SIR WILLIAM DE MANDEVILLE, Earl of Essex.

SIR GEOFFREY DE MANDEVILLE, the Surety. In 15 John, he had livery of the lands of his inheritance, and in the same year, 1214, bearing the title of Earl of Essex, the king married him, upon the payment to him of twenty thousand marks, to Avisa, or Isabella de Meullent, daughter and co-heiress of William, Count of Meullent, and second Earl of Gloucester, which lady had first been the wife of King John himself, but was repudiated on account of consanguinity, in 1200, both being great-grandchildren of King Henry I.,—and for want of issue. Isabella of Gloucester, after the death of her second husband, was promised in marriage to Hubert de Burgh, but this union was not consummated, and she died s. p. In right of his wife, Geoffrey de Mandeville became Earl of Gloucester, and was placed in full possession of all the liberties belonging to this earldom, and the lordship of Glamorgan, in Wales. He was one of the wealthiest of the barons opposed to King John, and for adhering to them he was excommunicated. He was elected as one of the Sureties for the observance of the Magna Charta, but only lived a short time, as, in February, 1216, he was mortally wounded at a tournament in London, and was interred in the priory of the Holy Trinity, in the suburbs of the city.

Geoffrey de Mandeville, o. s. p., 23 February, 1216, and was succeeded by his brother, Sir William de Mandeville, who also espoused the cause of the barons, and maintained it even after the decease of King John, being one of those who then assisted Louis of France in the siege of Berkhamstead Castle, occupied by the King's forces. Sir William, o. s. p., 8 January, 1227, when the earldom of Essex devolved upon his sister, Maud de Bohun, Countess of Hereford, while the lands which he inherited passed to his half brother, John Fitzgeoffrey Fitzpiers, sheriff of Yorkshire, feudal lord of Berkhampsted and Kirtling manors; Lord Justice of Ireland, in 1246, whose wife was Isabel Bigod, widow of Gilbert de Lacie, and the granddaughter of Hugh, third Earl of Norfolk, the Surety.

Early Churches in town of Florida.

Montgomery Co.

"Next to Queen Anne's Chapel, so historic, the first house of worship in Warrensburgh appears to have been a log church standing near what is known as Snook's Corners.

All trace of it is now gone, In the log church the Rev. James Dampster officiated for some time; no record of his ministry can now be found,

He left a character for sterling piety, coupled with activity and no little eccentricity"

Geographical locations of residences of parties Married & Baptised by Rev. James Dempster

The places of residences named were the pioneer designations, and were not, for the most part, villages or towns. "Bush" in the early frontier days signified the wilderness or forest. The designation "bush", "borough", etc., commonly was given or added to the names of the owners or leasees of the patents, grants, or sections. Thus the 14000 acres of Sir Peter Warren's estate, comprising the central section of the present town of Florida, was generally known throughout the Province of New York as Warrensbush, Warrensburgh, Warren's County or Warrens.

Warrensborough	A hamlet or small settlement of this name is indicated on an early map of Warrensbush, as being located along the South Chuctanunda Creek, about two miles from the Mohawk River. Traces of foundations of buildings, the site of an old mill pond and dam, are located on the old Barlow and present Hartley farms.
Remsen's Bush	Also variously called Remsensborough, Ramsonsburgh, etc. A 4000 acre tract in the eastern section of Florida, owned by the Remsen and Brinkerhoff families of Albany, New York and Long Island.
Shallott's Bush	Often written Charlottsbush, Chalzborough, etc. This was located in the south east part of the town of Florida, owned by Samuel Shallott, an early settler.
Old Fort	The vicinity of old Fort Hunter.
Duanesburg	Was written and spelled in various ways :- Duanesbush, Dewainsborough, etc. Now a township in southwest Schenectady County, named after James Duane, who owned a large tract of land in this section.
Marlattsbush	Located along the Schoharie Creek in the present town of Glen, south of Jan Mabee's Patent.
Corrysbush	The name commonly given to the Corry-Clark Patent of 25,400 acres, located in the towns of Glen, Charleston and Root.
New Broadalbin	The vicinity now comprising the townships of Perth And Broadalbin, Fulton County.
Jersey Bush	A section in the southwest corner of the town of Galway, Saratoga County, a part of which is still known as "Jersey Hill".

Schaghtecough, etc.	Present Schaghticoke. The western section of northwest Washington County.
Baltown, Balton	Probably present Ballston township, Saratoga County.
Half Moon	In Saratoga County, north of Waterford
Harweek's Patent	Probably section around Hartwick, Otsego County.
Newton	In Cherry Valley section, Otsego County.
Indian Castle	Probably Indian Castle, Herkimer County, or may have been Indian Castle at mouth of the Schoharie, opposite Fort Hunter.
Little Nose	The highlands south of the Mohawk in the town of Root.
Irish Bush or Irish Settlement	Located in present town of Glen in the vicinity of the Harvey Shelp farm and was a settlement of sixteen Irish families brought over to this country by Sir William Johnson.
Connajohary	Included the present village of Canajoharie and that territory west to Fall Hill later known as Canajoharie district.
Caughuawaga	Territory in and about the present village of Fonda.
Kingsborough	Part of the present city of Gloversville.
Charlestown	Included present towns of Charleston and Glen.
Saratoga	As mentioned in this record it is evidently old Saratoga or the present village of Schuylerville.
Claverack	Located on the Hudson River below Albany.
Mohawk town	Evidently meant for Mohawk district, which at this date comprised the towns of Florida, Glen, Charleston and part of Root.
Fort Hunter	Present hamlet of Fort Hunter which has been a settlement since 1711.
Cshenectady or Dorp or Colliers	Early names for the present city of Schenectady.

8. John Watts. Lived in New York, was a brother-in-law of Sir. Peter Warren, and his attorney, Sir Peter in 1736 bought the large tract of land in Florida afterwards known as the Warrenbush patent. After his death in 1752, his large holding fell to his two daughters, wives of the Earl of Abbington and Henry Gage, and they conveyed the remaining unsold portions to John Watts. Daniel Cady, an eminent lawyer living in "Yankee Street" (Minaville) was appointed by Watts as his local attorney. Cady later purchased for himself considerable land in the Middle Block of Warrensbush, which he later sold at a profit.

9. John Watts Cady. Son of David Cady and named after John Watts He lived in Johnstown and was the father of Elizabeth, Cady Stanton.

10. Nicholas Hill. Through oversight or neglect did not have his deed recorded until Nov. 20, 1744. (Liber of Deed, Montg County Clerk's office, Vol 51 page 145.)

As already mentioned the Rev. Dempster was married before he came to America from Scotland. It seems doubtful that his wife came with him, but that she remained in the old country with their son Joel, and that she died there, as Joel did not come to America until about 1800, which was fifteen years after his father married for his second wife, Anna Newkirk, who no doubt was either the daughter of John or Garret I. Newkirk, who lived in the near neighborhood down along the Schoharie Creek. The children born to this union were:-

Nicholas

Martha, born May, 1785, who married Henry J. Phillips of Florida.

John, born 1790, died Evanston, Ill, 1865. (Rev. John became one of the most eminent preachers of the entire Methodist Episcopal Church in America.)

James, (?) A son of this name is given in the Dempster Genealogy.

Jacob Hill, born 1797.

Petreshe, born July 3, 1788. (no record to prove that she was the daughter of the Rev. James Dempster is found, but as she is buried in the Dempster burial lot with the rest of the family, it is believed she was).

one of the nearest neighbors of the Dempster's were the family of the Rev. Nicholas Hill, who lived on the adjoining farm to the north, and the families were very intimate, though differing in their religious belief. Upon the death of the various members of the Dempster family, they were buried in the Hill farm burial plot, but in 1880, the dead of both families were removed, and reinterred in Section "G" Vale Cemetery, Schenectady, N. Y. Their headstones are plain and unpretentious and contain these inscriptions:-

Grave No 82. "Rev. James Dempster. A Methodist Preacher. Born Edon, Scotland, 1740; Died 1804."

Nicholas wife 83 "Anna Newkirk, his wife, born 1763; Married May 30, 1785. Died July 6, 1810."

" " 84 "Martha Dempster, daughter of James and Anna Newkirk Dempster, Wife of Henry J. Phillips, born May 1786. Married Dec. 28, 1801; died Dec. 10, 1815."

Nicholas " 85 "Petreshe, wife of Thomas Farguson Stewart, born July 3, 1788. Married Feb. 22, 1816. Died Dec. 29, 1829."

" " 86 "Jacob Hill Dempster, son of James, born Feb. 6, 1797, died May 8, 1807."

11. There seems to be conflicting reports regarding Rev. Dempsters religious belief, and whether his church was Presbyterian or Methodist. He was educated as a Presbyterian, but upon good authority before coming to this country became a Methodist. According to the Dempster Genealogy, while in N. Y. and before he came to Warrensbush, he reverted to his original belief. From the story of this early preacher and his church is nearly finished, and not only indicated that t the Rev. James Dempster was influential in the community in which he lived, but well known and popular throughout a wide

		John Watts presented a large Bible to Rev. Dempster. "It is also of interest to note that John Watts in addition to his gift of this Bible to the Warrensburg Church, gave to Rev. Dempster 10 acres of land upon which he resided & did possess, & to this day this lot is still called "the Dempster Lot" by the older residents in that section, & has for many yrs. been a part of the large landholdings of the Pettingill-Devendorf Fam. No deed of this gift of land is recorded in the C.C. county, New York, in 1806, died in that village, 1893. He was associated with his father in brick manufacturing and was captain of the Hudson River vessels for many years. He held all the local offices of importance in his town, and for forty years was vestryman of the Episcopal church. He married, in 1838, Mary Stitt, of Nantucket, Massachusetts, belonging to the religious Society of Friends. They had three children: 1. ———, died in infancy. 2. Eugene, of further mention. 3. Thomas, born January 5, 1845, at Athens, New York; educated in the public schools; at fourteen removed to New York City and from then until the present time (1910) has been identified with the coffee trade of that city; he resides in Brooklyn, New York; he married, December 2, 1874, Harriet B. Winans; children: Eugene and Schuyler.

(VI) Eugene, son of William Nicholas and Mary (Stitt) Van Loon, was born in the village of Athens, Greene county, New York, December 2, 1842. He was educated in the public schools, and at an early age located in Little Falls, New York, where he learned the details of woolen manufacturing. He became a manufacturer of woolen goods of Little Falls, a line of activity he continued until his retirement from business. He is a Republican in politics, was presidential elector in 1908, and has filled all the principal town offices. He is one of the original members of the Holland Society of New York, and was for ten years vice-president of the society. His social club is the Union League of New York City. He married, September 30, 1869, at Worcester, Massachusetts, Ella Maddock, born June 11, 1847, daughter of David R. Maddock, cashier of the Camden National Bank of Camden, New Jersey. One child, William T., born December 3, 1873, in Nutley, New Jersey, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1894, now a resident of Athens.

DEMPSTER

The Dempster family of Gloversville, New York, are descendants of an ancient Scotch family whose ancestral seat was near Edinburg. The head of the present family and the American ancestor was Rev. James Dempster, a Scotch minister of note, who withdrew from the established church, and joining with the Wesleys (founders of Methodism) came to the United States. He settled in the town of Florida, Montgomery county, New York, where he died and is buried. He married and had three sons, James, John, Joel, and a daughter Pamelia. John was a noted missionary and the first Methodist missionary to the Argentine Republic. He afterwards was instrumental in founding the great Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois.

(II) Joel, son of Rev. James Dempster, was born in Edinburg, Scotland, and came to the United States, settling in Fulton county, New York, where he was a man of prominence. He was twice married; his first wife was a Murdock; his second Lois Spaulding, who bore him David Spaulding, Delos C., Julia E. and Jane.

(III) David Spaulding, eldest son of Joel and Lois (Spaulding) Dempster, was born in Lasselville, Fulton county, New York, March 31, 1845, died in Gloversville, New York, February 26, 1907. He secured his early education in the public schools, finishing at Fulton Academy, Fulton, New York, where he took an advanced course. After completing his studies he became a traveling salesman for local glove-making firms. In January, 1870, in company with George Place, he organized the firm of Dempster & Place, and began in a small way the manufacture of gloves, on the corner of Main and First avenues, Gloversville, where they remained eight years. In January, 1888, their business had so grown that they moved into the three-story brick property on Bleecker street, which they had previously erected and equipped for a modern glove factory. The firm manufactured a general line of light and heavy buckskin gloves and a line of fine kid gloves. They prospered and obtained a firm footing in the trade. Since the death of Mr. Dempster, his wife has capably filled his place in the firm, which still continues a prosperous career as Dempster & Place. Mr. Dempster, while always solicitous for the welfare of his city, and generous in his support of all public enterprises, was never connected with political affairs. His public service was confined to the board of water commissioners, of which he was president. He was a director of the Manufacturers Bank, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and a Methodist in religion. He was a man of fine business ability, upright and honorable in his business affairs, and held in the highest esteem.

He married Sarah J., born February 12, 1856, daughter of Willard and Ellen (Putnam) Brownell, and granddaughter of James and Rhoda (Rose) Brownell. Ellen Putnam was a daughter of Ralph and Jane (Voorhees) Putnam. Willard and Ellen (Putnam) Brownell had three children: Anstress, married Henry Knoff, and had Sarah and Miriam; Sarah J., married David Spaulding Dempster; Charles, unmarried; an extensive ranch owner in southern California. Captain George & Lady Ann

ONE hot summer morning—August 16, 1643—at Roxbury, in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, a 25-year-old widower was standing with folded arms watching his wife's coffin being lowered into her fresh-dug grave. Among his kneeling family and friends he stood there, starkly in the bright sunlight, his feet propped wide apart, his fists tightly clenched.

For all that he heard, the voice of the Puritan pastor raised in prayer might have been the buzzing of a bee busy among the hollyhocks beyond the churchyard wall.

"Our beloved sister in Christ . . . ashes to ashes and dust to dust . . . unto Thee, our Father in Heaven . . . rest in peace . . . look down with compassion upon her motherless babes . . . Thy will be done. . . . Amen."

The congregation struggled awkwardly up from their knees. Still young George Denison stood there, stock still, staring at the rough pine box. The first shovelful of earth fell on the coffin with a hollow thud.

Starting suddenly, he wheeled about and shouldered his way roughly through the circle of his neighbors. Clear of the crowd, he leaped forward in long, swinging strides and ran out of the churchyard, headed towards his home.

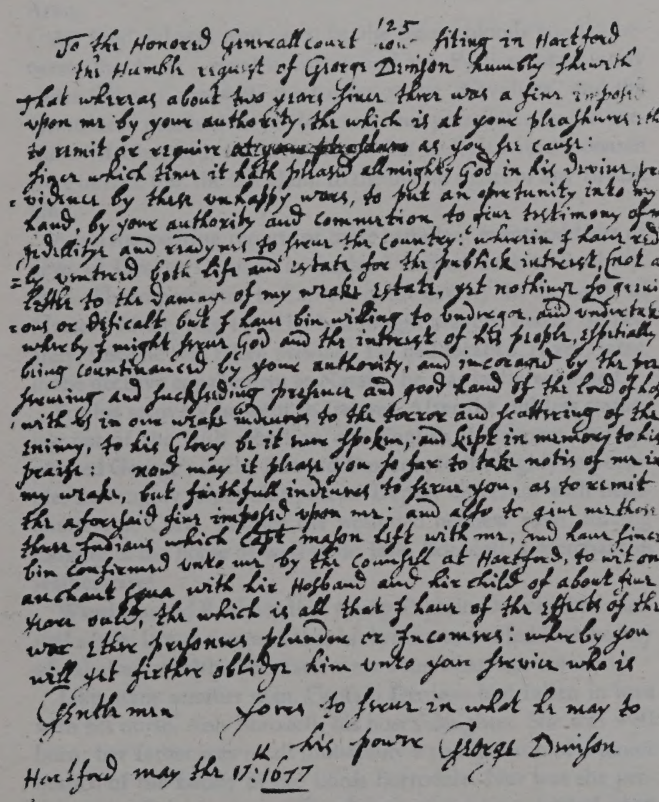
All Roxbury witnessed this astonishing performance. It was a fine midsummer day, perfect for haying, and the second crop of grass waved in the meadows beckoning the scythe. In the gardens, too, the gherkins, beets, and onions were all ripe for pickling. These were all imperative tasks. Yet, putting them aside, everyone gathered in the burying ground for the funeral of one of the town's most popular young matrons. In 1643 in Massachusetts, a death or a birth were not merely a date to be checked by some scrupulous genealogist. They were vivid events touching everybody, drawing all the people closely together.

They all knew young George Denison well. Half his 25 years had been lived in their midst, for he had come to Roxbury in 1631 with his parents and his two older brothers from Stortford, England. His father, William Denison, was described as a man of "goodly estate" and "well aware of the things of the spirit." He must have been both. He sent his three older boys to Cambridge: the eldest, a clergyman who was married had remained in England. On the long voyage across the Atlantic he engaged the Rev. John Eliot—later famous as the Apostle to the Indians—to tutor his youngest boy.

George was apt pupil. His penmanship was neat, and if his spelling was erratic, he learned at least to use the English language effectively. The love poem he wrote to Bridget Thompson, several petitions he addressed to the Connecticut General Court, and his will—widely different compositions that have been preserved—are each well expressed.

Doubtless too, he learned from his tutor a friendly interest in the Indians. Years later, this lesson saved the lives of many Connecticut colonists. Through Denison's influence the Pequots and Mohegans stayed friendly to the English when King Philip and his Narragansetts went on the warpath.



To the Honored Generall court 125 sitting in Hartford

CAPTAIN GEORGE DENISON'S PETITION

to the General Court of the Connecticut Colony at Hartford, May 17, 1677; written in his own hand. For a transcription see at the end of the Bibliographical Notes, in the rear of this book.

As a boy growing up in Roxbury, tall, lanky George Denison with bristly sandy hair and gray-blue eyes, was a favorite with the young people. Because he had ideas and the instinct of leadership, the boys followed him. The girls liked him because he was bold and merry, a great jokester. The older people regarded him as a rather bumptious lad, headstrong, not easily fitted into the straitjacket of Puritan conformity.

His marriage with Bridget Thompson had been a true love match. Everyone knew that. She was an attractive, high spirited girl, the only child of a widow whose husband, John Thompson, "gentleman of Preston, Northamptonshire," had been dead several years. It was in her home in Roxbury that George and his bride started housekeeping. Three years later, when Bridget died leaving two baby daughters, Sarah and Hannah, the whole town wondered what the young widower would do. No one guessed even remotely close to what was to happen.

Straight from his wife's funeral George Denison ran to saddle his best horse and ride away. Without drawing rein he galloped to Boston where he bought some clothes, a comb, a razor and a cake of soap, and embarked on a ship sailing for England next day at the flood of the morning tide.

II

MANY times during his adventurous life George Denison was to display his impetuous nature. He loved Bridget dearly and the womenfolk of Roxbury, with maybe a dash of sentimentality, made this romantic excuse for his untoward flight. The men were cynical. In deserting his baby daughters, as they pointed out, he also left behind his mother-in-law. She was a bustling, buxom widow, a capable housewife, but—! It is possible that these motives blended, prompting him to escape from the small Puritan town to seek adventure in the home country.

At all events, immediately on landing, he enlisted in Cromwell's Army.

All England was torn apart by the bitter, bloody conflict between the King's royalist forces and the Parliamentary army under Oliver Cromwell: the battles of the "Cavaliers" and the "Ironsides" destined to be climaxed four years later by the execution of Charles I. In the grave of that badly advised monarch were buried, too, the last claim to the divine rights of any British king.

Amid the exciting reports of these turbulent events odd bits of news of George Denison in England drifted back to Roxbury. He had been promoted to Captain in the cavalry. In the battle of Marston Moor, July 1644, he had fought bravely, maybe desperately, since he was taken prisoner. He had escaped. A year later, in the decisive engagement at Naesby, he was badly wounded.

For his recovery he went to Ireland. After the ruthless stamping out of the Irish rebellion, the English Parliament had appointed George's uncle, Edward Denison, to the highly responsible, thoroughly unpopular post of Deputy Governor with headquarters at Cork. Thither the wounded nephew went, finding lodging in the home of well-to-do John Borodell, a merchant in leatherwares.

Word reached Roxbury that young Captain Denison had married again. It was rumored that his bride was a titled Irish beauty of fabulous wealth. The facts were somewhat less colorful.

Like many another man, Captain Denison had fallen in love with his nurse, Ann Borodell, his host's daughter. She was well born: her father was in all probability a younger son of a junior branch of the family of the Lords Borrodale. Nor was she penniless: her brother, as was the custom of the time, settled upon her a dowry of £300, which her husband later acknowledged in a deed filed in Hartford. Later she inherited in her own right several houses on a good residential street in Dublin. And she was certainly a real beauty, quite as lovely as rumor had described her; tall and slender, with a peaches-and-cream Irish complexion, wavy brown hair and deep blue eyes.

Though no daughter of a belted earl, Ann Borodell was so truly a gentlewoman, so gracious, so kindly, that instinctively her friends called her "Lady Ann." She carried this charming nickname from Roxbury to New London to Stonington: all her life she was known to her neighbors as "Lady Ann."

In June 1646, just short of three years after he had abruptly fled from Roxbury, George Denison returned with his new wife. He received a hero's welcome. Governor John Winthrop noted in his diary the return of "the young captain recently come out of the wars in England." The bumptious lad was promptly admitted a freeman of the town, the official seal of citizenship. He was now twenty-eight; his wife three years older. They collected little Sarah and Hannah from the girls' grandmother Thompson, and on July 14, 1646, their own first child, a son, John, was born, followed on May 20, 1649, by a daughter who was christened Ann.

III

SO Captain George and Lady Ann settled down for four happy, uneventful years, the only years when his name does not appear in some official record. He was now the happily married father of four children, owner of a house lot in Roxbury and 500 acres of farm land; headed, it seemed, to follow his two older brothers' footsteps to a position of responsible leadership in the colonial community.

Daniel, the eldest of the three, married a daughter of the Massachusetts Governor Thomas Dudley and moved to Ipswich. Here he became a leading citizen, the town's representative in the General Court for many terms, the first Major General of the Massachusetts militia. Edward, four years older than George, had also married into a prominent family, the Welds. At Roxbury, where he lived and died, he was elected to almost every public office from Brander of the Cattle to High Sheriff.

Both these brothers were survived by a son, but they had no grandsons. Thus George Denison, through the three sons that Ann Borodell bore him, John, George, Jr., and William, became the sole founder of the Denison family in America.

In England, the Denisons were of the squirearchy, a county family of the landed gentry. Their coat-of-arms, granted in the 14th century, indicates in the symbols of heraldry a Crusader and naval service. In the old records the name is spelled sixteen different ways, including such queer combinations as Denicon and Dennysen. The double n spelling, familiar in the United States, is said to have been adopted by the Irish branch established by Uncle Edward.

Akin to Johnson, Wilson, and scores of similar old English surnames, is Denison, son of Denis, the patron saint of France. It suggests that the first English Denison landed with William the Conquerer. However, long, long before 1066 the name Denisca, signifying a Danishman, appears in the old Anglo-Saxon Hundred Rolls. So possibly the first Denison leaped ashore from the dragon prow of a Viking longship.

Norman soldier or Danish pirate, somewhere in the past there must have been a biologically prepotent ancestor: a bold, brave man, a big man with sandy red hair, blue eyes under bushy brows, with a large, high-bridged nose and jutting jaw. George Denison was just such a man. Even today the family recognizes this description of him as the true Denison type.

George Denison's uneventful career in Roxbury was interrupted in 1650. A new captain was to be elected commander of the Train Band, the militia company in which every Massachusetts male between 16 and 60 must drill regularly. The young men supported him for this post. Their elders, remembering boyish pranks and the inexplicable desertion of the baby daughters, favored a more stable character, and Denison was beaten by a close vote. He felt that his military rank and experience well qualified him for this important office, and he took his defeat badly. In a gust of anger he left for the new settlement in Connecticut at Pequot.

This town at the mouth of the Thames River, which we now call New London, had been established six years before, in 1644, by John Winthrop, Jr., with permission of the Massachusetts Colony. The defeat and almost annihilation of the warlike Pequot Indians by Major Mason had opened the foreshore of Connecticut to settlement and the younger Winthrop was promoting the plantation vigorously. The so-called Welsh Party with their pastor, the Rev. Richard Blinman moved in from Cape Ann. The town was formally organized and was transferred to the jurisdiction of Connecticut by the Commissioners of the United New England Colonies, two members each from Massachusetts and Plymouth, Connecticut and New Haven.

IV

GEORGE DENISON's feelings, outraged by the Roxbury election, were sweetly salved at New London where he was promptly named captain of the Train Band. In the frontier community this was no honorary commission. Three times during the next two years the drummer paraded the hilly streets of the riverside town beating out the alarm that called the Train Band to active duty. Against these threats of Indian attack the Captain planned his defenses with professional skill. He stationed his men, with an ample supply of ammunition, at three strategic outposts and gathered the women and children for safety in the church and two nearby houses. The attacks did not come, but Denison's energy and ability soon made him an important man at this outpost of the colonists. He was alloted a choice house lot of six acres on what is now Hempstead Street where he built a house later known as the old Chapman house now long since vanished. He was also granted twenty acres of marshland for grazing his cattle.

In 1654 the local records contain three curiously contradictory entries about Captain George Denison. He was commissioned Inspector of the Port of New London, a political plum with juicy fees. He was granted 200 acres of land for services to the community. And he was fined 24 shillings for selling strong waters to an Indian.

His land grant was in the country of the vanquished Pequot Indians whose stronghold on the Mystic River had been wiped out twelve years before. Behind the hills flanking the Mystic to the east lies another valley. Through this winds a brook called by the Indians Pequotsepos, the little river of the Pequots. Here was George Denison's land and here on a rocky knoll overlooking a great meadow with a glimpse of the ocean beyond, he erected a little lean-to and surrounded it with a stout stockade. Here, in 1654, he brought his wife, their two sons, John and George, their daughters, Ann and Borodell, and the two little girls by his first wife, Sarah and Hannah. At Pequotsepos another son, William, and two daughters, Margaret and Mary, were born.

The Pequot country was real frontier. The men who first moved into this rock-strewn land between the Mystic and the Pawcatuck Rivers were independents. They had to be rugged.

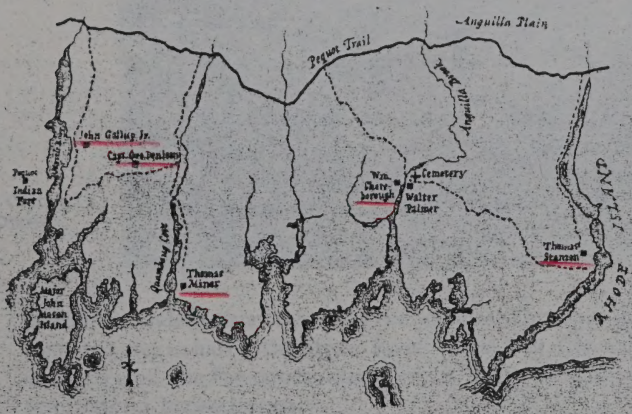
The first settler, William Chesebrough, a gunsmith, came in 1649 from Rehobeth in Plymouth because he had been accused —falsely, he always maintained—of selling firearms to the Indians. He picked a site at the head of Wequetequock Cove where there was a well sheltered landing place and open meadows for grazing and cultivation. East of him on the Pawcatuck, Thomas

Stanton built his Indian trading post. A monopoly of trade in furs with the Indians was a sort of bonus to the salary of $25 a year paid by the Connecticut colony for his services as official interpreter. Walter Palmer, a six-foot giant, 68 years old, settled close beside his friend Chesebrough, and Palmer's son-in-law, Thomas Miner, took up land four miles westward at Quiambaug Cove.

To the west, between Denison's land and the Mystic, Captain John Gallup, Jr., was granted 300 acres for his and his father's services in the Pequot War. From Gallup's grant to Stanton's was twelve miles. Thus Stonington was the first settlement in New England that was not built clustered together about a village green and church for companionship and defense.

Three hundred years ago in Connecticut if a family did not regularly attend church, it was a serious matter. The friendly hobnobbing of the whole community was the social event of the week. All the local news, spiced with gossip, was exchanged, and here too, a man with a surplus of dried peas could find someone ready to barter corn or a firkin of butter or a bag of wool. Other serious business was afoot. With giggles and guffaws the young people were choosing their life partners. Not for nothing was the church called the "meeting house." Furthermore, a family that did not attend divine service Sabbath after Sabbath might rouse dangerous suspicions. A loose or spiteful tongue could let slip a word that would grow into grave charges.

The Pawcatuck settlers lived eight to twenty miles from New London. There was only a rough Indian trail connecting and two big rivers, the Mystic and the Thames, to cross. The pioneering families were devout Puritans, but they could not easily attend services there, and they were boiling mad when the General Court of the Colony ordered them to pay tithes for the support of the New London church and its pastor. The first spark of "taxation without representation" kindled brightly.



Twice they had appealed to the New London authorities for relief: twice they had petitioned the General Court at Hartford for the right to establish their own church. Four times they were blankly refused. So they met at Thomas Miner's, near the center of their scattered settlement, and their angry protests and noisy threats expressed their dismay and frustration. George Denison threw this practical proposal into their heated discussion.

"Since it is exceeding unlikely that our cause at Hartford shall come to a happy issue, let us address our petition to the General Court at Boston."

It was a bold plan, but a shrewd one. "By right of conquest" in the Pequot War, Massachusetts claimed all the territory east of the Thames. It was a thin claim since the Massachusetts militia company had arrived after Mason and his ninety Connecticut men had destroyed the two Pequot forts. But the case was now before the Commissioners of the United Colonies, and a petition from the inhabitants of this disputed region to be taken under the Bay's jurisdiction was sure to be welcomed at Boston.

On the other hand, such a move would infuriate everyone in Connecticut. Denison's rebellious proposal therefore called forth some loyal criticism. However, the chances of its success seemed good. Moreover there was also the hope that it might prod Hartford to favorable action.

So, George Denison wrote the memorial begging "that you would pleese to accept us under your Government & grant unto us the Liberties & privelages of a Township." It was signed: George Denison, Walter Palmer, John Gallup, William Thomson, Thomas Stanton, "For the rest of the Inhabitants and with their consent."

Being its instigator and because his brother was the son-in-law of Governor Dudley of the Bay Colony, the Captain was elected to deliver this petition. At daybreak next morning, October 16, 1657, he set off on his two days' ride to Boston.

He was warmly welcomed and entertained hospitably. He met all the Puritan bigwigs and delivered his petition into the hands of the Governor himself. This cordial reception must have been a comfortable interlude from life within a stockade, a vacation from chopping away at the primeval forest and building stone walls to clear his land for the plow. Properly impressed, he rode home elated by the feeling that a favorable reply was as good as in his saddlebag.

However, following the dictates of intercolonial politics, the Massachusetts magistrates wrote discreetly advising the petitioners to set up their own local government. Thus coached in rebellion, Denison and his neighbors drew up a sort of dry-land Mayflower compact, "The Asotiation of the Poquatuck People," effective June 30, 1658.

Massachusetts also used the Pawcatuck petition to bolster her claim to the Pequot territory. The Commissioners of the United Colonies—four each from Boston and Plymouth and from Hartford and New Haven—being naturally deadlocked over this boundary dispute, found a compromise. They split the contested area in half at the Mystic River: to the west, Connecticut; eastward, the Pawcatuck country which is now Stonington township, to Massachusetts.

In 1662, the new charter of King Charles II settled all arguments. It fixed the colonies' boundary at the Pawcatuck River. Off again, on again—the Pawcatuck country, rechristened Stonington, was automatically returned to Connecticut.

V

DURING the four years of the Massachusetts regime, Captain Denison was top man within the jurisdiction. He headed the five-man committee in charge of local affairs, was one of the three commissioners "to try small causes," and served as Clerk of the Writs. He was also authorized to perform marriages. His powers were extraordinarily inclusive: he used them in a high-handed, partisan manner. He made a treaty with Ninigret, a Niantic Indian the English distrusted with reason. Ignoring former Connecticut land grants, he issued new titles and shuffled old boundaries. Among his grants were two generous ones to Harvard College and several to influential Bay men. In this region of cloudy land titles, these conflicting claims caused bickering and lawsuits among the inhabitants for many years.

Connecticut welcomed the rebels back with a general pardon to which there was one exception. George Denison was denied civil rights and fined £20. He not only refused to pay the fine, but he continued to perform marriages. The Court then ordered him to post a bond of £100 and to appear in Hartford at the next session. Three sessions went by and the Captain, stubbornly firm, did not appear.

His brazen defiance won both friends and enemies. To the bolder spirits the doughty Captain openly personified their smouldering resentment against the Hartford authorities. Others, more cautious and diplomatic, saw that this private war was bad for the whole community. All agreed that it was unwise for the Colony to alienate so able and influential a man. Two years later, having come to this conclusion, the Court at Hartford remitted its uncollectable fine and extended to George Denison indemnity "upon the same grounds as was formerly granted to the other inhabitants of Stonington."

But the Captain's belligerant mood persisted. For years he delighted to annoy the Honorable Court with niggling claims and extravagant complaints. Many pages of its closely written records are filled with his legal battles. His long suit over the line between his land and his neighbors', the Widow Hannah Gallup and her son, John, Jr., started a family feud that lasted for generations.

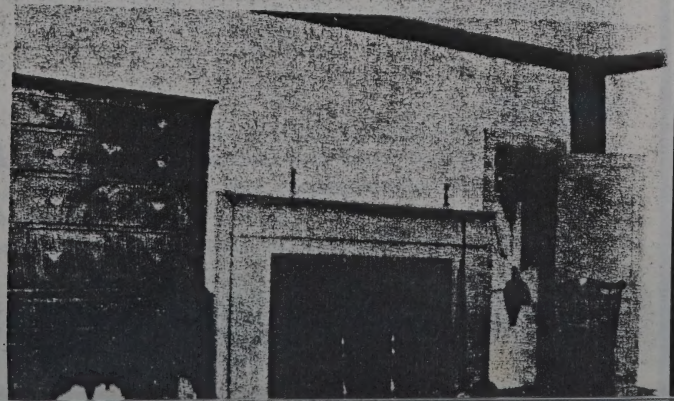
Right within their stockaded home Captain George and Lady Ann had troubles of their own. Their pretty seventeen-year-old daughter, Ann, caught the fleeting fancy of a plausible scamp. John Carr had been mixed up in some pretty unsavory troubles —breaking jail twice, getting drunk and disturbing the peace with two Indian comrades, and being sued for breach of promise by a widow old enough to be his mother.

The Captain hailed this unsuitable suitor before the magistrates, charging him with "engaging the affections of his daughter, Ann, without leave; of taking a cap, a belt, and a silver spoon from his house; and of defaming said daughter." Carr recanted his slanders, but he was fined a whopping £24, 7s, 6d. He skipped bail and fled and vanished.

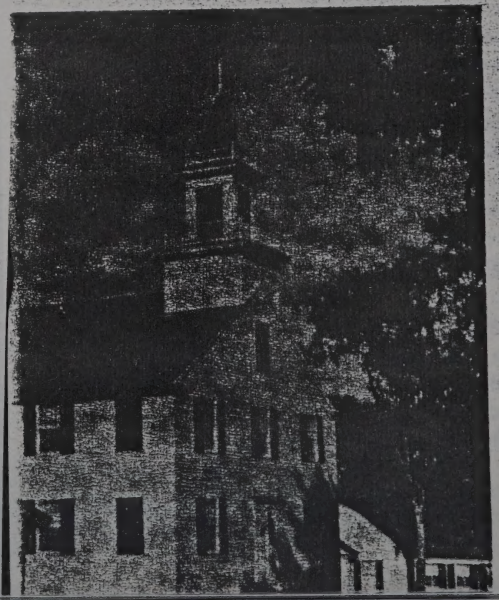
These scandalous proceedings evidently touched daughter Ann but lightly. Next year she married Deacon Gresham Palmer, son of the pioneer, and they raised up in the fear of the Lord a family of nine lusty Puritans, five sons and four daughters. Only one of them died in infancy, something of a record in those days.



THE COLONIAL

Despite his difficult disposition, George Denison's abilities could not be denied. His neighbors appointed him to mark the new town's boundaries and to lay out the road from the Pawcatuck to the Thames, "following so closely as it is possible the Indian path." It is a highway still known as the Pequot Trail.

The Commissioners of the United Colonies named Denison, along with the interpreter, Thomas Stanton, and James Avery of Groton, a committee to set aside 8,000 acres for the remnants of the Pequot tribe—our first Indian reservation. The land they selected did not please the English settlers. They wanted the Indians placed further back country in the rocky hills, well removed from the settlements. The question was bitterly argued for years. Denison and Stanton stood by the Indians, supporting their rights trying to get them a square deal—none of which pleased their fellow colonists.



THE ROAD CHURCH

Denisons have been prominently identified with the First Congregational Church of Stonington ever since September 10, 1674 when Lady Ann was a "pertaker" at the ordination of James Noyes who was pastor for 55 years. The present building (the third on

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH
The parish church of Stortford was established in the 11th Century and the present beautiful building was erected about 1400. The bells were hung in the tower in 1431. Here Denisons were parishoners for generations and here Capt. George was baptized December 10, 1620.

During this period, Denison appeared to delight in jumping into any and every dispute. Generally he chose to fight on the minority side, but at last he took up a thoroughly popular cause. Even his chronic critics at Hartford applauded him.

VI

ALMOST from the first settlement, Stonington men had taken up land across the Pawcatuck River. They grazed goats and horses there, cut hay, even planted turnips. Now families from Rhode Island began coming in, and at the ford where the Pequot Trail crossed the river they started the town of Westerly. Connecticut protested officially: still the Rhode Island settlers thronged in. There were several border incidents, climaxed when Thomas Stanton was ejected forcibly from hayfields he had fenced twenty years before. Denison literally took up the cudgels. He led a score of indignant Stoningtonians in a raid during which they roughly handled several of the newcomers and carried off three prisoners who were charged with trespass.

Suddenly all these contentions and rivalries were forgotten. A bloody Indian massacre sent chills of horror and fear down every New Englanders' spine. The unneighborly colonies were shocked into united action.

June 24, 1675, had been declared a day of public fasting to avert this very tragedy. But as the little congregation of Swanzey in Massachusetts stepped from their church they met a blast of musketry. One fell dead and several were wounded. A score of shouting savages, terrifying in warpaint and feathers, burst from their ambush and disappeared into the forest. That afternoon, greatly reinforced, they attacked both ends of the village simultaneously. Several homes were burned. Eight of the inhabitants brutally tomahawked. King Philip had declared his war of extermination against the white settlers.

Like Sassacus, the Pequot sachem of a generation before, Philip was convinced that the coming of the English meant the going of his people. He tried to enlist the neighboring tribes in this desperate cause. Again the plot was betrayed to the colonists. Forty years before, Roger Williams dissuaded the powerful Narragansetts from joining the Pequot conspiracy. Now, Stanton and Denison persuaded the tribes of the foreshore of Connecticut—Pequots, Mohegans, and Niantics—to become active allies of the English. Saved from attack in the rear, the people of Stonington still faced the battlefront just across the Pawcatuck River.

George Denison, now 56 years old, and his three sons were among the first volunteers. The Connecticut troops, under Major Robert Treat, rendezvoused at Norwich and soon moved their headquarters closer to the front at Denison's palisade. Here the Stonington company, commanded by Denison and Captain John Mason, Jr., had been mustered in.

The Indians struck with terrifying success in western Massachusetts. The massacres at Deerfield and Hatfield urgently called Major Treat and his Connecticut troops to the rescue. Seventy men of the New London companies were left to guard the home front and they took part in the Great Swamp Fight near Kingston, Rhode Island, December 19, 1675. Although Philip and some 300 braves escaped, the greater part of his warriors were killed, but the New London contingent paid highly for this half-victory. Captains John Gallup, Jr., and James Avery and some twenty of their men were killed. Many were wounded and more were disabled by frozen feet and hands. On their return, they were honorably discharged with the thanks of the Colony. The disbanding of the New London companies left the Stonington front without organized defenses.

Heavy responsibilities were now placed upon Captain George Denison. He was appointed Provost Marshal of the New London and Narragansett countries, charged with the defense not only of the Connecticut frontier, but of most of Rhode Island. He must also find replacements for casualties and expired enlistments to keep up the quota of Connecticut troops on the western front. He served at once as quartermaster, commandeering rations and ammunition and horses, and as judge in military cases. A weaker man would have crumpled under this load: Denison met the crisis manfully. His strong partisanship and habit of quick decision, now turned into patriotic channels, served him well. His firm administration of so many serious and delicate problems won praise from everyone. In the field, too, he became a hero.

AFTER the Swamp Fight, Canonchet, the Narragansett chief, came out openly for Philip and the Indian campaign in Rhode Island and eastern Massachusetts was dangerously successful. Not only were Captains Pierce and Wadsworth with fifty Massachusetts men each "swallowed up," as a writer of the times vividly describes their defeats, but in a series of surprise attacks seven villages were burned and their inhabitants slaughtered or scattered.

It was not George Denison's nature to stand guard at the Connecticut border watching this round of disasters. He determined to attack the enemy in the rear.

He enlisted sixty bold volunteers, armed them with a musket and a Cromwellian long sword, mounted them, and reinforced them with a hundred-odd Mohegan and Pequot warriors led by their ablest chief, Oneco. Quickly he moved forty miles into the enemy's country. Here, he halted and holding his little troop of dragoons together, fanned out his red-skinned allies as scouts. As soon as they found a Narragansett camp or located a war party moving stealthily through the scrub oak woods, the English cavalry galloped to an unexpected attack.

Half a dozen such blows and then, before the enemy knew what had happened, the troop was back again at the Pequotsepos palisade. Captain Denison led three such successful raids with the loss of not a single white trooper and of only five of his Indian allies.

The aging veteran of Cromwell's Ironsides was reviving his youth with gusto. Action, command, danger suited him. He was also enjoying deep satisfactions: the devotion of his men, the admiration of his fellow colonists. He was fighting a good fight, outwitting a crafty enemy, avenging his burnings and massacres, pinning his war parties down so that attacks on the English settlements all but ceased. In this guerilla warfare Denison proved himself a shrewd strategist. Thanks to his Mohegan spies, he perfected his intelligence, and his seemingly rash raids were carefully timed and well planned.

Two winters of the war had passed and with good weather returning, Captain Denison was planning a mop-up campaign. Unexpectedly, his scouts brought him good news. Hard-pressed for food supplies, Canonchet with thirty picked braves planned a foray into the Pawcatuck Valley to get seed corn for the season's planting.

"The Lord," Denison exclaimed, "hath delivered mine enemy into my hands."

Quickly mustering forty-seven Englishmen and about eighty Indians, the Captain crossed the Pawcatuck. Deploying his forces, he advanced to trap the great war-chief between the river and the ocean. Warned of their approach, the Narragansetts scattered and fled.

While slipping around a wooded hill, Canonchet ran into a band of Pequots. Off he darted, a yelling pack after him. He threw away his blanket and his silver-lace coat. Crossing a little stream, he slipped and his gun dropped into the water. It was useless, so he sped on, discarding his heavy belt of wampum, the proud insignia of his rank. As he was struggling through another stream, he was overtaken, tackled and thrown by a young Pequot. Two others hurled themselves upon him: he was a prisoner. The English carried him across the ford and over the hill to the Anguilla plain. Here they halted and held a council to decide his fate.

Canonchet was defiant. He refused to surrender and rejected an armistice. Threatened with death, he courageously replied, "It is well. I shall die before my heart is soft, before I have said anything unworthy of Cananchet to say."

The decision was George Denison's to make and he did not hesitate. Cononchet must die. He should be executed, but without torture, and as befitted a noble chief, at the hands of sachems of his own rank. The order was scrupulously carried out.

It was a harsh judgment; in our eyes, a brutal one. However, both Indians and English were fighting a ruthless war of extermination, and the Captain foresaw truly that the removal of his ablest lieutenant would be a death blow to King Philip's cause.

Leaving their red-skinned allies to celebrate after their fashion with a feast and a dance of victory, the Stonington dragoons rode over the Pequot Trail to their headquarters at Captain Denison's stockade. He dismissed them for the last time: for them, the Narragansett War was over.

VIII

SEVERAL years later the Governor of Massachusetts wrote "The services of the Connecticut men were of great value, those of Captain Denison especially well deserve never to be forgotten." This was indeed "praise from Sir Hubert." In Connecticut, Denison was hailed as the Colony's greatest military leader, second only to Major John Mason of Pequot War fame. His services were tangibly rewarded: the Colony, the Town of Stonington, and his ally Oneco, all made him generous land grants. Loaded with honors he settled down at Pequotsepos to round out the final period of his life a radically changed character.

He "was took into full communion" by the church where his wife had been a member ten years. The Captain did not suddenly "get religion." He had been reared in a faithful Puritan family and had always attended services more or less regularly, but he took no active part in religious affairs nor did he enter in the many sharp conflicts over the fine points of Puritan theology. His "conversion" was a declaration of principle; a token, too, of reconcilliation with his neighbors.

He did, however, take a very lively part in town affairs. Aside from his multiple offices during the Massachusetts jurisdiction, he had been the first town clerk of Stonington, serving for three years; magistrate for seven years; selectman, eleven years. He represented Stonington during nineteen sessions of the General Court, almost continuously from 1682 till the second session of 1694, during which he died in Hartford, on October 24, and was buried there—to the very end active in public service.

After the Indian war one of his first acts was to tear down the stockade and house that thirteen years before had replaced his original lean-to. Just to the east he built "my new mansion place," as he describes it in his will, a four-square, center-chimneyed, shingled home. At Pequotsepos Manor, as time went on, Captain George and Lady Ann entertained more and more, visiting celebrities and gave many famous dinner parties, "grate feasts," for their neighbors, his old comrades-in-arms, and to friendly Indian sachems.

By this time the Denison children were grown up and married. Only one had died; Mercy, the youngest, on March 10, 1670, eleven years old. The two daughters of Captain George's first marriage to Bridget Thompson both married sons of Stonington pioneers; Sarah to Thomas Stanton, Jr., and Hannah to Nathaniel Chesebrough. Sarah had seven children: Hannah, eleven; eight by Chesebrough and three daughters by her second husband, Joseph Saxon, a successful Boston merchant, who was a dozen years younger than she. The first-born of Lady Ann's daughters, Ann, married Greshom Palmer, son of the pioneer, Walter. Borodell married Samuel Stanton, the brother of her half sister Sarah's husband. The youngest of the Denison girls was the only one to marry outside of Stonington and move away. Margaret's husband, James Brown, Jr., was from Rehoboth and they lived at Barrington (then in Massachusetts, now Rhode Island).

All three of the Denison sons became important citizens of Stonington. They all saw active service with their father in King Philip's War and each, at various times, represented the town for two or more terms as Deputies to the General Court at Hartford.

Captain John Denison, the oldest, married Phebe Lay of Saybrook. George, Jr., married Mercy Gorham of Barnstable, Massachusetts, a granddaughter of John Howland of the Mayflower. William's wife was a daughter of Thomas Stanton (the third Denison-Stanton alliance) and the widow of Thomas Prentice. Quite contrary to English custom, William, the youngest son, inherited Pequotsepos Manor. Captain George divided his property equitably. The older sons were not cut off with the proverbial shilling, and his will provided that his wife shall have use of half of his mansion place so long as she liveth. Possibly William was Lady Ann's favorite son.

In all Captain George and Lady Ann had sixty-four grandchildren. All but eight lived to marry. The third generation was literally a legion. Thus the foundations of the Denisons in the New World were laid down deep and broad.

Captain George's mansion burned in 1717 and on its site his grandson, George III, built the present Denison Homestead.

Love conquering the family feud, he installed here as mistress his bride, pretty Hannah Gallup. In rebuilding the house he certainly followed the original floor plan. It was as standard throughout colonial Connecticut as baked beans and corn pudding. The big charred oak beams he used as part of the frame may well have been salvaged from his grandfather's "mansion place."

Denison tradition and Denison hospitality made this famous house their family headquarters, the great hive from which swarm after swarm of Denison pioneers have left the foreshore of Connecticut. They were seeking bigger, less stony fields. They moved to New York and Boston, to Vermont and York State. They crossed over into Ontario and settled by the score in the Western Reserve (which is now northern Ohio) and they pushed on to Michigan and Kansas and the Dakotas, all the way to the West Coast.

Many of these Denisons continued to farm: many more forsook the harrow and plough. The family produced a Brigadier General for the Canadian Army and the Post Master General in President Lincoln's cabinet, a dozen bank presidents, a manufacturer of bobby pins and a professional tea taster. The stout 900-page Denison Genealogy is packed with stories of success in all the learned professions and in every conceivable kind of business enterprise.

For example, the grandson of the George Denison III who built the Homestead was William, born at Pequotsepos. He moved to western Massachusetts, then to Zanesville, Ohio. His son, also William, became one of our first scientific farmers, accumulating a comfortable fortune. It was his gift that rescued the financially distressed Granville Academy and started it towards becoming the great Denison University.

Again, George III's youngest son, David, had a grandson, another David, who was an officer during the Revolution and afterwards moved to Guilford, Vermont. His son, George—literally hundreds of Denison baby boys have been christened George—went to New York City. He studied law, served as a naval officer during the Civil War and was appointed Captain of the Port at New York by Lincoln. With August Belmont and Francis Skiddy he financed the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad. The junction where the "Katy Line's" first machine shops and roundtable were located was named for him, the city of Denison, Texas.

These and similar success stories are typical episodes in that great chapter in American history, the New England Exodus, during which the descendants of the Puritans carried their forefather's ideas and ideals from frontier to frontier across the continent. They were born individualists, these sons of Founding Fathers, and there were rogues and ne'er-do-wells among them. But in the main they were honest, hard-working, self-reliant, God-fearing men, distinguished, above all else, by their faith in democracy and their belief in the value of education. What they contributed to our American way of life is as plain as a-b-c, and as meaningful as two plus two equals four.

MEANWHILE, throughout eleven generations, the Denison Homestead at Pequotsepos and Captain George's original grant of 200 acres, remained in the family. It is owned today by the family association and maintained as a museum. The Denison land is rented by the Denison Society for a dollar a year to the Pequot-sepos Wildlife Sanctuary. Its scientifically labeled nature walks and Trailside Museum are also open to the public.

When, in 1948, the last owner, Mrs. Ann Borodell Denison Gates, bequeathed Pequotsepos Manor to the Denison Society, the trustees found its closets and attics, even a woodshed and the hayloft of the big barn, all crammed with family heirlooms. So they decided to restore the old house in a novel fashion, successively in chronological style. There is the 1717 kitchen, with its big fireplace, crane and trammel, cooking utensils, wooden plates and pewter spoons, on down to Mrs. Gates' own friendly 1900 parlor, with its built-in bookcases and her hospitable tea table complete with siver urn and priceless Dutch china. Across the hall is a formal, panelled drawing room of 1820; upstairs are bedrooms of the Revolutionary and Civil War periods. Each room is scrupulously accurate in every architectural detail and furnished throughout with authentic family relics. Two distinguished experts supervised the creation of this unique museum of American homelife—J. Frederick Kelly, the building and Elizabeth T. Halsey, the furnishings. There is no other old house open to the public like this in all New England.

Like the original Ann Borodell Denison, Mrs. Gates entertained with delight. Almost every afternoon she had guests for five-o'clock tea and her luncheons and dinner parties were famous. She showed droves of people through the house, pointing out her favorite treasures, the bullet mold and sword of Captain George, the handmade crow decoys and wooden Pequot doll with rabbit-fur hair, the miniature painted on ivory of Lady Ann and the samples of her needlework.

One hot August afternoon, after she had shown three parties everything from cellar to attic, she sat down, tired out, to enjoy a glass of iced tea. Suddenly there was a preemptory rap of the knocker on the front door. She opened it and there stood a tall, red-headed stranger. Her fatigue must have shown, for he said apologetically:

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Gates. It's just another of those damned Denisons come to see your house."

She burst out laughing. "Come in, come in," she chortled. "I'll bet your mother was a Gallup."

"Why she was indeed. But how did you know that?"

"Oh, you said 'damned Denison' so natural."

Secondary Source Material:

Baldwin & Clift's Descendants of Capt. George Denison (Worcester, 1881) has been replaced as the genealogical authority on the family by Denison, Peck & Jacobus' Denison Genealogy (Pequot Press, Stonington, 1963) a complete revision of the earlier work, up-dated, with many corrections and much new material added; illustrated and with Denison coat-of-arms in full colors.

Judge Richard Wheeler's History of the Town of Stonington with Genealogies (New London, 1900) is still the most detailed account of the settlement of the town and its organization under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. Despite outmoded approach and style this work is also invaluable for genealogical data on the pioneer families, much of which is unavailable elsewhere.

Frances Mainwaring Caulkins' History of New London (New London, 1852) and History of Norwich (Hartford, 1874) are both capitol source material, notable for their accuracy and judicial handling of facts.

Captain Denison's Petition

To the Honored Generall Court now sitting in Hartford, the humble request of George Denison humbly sheweth:

That whereas about two years since there was a fine imposd upon me by your authority, the which it is at your pleasure ether to remit or require, as you see cause; since which time it has pleased allmighty God in his devine providence, by these unhappy wars, to put an opportunity into my hand, by your authority and comiton, to giue testimony of my fidellitye and readyness to serve the country; wherein I have readily ventured both life and estate for the public interest (not a little to the damage of my weak estate) ye nothing so grievous or difficult but I have bin willing to undergoe and undertake, whereby I might serue God and the interest of his people; especially being countenanced by your authority and incoraged by the preserving and succeeding presence and good hand of the Lord of hosts with us in our weake indevores to the terror and scattering of the enemy; to his glory be it even spoken and kept in memory to his praise. Now may it please you, for to take notis of me, in my weake but faithfull indevors to serve you, as to remit the aforesaid fine imposed upon me; and also to give me those three Indians which Capt. Mason left with me, and have since been confirmed unto me by the counsell at Hartford, to wit, one ancient squa with her husband and her child of about five yeareould, the which is all I have of the effects of the war, either prisoners, plander or incomers. Where by you will yet gurther oblige him to you servive who is, Gentlemen. Yours to Serve in what he may, to his power.

Hartford, May 17, 1677 George Denison

1 GEORGE DENISON bpt Bishop's Stortford, Herts, England, Dec 10 1620; d Hartford Oct 23 1694; m (1) Bridget Thompson bpt Preston Capes, Northants, England, Sept 11 1622, d Roxbury, Mass Aug 1643 dau John and Alice (Freeman) Thompson; m (2) in England ca 1645 Ann Borodell, d Stonington Sept 26 1712, ae 97 (g s, Elm Grove).

George's bro, Gen Danl Denison wrote in 1672 "My two brothers, Edward and George had all the Estate of my father left between them, being both marryed long before my father's death; my Brother George buried his first Wife in the year 1643, went into England was a souldier ther above a year, was at the Battle of York, or Marston Moor, where he did good service, was afterward taken Prisoner, but got free and having married a second Wife he returned to New England the year before our Mother died, and not long afterward removed himself to New Ldon near whereunto (viz) at Stonington he now liveth, having 3 sons John, William, and George, 4 or 5 daughters . . . 3 of Daughters are marryed to Stanton, Palmer and Cheesebrook (sic) all living at present in the same town."

The tradition that George served in Cromwell's army is thus verified. The story is also told that he was wounded and was nursed at the home of John Borodell, a cordwainner (leather merchant) of Cork, by his dau Ann whom he married for his second wife.

He served as Deputy to the Conn Gen Court from New London Sept 1653, May 1654 and Feb 1657, and from Stonington Oct 1671, Oct 1674, May 1678, Oct 1682, May and Oct 1683, May, July and Oct 1684, May and Oct 1685, May 1686, May 1687, Sept 1689, May Sept and Oct 1693, and May 1694. When 1st mentioned in Conn Col Recds he is called "Captain," based upon his service and commission in England. He served on the War Comm for New London in 1653 when war threatened with Dutch. Although 56 he served as Capt in King Philip's War 1676 in command of New London County troops and second in command of the Conn Army under Maj Robert Treat. He was ap'pted Provost Marshal May 1677. He was Capt of volunteer troops against the enemy Sept 1689. (See Conn Col Recds Vol I and biog. sketch in fore of this book.)

Ancestors & friends by Crawford

Denison

The earliest ancestor of the American Denisons found is John Denyson who lived in Bishop's Strotford, Herfordshire, England. He was b. ca. 1530. The records of Bishop's Stortford show that he married Agnes Willie, 1554. John Denyson died of the plague 4 Dec. 1582.

Children of John Denyson and Agnes Willie:

1. Lucy Denyson, baptised 3 Aug. 1567, buried 9 Dec. 1582.

2. William Denyson, baptised 3 Feb. 1571

3. Edward Denyson, baptised 6 April 1575. He went to Ireland and is last found living in Dublin, 1670. His son, John, became deputy governor of Cork.

4. Mary Denyson, baptised 28 Aug. 1577

5. Elizabeth Denyson, baptised 23 Aug. 1579

6. George Denyson, baptised 17 March 1582.

All of the above children were born in Bishop's Strotford and their baptism records are found in the Parish Church Records.

Following the death of her husband John, Agnes Denyson married (2) John Grace 3 May 1584. [Denison, E. Glenn. Denison Genealogy]. Agnes Willie Denyson was a descendant of John Willie of Thorley, England. He was probably born in the parish ca. 1500. The first recorded transaction in Thorley was a purchase of three dwellings from his son John Willie II in 1548, the father of Agnes (Willie) Denyson. John Willie II married 30 Oct. 1540 Joan Marsead of Thorley where they continued to live. They had the following children: (1) John Willie, III, baptised 4 Aug. 1541. (2) Emmeret Willie, baptised 8 Nov. 1543. (3) Agnes Willie m. John Denyson. (4) Mary Willie, b. 13 Nov. 1548, m. 18 Oct. 1579, Ed. Ducket of Thorley. (5) Bridget Willie, baptised 1 Feb. 1551, d. 13 Aug. 1625, m. ca. 1580, George Abbott, son of Wm. and Elizabeth Abbott. (6) Edward Willie m. 18 Jan. 1581, Elizabeth Jardfield, d. 1615. (7) George Willie m. Mary Brett, dau. of Nich. Brett, Little Haddam, England, d. 1615. (8) Grace Willie m. 16 Oct. 1580, Rich Walker, buried 29 Nov. 1615. [Ancestory of William Chandler of Roxbury, Mass., N. E. Historical & Genealogical Reg., Vol. 85].

William Denison, the son of John and Agnes Denyson, m. Margaret (Chandler) Monck at Stortford, England, 7 Nov. 1603. In 1631 William with his wife Margaret and sons Daniel Denison, Edward Denison and George Denison came on the "Lion" and settled at Roxbury, Mass. Also on the ship "Lion" was the wife of Governor Winthrop, their eldest son and John Eliot, pastor of the First Church of Roxbury and Apostle to the Indians. Pastor Eliot was a tutor to young George Denison. William Denison was third on the list of church membership in John Eliot's church. William Denison was a merchant and man of means in Roxbury. He became a freeman 3 July 1632. He was a representative, representing Roxbury at the General Court at Newe Towne in 1634. [Record of Mass., Vol. I, 1628-1641]. His wife, Margaret Denison, d. 3 Feb. 1646, and is referred to in the church records by Pastor John Eliot as "Old Mother Denison." William Denison d. 25 Jan. 1654 and they are both buried in Old Eliot St. Cemetery, Roxbury, Mass. [Whittemore. Genealogical Guide to Early Settlers of America].

Children of William Denison and Margaret Chandler:

1. John Denison, baptised 7 April 1605. He was educated at Cambridge University, became a minister and remained in England. He was vicar of Standon, County Herts, 1660 to 1670.

2. William Denison, Jr., baptised at Stratford 5 Oct. 1606. When he was about 18 years old he was called to go to Holland as a soldier in 1624 at the famous Siege of Breda. It was taken by Spinola and Count Mansfield who had an army from England to raise the siege. The army miscarried and William Denison, Jr. was never again heard from.

3. George Denison, baptised at Stratford 15 Oct. 1609 and d. and buried there 1615.

4. Daniel Denison, baptised at Stratford 18 Oct. 1612. In the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of April 1892, the following appeared, written by Daniel Denison: "I was the eldest of the three brothers that was brought to New England, and the next year after our arrival (viz) in the year 1632, on the 18th day of October, on which day twenty years before I was baptised -, and seven years before I was admitted to the University of Cambridge. I married Patience, the second daughter of Thomas Dudley, who was principal undertaker of the Plantation of Massachusetts. He came over Deputy Governor and was afterwards divers times governor. (He d. 30 July 1653 and wife d. Dec. 1643 in Roxbury, Mass.). As for myself, after I married ____ in 1635, I removed to Ipswich, where Jan. 16, 1640, when my son John was born. Elizabeth was born April 10, 1642. Mary was born nine years later (b. 1651, d. young) and three years after Deborah (b. 1654, d. young), our last was born." Elizabeth Denison m. 1660, John Rogers and had five children.

5. Sarah Denison, baptised 1615 and buried same year at Stratford.

6. Edward Denison, baptised 3 Nov. 1616, and went to New England, 1631. He m. 20 March 1641, Elizabeth, dau. of Joseph Weld. He lived all of his life after marriage in Roxbury, Mass. where he d. 26 April 1668. His widow d. 5 Feb. 1717. They had thirteen children, but only son William, b. 1664 and daughters, Elizabeth b. 1642, Margaret, b. 1650, m. Daniel Mason, Mary b. 1654, Hannah, b. 1655 and Sarah, b. 1657 survived to adulthood.

7. George Denison (note this is the second son named George as the first died in infancy), baptised 10 Dec. 1620 at Stratford and went to New England in 1631 with his parents. He lived at Roxbury in the early part of his life. He m. (1) ca. 1640, Bridget Thompson, b. 11 Sept. 1622, dau. of John Thompson and wife Alice (Freeman) Thompson, of Northamptonshire, England, where she was baptised. They had two children, Sarah, b. 20 March 1641, m. Thomas Stanton and Hannah, b. 20 May 1643, m. (1) Nathaniel Cheseborough, 1659 and (2) Joseph Saxton, 15 July 1680. Wife, Bridget Denison, d. 1643.

   Family tradition has it that George Denison left the grave where his wife was being buried and rode horseback to Boston, Mass. He departed there for England the following day. [Wheeler. History of Stonington]. His trip to England is verified by a letter of his brother, Major General Daniel Denison, published in New England Historical and Genealogical Register of 1892, "my brother George was a soldier there about a year (was with Cromwell), was at the battle of York, or Marston Moor where he did good service, and was afterwards taken prisoner, but got free and married a second wife, Miss Ann Borodell, and with her returned to New England in the year 1645 and took up his abode again in Roxbury, Mass. where he continued to live until 1654 when he came with his family to Connecticut and located himself at New London, Conn. where he resided until 1654, when he came to Stonington with his family to live, and remained there until his death, which took place at Hartford, Conn. Oct. 24, 1694."

We know from an agreement reached between Capt. George Denison and Ann Borodell that they married in Cork, Ireland during the period he was recovering from his war wounds and she was his nurse. This agreement was ratified and confirmed at Hartford, Conn. 3 May 1662 and was as follows: "This witnesseth that I. George Denison of Southerntown, in Connecticut jurisdiction in New England, for and in consideration of jointure due unto my now wife Ann Borodell Denison, upon marriage and upon my engagment, in consideration of the sum of three hundred pounds by me received of Mr. John Borodell, which he freely gave to my wife, his sister, Ann Borodell Denison, and I have had the use and improvement of and for, and in consideration of conjugal and dearer affection moving me thereunto." [filed in Book I, Conn. State Records, Hartford, Conn., p. 274].

Also, in George Denison's will dated 20 Nov. 1693 there is this provision: "and whereas there is considerable rent due me for a house of my wife in Cork, in Ireland, which was given unto her as a legacy by her father, John Borrodell, at his death, and no doubt may appear upon record in Cork, the house stands upon lands which they call Bishop's land, and was built by our said father. He to have lived in the same, whereof my said wife was next to himself as may also appear there upon record."

Ann Borodell's father was a merchant in leatherwares in Cork, Ireland. The records of Mass. and Conn. confirm that George Denison was a distinguished citizen and soldier of these states. He served as a deputy to the Conn. General Court from New London Sept. 1653, May 1654, Feb. 1657, & from Stonington, Oct. 1671, Oct. 1674, May 1678, Oct. 1682 & at 13 additional sessions of the court extending through May 1694. He served on the war comm. for New London in 1653 when war threatened with Dutch. He was captain in King Philip's War, 1676 at age 56. In May 1677 he was appointed provost marshall, and in Sept. 1689, at age 69, he was captain of volunteer troops fighting the Indians. The title of captain was acquired during service in England.

George Denison and wife Ann had the following children:
(born in Roxbury, Mass.)

1. John Denison, baptised 14 July 1646, d. 1699, m. 26 Nov. 1667, Phebe Lay, d. 1699.

Captain George Denison's mansion burned in 1717 and on its site his grandson George Denison, III, built the present Denison Homestead. Through eleven generations the Denison Homestead at Pequotsepos has remained in the family. In 1948 Mrs. Ann Borodell Denison Gates bequeathed Pequotsepos Manor to the Denison Society. It is maintained as a museum and open to the public. If you are interested in the romance of the Denison family the following book is recommended. William Denison (No. 3) m. Margaret (Chandler) Monck at Stortford, Eng., Nov. 7, 1603. He was very well seated in Stortford or Stratford, but hearing of the then famous transplantation to New England, unsettled himself and recalling his son Daniel from Cambridge, removed himself and family in the year 1631 to New England, and brought over with him his son Daniel, then aged about 19 years, and two younger brothers, Edward and George, leaving his oldest son, John, who had also been bred at Cambridge and was then a minister, married, with a good portion, and who lived about Pelham or in Hartford shier, not far from Stratford, where they were all born. He was Vicar of Standon, County Herts, 1660 to 1670. William Denison brought with him into New England a very good estate and settled himself at Roxbury, Mass., and there lived till Jan. 25, 1653, when he died, having buried his wife about 8 years before, viz., 1645.

Daniel Denison (No. 11) came with his father to New England in 1631.

The following is from the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of April, 1892, written by himself:

"I was the eldest of the three brothers that was brought to New England, and the next year after our arrival (viz.) in the year 1632, on the 18th day of October, on which day twenty years before I was bapt. at Stratford, and seven years before I was admitted into the University of Cambridge, I married Patience, the second daughter of Thomas Dudley, who was a principal undertaker of the Plantation of Massachusetts, and one of those first comers in the year 1630 that brought over the patent and settled the government. He came over Deputy Governor, and was afterwards at divers times Governor. Thomas Dudley then lived at Cambridge, but afterwards removed to Ipswich, where he stayed one year, settling himself at Roxbury, where he d. July 30, 1653, and his wife d. about 10 years before, the latter end of December, 1643.

"For myself, after I was married to Patience Dudley, I lived about 2 years at Cambridge, and in the year 1635 I removed to Ipswich, where we lived together without children till Jan. 16, 1640, when my son John was born, and two years and quarter after, Elizabeth was born, April 10, 1642; about nine years after another daughter, Mary, was born, and three years after Deborah, our last, was born.

* 38 HANNAH, b. May 20, 1643, m. Nathaniel Chesebrough, 1659 (No. 9), that family. She m. 2d, Joseph Saxton July 15, 1680.

This Capt. George Denison having buried his wife in the year 1643, went back to England the same year, where, as we learn from a letter of his brother, Maj. Gen. Daniel Denison, published in the April number of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of 1892, in which he says: "My brother George was a soldier there above a year, was at the battle of York, or Marston Moor, where he did good service, and was afterwards taken prisoner, but got free and married a second wife, Miss Ann Borodell, and with her returned to New England in the year 1645, and took up his abode again in Roxbury, Mass., where he continued to live until 1651, when he came with his family to Connecticut and located himself at New London, Conn., where he resided until 1654, when he came to Stonington with his family to live, and remained there until his death, which took place at Hartford, Conn., Oct. 24, 1694." We learn from the records of Massachusetts and Connecticut that Capt. George Denison was not only distinguished as a civilian, but became the most distinguished soldier of Connecticut in her early settlement, except Maj. John Mason. His military services are on record in our Colonial archives where his eminence is recognized and portrayed. Also, you will find his name in the History of New London and Stonington, where his services are acknowledged and described in full. There is no date of the marriage of Capt. George Denison and Ann Borodell, but he was doubtless married in England. Pending their courtship an agreement was made between them, which was afterwards ratified and confirmed at Hartford, Conn., May 3, 1662, as follows: "This witnesseth that I, George Denison, of Southertown, in Connecticut jurisdiction in New England, for and in consideration of a jointure due unto my now wife, Ann Borodell Denison, upon marriage and upon my former engagement, in consideration of the sum of three hundred pounds by me received of Mr. John Borodell, which he freely gave to my wife, his sister, Ann Borodell Denison, and I have had the use and improvement of and for, and in consideration of conjugal and dearer affection moving me, thereunto." This jointure agreement may be seen on the First Book of Connecticut State Records, in Hartford, Conn., page 274. This recorded instrument is proof positive of the marriage of Capt. George Denison and wife, Ann Borodell, to say nothing of the births of their children and his will in his own handwriting bequeathing to them his entire property.

NOTE.—Capt. George Denison (No. 14) was captain of New London County forces in King Philip's war, with Capt. John Mason, Jr., under Maj. Robert Treat, in the great swamp fight Dec. 19, 1675. Also served the next year in command of the forces raised by him as Provo-Marshal, who pursued the remnant of the Narragansett and Wampanaug Indians, and succeeded in defeating them and capturing the Indian Chief Canonchet, who was brought to Stonington, and on his refusal to make peace with the English, was shot. He assisted as magistrate to enable the Pequot chiefs designated by the English to control the remnants of the Pequots. He was assistant and deputy from Stonington to the General Court for fifteen sessions.

The Town of New London granted Capt. George Denison 200 acres of land in the Pequot-se-pos valley at Mystic in 1652, upon which he subsequently built him a dwelling house (May 3, 1663, it was raised), wherein he and his family made their permanent, final home, known as the Oliver Denison house, and which stood a few feet west of the present residence of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Ford (1899). He d. Oct. 24, 1694, and his widow d. Sept. 26, 1712, aged 97, by the gravestone, which may be found in the Elm Grove Cemetery at Mystic.

*NOTE.—One of the ancestors of Admiral George Dewey was a Stonington man, viz., Capt. George Denison (No. 14), the distinguished Indian warrior of Connecticut, who came to New England with his parents and settled in Roxbury, Mass., where Capt. Denison was married to his first wife, Bridget Thompson, in 1640. Their daughter, Hannah, b. May 20, 1643, m. Nathaniel Chesebrough of Stonington in 1659. Her husband d. Nov. 22, 1678. WILLIAM DENISON

Roxbury, Mass.

WILLIAM[1] DENISON, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, co. Herts, England,

* The John Denison who received a lot in Voluntown, Conn. [Bodge, op. cit., p. 443] was, like all the Voluntown grantees, a Connecticut soldier. Waters, in his history of Ipswich, credits John Denison also with service in the Quebec Expedition of 1691.

3 Feb. 1571, buried at Roxbury, Mass., 25 Jan. 1653/4; married at Bishop's Stortford, 7 Nov. 1603, MARGARET (CHANDLER) MONCK, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, 13 Oct. 1577, buried at Roxbury, 3 Feb. 1645/6, daughter of John and Joan (———) Chandler, and widow of Henry Monck.

He was son of John Denyson of Thorley, Hertfordshire, who was living at Bishop's Stortford at least as early as 1566 and died there of the plague and was buried 4 Dec. 1582. His mother was Agnes Willie, who married second, at Bishop's Stortford, 1 May 1584, John Gase. William's brother Edward settled in Ireland in 1631 and had a son John, Major of a Regiment and Deputy-Governor of Cork. William's youngest brother, George (1582-1642), remained in Stortford.

William and his family, except the eldest son John, came to New England in 1631 and settled in Roxbury, Mass. The first minister at Roxbury, Rev. John Eliot, known as the Apostle to the Indians, in his record of church members wrote: "William Dennison, he brought 3 children to N. E. all sons: Daniel, Edward, & George." Also, "Margret Dennison, the wife of Willia Dennison, It pleased God to work vpon her heart & change it in her ancient years, after she came to this Land; & joyned to the church in the yeare 1632."

His son, Major-General Daniel Denison, left an autobiography written in 1672 and addressed to his grandchildren, but not published until 1892. He stated that "my Dear father" was named William, and that the name of "my dear Mother" was Chandler.

Gen. Denison also wrote that, after the death of his brother William in Holland—"We were now but four Brothers left (viz.) John, Daniel, Edward and George. John and myself were bred schollars at Cambridge, where I continued till after I had taken my first Degree, my father though very well seated in Stratford [should be Stortford], hearing of the then famous transplantation to New England, unsetled himself and recalling me from Cambridge removed himself and family in the year 1631 to New England, and brought over with him myself being about 19 years of age, and my two younger Brothers, Edward, and George, leaving my eldest Brother John behind him in England, Marryed with a good portion, who was a minister, and lived about Pelham or in Hartford shier, not far from Stratford [Stortford] where we were born.

"My father brought with him into New England a very good Estate and settled himself at Roksbury, and there Lived though somewhat weakning his Estate) till the year 1653 in January when he died, having buried my Mother about Eight years before."

William Denison was made a freeman, 3 July 1632. He was chosen Constable of Roxbury, 4 Mar. 1633/4, and served as Deputy to the Massachusetts General Court, Mar. 1634/5. [Shurtleff's Records of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, 1-112, 135, 367.] Qualifying ancestor, Society of Colonial Wars.

His eldest son, John Denison, who remained in England, was educated at Queen's College, Cambridge (M.A., 1627), and became vicar at Standon, co. Herts. William's third surviving son, Daniel, was educated at King's College and Emmanuel, Cambridge University, but after receiving his B.A. (1629/30) was recalled by his father to join the family in migrating to New England. Daniel married a daughter of Gov. Thomas Dudley, settled in Ipswich, Mass., was Assistant of the Colony for nearly thirty years, and rose to be Major-General of the colony forces.

William's second son and namesake (William) went with the English army to Holland in 1624 to attempt to raise the Siege of Breda, and never returning, is supposed to have lost his life there.

(CAPTAIN) GEORGE[2] DENISON, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, co. Herts, England, 10 Dec. 1620, died at Hartford, Conn., 23 Oct. 1694; married first, in 1640, Bridget Tompson, baptized at Preston Capes, co. Northants, England, 11 Sept. 1622, died at Roxbury, Mass., Aug. 1643, daughter of John and Alice (Freeman) Tompson; married second, in England, about 1645, ANN BORODELL, who died at Stonington, Conn., 26 Sept. 1712, aged 97.

His brother, Gen. Daniel Denison, wrote in 1672: "My two brothers Edward and George had all the Estate my father left between them, being both marryed long before my father's death; my Brother George buried his first Wife in the year 1643, went into England was a Souldier ther above a year, was at the Battle of York, or Marston Moor, where he did good service, was afterward taken Prisoner, but got free and having Married a second Wife he returned to New England, the year before our Mother died, and not long after removed himself to New London near whereunto (viz) at Stonington he now liveth, having 3 sons John, William, and George, 4 or 5 Daughters . . . . . 3 of his Daughters are Marryed to Stanton, Palmer, and Cheesebrook, all living at present in the same Town."

The family tradition that George served in Cromwell's Army is thus verified by his own brother's account. The story is also told that he was wounded and was nursed at the house of John Borodell by his daughter Ann, whom he married.

He removed to New London, Conn., after his return to this country, and a few years later to Stonington, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life.

He served as Deputy from New London to the Connecticut General Court, Sept. 1653, May 1654, and Feb. 1657; and from Stonington, Oct. 1671, Oct. 1674, May 1675, May 1678, Oct. 1682, May and Oct. 1683, May, July and Oct. 1684, May and Oct. 1685, May 1686, May 1687, Sept. 1689, May, Sept. and Oct. 1693, and May 1694. He was thus in the public service until the end of his life; but his chief fame was in military affairs, for which his participation in the English Civil War had prepared him. He was called Captain in 1653, when first mentioned in Connecticut records, but no record of appointment is found, and it may then have been a courtesy title, based on his having held a commission in England. He served on the War Committee for New London in 1653 and 1654, when war threatened with the Dutch. Although 56 years old, he served as Captain in King Philip's War in 1676, being in command of the New London County Troop, and second in command of the Army. He was appointed Provost Marshal, May 1677. In Sept. 1689 he was chosen Captain of volunteers to go against the enemy. [Conn. THOMAS DIMMOCK

Barnstable, Mass.

(ELDER) THOMAS[1] DIMMOCK, born , died at Barnstable, Mass., 1658; married ANN ———.

He was one of the grantees, with Rev. Joseph Hull, of the lands in the town of Barnstable in 1639. He was elected an Elder of the Church, 7 Aug. 1650.

He was admitted freeman of Plymouth Colony, 3 Dec. 1639. He served as Committee (or Deputy) for Barnstable to the Plymouth General Court, Dec. 1639, June 1640, June 1641, June 1642, Oct. 1643, June 1648, June 1649, and June 1650. He was appointed Magistrate at Barnstable, June 1640, and June 1644. In Sept. 1642 he was on the Council of War. He was appointed Lieutenant for Barnstable, Oct. 1643; in Mar. 1645/6, he was presented for neglecting to exercise their men in arms, but was discharged, and he was confirmed Lieutenant, July 1646. Samuel Davis settled first in Watertown, Mass. He was admitted to the First Church in Boston, 31 May 1646, by letter from the Church at Watertown, and Anna wife of Samuel was admitted 17 Apr. 1647.

"Ane" Davis the wife of Samuel Davis and Hannah her eldest child were remembered in the will of Jeremiah Norcross of Watertown, 15 Sept. 1654; he called Mrs. Davis his brother's daughter.

The older Davis children, Hannah, Abigail, and Gershom (b. abt. 1643), are not found recorded; but in Boston records are found the younger children: Mary (called Susanna at birth, but baptized Mary), b. 4, bapt. 31 May 1646; Susanna, b. 25, bapt. 28 May 1648; and Priscilla, b. 3 Aug., bapt. 15 Sept. 1650.

Samuel Davies and William Davies were made freemen in May 1645 [Shurtleff's Records of Massachusetts Bay, 2-294.] Perhaps Samuel Davis was a younger brother of William Davis of Roxbury, Mass., who named one of his older sons Samuel; also William had a son Ichabod, and Samuel's daughter Hannah married into a Roxbury family and named a son Ichabod Griggs.

The will of Samuel Davis of Braintree, dated 2 May 1672, proved 4 July 1672, gave a third of his estate to his wife Anna; and remembered his daughters Hannah Griggs and Abigail Townsend, son Gershom Davis, daughter Mary Townsend, daughter Priscilla ("she being lately married"), and granddaughter Hannah Griggs. The inventory showed an estate of £128. [Suffolk Probate, Docket 598; vol. 7, p. 219.]

WILLIAM DENISON

Roxbury, Mass.

WILLIAM[1] DENISON, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, co. Herts, England,

* The John Denison who received a lot in Voluntown, Conn. [Bodge, op. cit., p. 443] was, like all the Voluntown grantees, a Connecticut soldier. Waters, in his history of Ipswich, credits John Denison also with service in the Quebec Expedition of 1691.

3 Feb. 1571, buried at Roxbury, Mass., 25 Jan. 1653/4; married at Bishop's Stortford, 7 Nov. 1603, MARGARET (CHANDLER) MONCK, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, 13 Oct. 1577, buried at Roxbury, 3 Feb. 1645/6, daughter of John and Joan (———) Chandler, and widow of Henry Monck.

He was son of John Denyson of Thorley, Hertfordshire, who was living at Bishop's Stortford at least as early as 1566 and died there of the plague and was buried 4 Dec. 1582. His mother was Agnes Willie, who married second, at Bishop's Stortford, 1 May 1584, John Gase. William's brother Edward settled in Ireland in 1631 and had a son John, Major of a Regiment and Deputy-Governor of Cork. William's youngest brother, George (1582-1642), remained in Stortford.

William and his family, except the eldest son John, came to New England in 1631 and settled in Roxbury, Mass. The first minister at Roxbury, Rev. John Eliot, known as the Apostle to the Indians, in his record of church members wrote: "William Dennison, he brought 3 children to N. E. all sons: Daniel, Edward, & George." Also, "Margret Dennison, the wife of William Dennison, It pleased God to work vpon her heart & change it in her ancient years, after she came to this Land; & joyned to the church in the yeare 1632."

His son, Major-General Daniel Denison, left an autobiography written in 1672 and addressed to his grandchildren, but not published until 1892. He stated that "my Dear father" was named William, and that the name of "my dear Mother" was Chandler.

Gen. Denison also wrote that, after the death of his brother William in Holland—"We were now but four Brothers left (viz.) John, Daniel, Edward and George. John and myself were bred schollars at Cambridge, where I continued till after I had taken my first Degree, my father though very well seated in Stratford [should be Stortford], hearing of the then famous transplantation to New England, unsetled himself and recalling me from Cambridge removed himself and family in the year 1631 to New England, and brought over with him myself being about 19 years of age, and my two younger Brothers, Edward, and George, leaving my eldest Brother John behind him in England, Marryed with a good portion, who was a minister, and lived about Pelham or in Hartford shier, not far from Stratford [Stortford] where we were born.

"My father brought with him into New England a very good Estate and settled himself at Roksbury, and there Lived though somewhat weakning his Estate) till the year 1653 in January when he died, having buried my Mother about Eight years before."

William Denison was made a freeman, 3 July 1632. He was chosen Constable of Roxbury, 4 Mar. 1633/4, and served as Deputy to the Massachusetts General Court, Mar. 1634/5. [Shurtleff's Records of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, 1-112, 135, 367.] Qualifying ancestor, Society of Colonial Wars.

His eldest son, John Denison, who remained in England, was educated at Queen's College, Cambridge (M.A., 1627), and became vicar at Standon, co. Herts. William's third surviving son, Daniel, was educated at King's College and Emmanuel, Cambridge University, but after receiving his B.A. (1629/30) was recalled by his father to join the family in migrating to New England. Daniel married a daughter of Gov. Thomas Dudley, settled in Ipswich, Mass., was Assistant of the Colony for nearly thirty years, and rose to be Major-General of the colony forces.

William's second son and namesake (William) went with the English army to Holland in 1624 to attempt to raise the Siege of Breda, and never returning, is supposed to have lost his life there.

(CAPTAIN) GEORGE[2] DENISON, baptized at Bishop's Stortford, co. Herts, England, 10 Dec. 1620, died at Hartford, Conn., 23 Oct. 1694; married first, in 1640, Bridget Tompson, baptized at Preston Capes, co. Northants, England, 11 Sept. 1622, died at Roxbury, Mass., Aug. 1643, daughter of John and Alice (Freeman) Tompson; married second, in England, about 1645, ANN BORODELL, who died at Stonington, Conn., 26 Sept. 1712, aged 97.

His brother, Gen. Daniel Denison, wrote in 1672: "My two brothers Edward and George had all the Estate my father left between them, being both marryed long before my father's death; my Brother George buried his first Wife in the year 1643, went into England was a Souldier ther above a year, was at the Battle of York, or Marston Moor, where he did good service, was afterward taken Prisoner, but got free and having Married a second Wife he returned to New England, the year before our Mother died, and not long after removed himself to New London near whereunto (viz) at Stonington he now liveth, having 3 sons John, William, and George, 4 or 5 Daughters . . . . . 3 of his Daughters are Marryed to Stanton, Palmer, and Cheesebrook, all living at present in the same Town."

The family tradition that George served in Cromwell's Army is thus verified by his own brother's account. The story is also told that he was wounded and was nursed at the house of John Borodell by his daughter Ann, whom he married.

He removed to New London, Conn., after his return to this country, and a few years later to Stonington, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life.

He served as Deputy from New London to the Connecticut General Court, Sept. 1653, May 1654, and Feb. 1657; and from Stonington, Oct. 1671, Oct. 1674, May 1675, May 1678, Oct. 1682, May and Oct. 1683, May, July and Oct. 1684, May and Oct. 1685, May 1686, May 1687, Sept. 1689, May, Sept. and Oct. 1693, and May 1694. He was thus in the public service until the end of his life; but his chief fame was in military affairs, for which his participation in the English Civil War had prepared him. He was called Captain in 1653, when first mentioned in Connecticut records, but no record of appointment is found, and it may then have been a courtesy title, based on his having held a commission in England. He served on the War Committee for New London in 1653 and 1654, when war threatened with the Dutch. Although 56 years old, he served as Captain in King Philip's War in 1676, being in command of the New London County Troop, and second in command of the Army. He was appointed Provost Marshal, May 1677. In Sept. 1689 he was chosen Captain of volunteers to go against the enemy. [Conn. THOMAS DIMMOCK

Barnstable, Mass.

(ELDER) THOMAS[1] DIMMOCK, born , died at Barnstable, Mass., 1658; married ANN ———.

He was one of the grantees, with Rev. Joseph Hull, of the lands in the town of Barnstable in 1639. He was elected an Elder of the Church, 7 Aug. 1650.

He was admitted freeman of Plymouth Colony, 3 Dec. 1639. He served as Committee (or Deputy) for Barnstable to the Plymouth General Court, Dec. 1639, June 1640, June 1641, June 1642, Oct. 1643, June 1648, June 1649, and June 1650. He was appointed Magistrate at Barnstable, June 1640, and June 1644. In Sept. 1642 he was on the Council of War. He was appointed Lieutenant for Barnstable, Oct. 1643; in Mar. 1645/6, he was presented for neglecting to exercise their men in arms, but was discharged, and he was confirmed Lieutenant, July 1646. [Shurtleff's Records of the Plymouth Colony, 1-126, 137, 155; 2-16, 40, 47, 63, 73, 97, 105, 123, 144, 154.]

The suggestion in Barnstable Families that his wife Ann was daughter of William Hammond of Watertown and sister of Elizabeth, wife of Samuel House, and Ann, second wife of Rev. John Lothrop, has little merit in our

His will, dated 24 July 1725, named with others, his wife Elizabeth and daughter Ruth Kingsbury. Essex County records also refer to the interest his children had in the estate of their grandfather Ayer.

He fought under Capt. Thomas Lathrop and was one of the few who escaped after the engagement of Bloody Brook. He was later impressed for service in King Philip's War, 30 Nov. 1675, under Capt. Samuel Appleton, and was badly wounded at the Great Swamp Fight, 19 Dec. 1675. On 17 Nov. 1735, his son John received a lot for this service in Narragansett Township No. 1, now known as Buxton, Maine. [G. M. The family tradition that George served in Cromwell's Army is thus verified by his own brother's account. The story is also told that he was wounded and was nursed at the house of John Borodell by his daughter Ann, whom he married.

He removed to New London, Conn., after his return to this country, and a few years later to Stonington, Conn., where he spent the remainder of his life.

He served as Deputy from New London to the Connecticut General Court, Sept. 1653, May 1654, and Feb. 1657; and from Stonington, Oct. 1671, Oct. 1674, May 1675, May 1678, Oct. 1682, May and Oct. 1683, May, July and Oct. 1684, May and Oct. 1685, May 1686, May 1687, Sept. 1689, May, Sept. and Oct. 1693, and May 1694. He was thus in the public service until the end of his life; but his chief fame was in military affairs, for which his participation in the English Civil War had prepared him. He was called Captain in 1653, when first mentioned in Connecticut records, but no record of appointment is found, and it may then have been a courtesy title, based on his having held a commission in England. He served on the War Committee for New London in 1653 and 1654, when war threatened with the Dutch. Although 56 years old, he served as Captain in King Philip's War in 1676, being in command of the New London County Troop, and second in command of the Army. He was appointed Provost Marshal, May 1677. In Sept. 1689 he was chosen Captain of volunteers to go against the enemy. [Conn. THOMAS DIMMOCK

Barnstable, Mass.

(ELDER) THOMAS[1] DIMMOCK, born , died at Barnstable, Mass., 1658; married ANN ———.

He was one of the grantees, with Rev. Joseph Hull, of the lands in the town of Barnstable in 1639. He was elected an Elder of the Church, 7 Aug. 1650.

He was admitted freeman of Plymouth Colony, 3 Dec. 1639. He served as Committee (or Deputy) for Barnstable to the Plymouth General Court, Dec. 1639, June 1640, June 1641, June 1642, Oct. 1643, June 1648, June 1649, and June 1650. He was appointed Magistrate at Barnstable, June 1640, and June 1644. In Sept. 1642 he was on the Council of War. He was appointed Lieutenant for Barnstable, Oct. 1643; in Mar. 1645/6, he was presented for neglecting to exercise their men in arms, but was discharged, and he was confirmed Lieutenant, July 1646. WILLIE, DENISON AND ABBOTT FAMILIES OF BISHOP'S STORTFORD, CO. HERTS, ENGLAND

CONTRIBUTED BY DR. SPENCER MILLER
Member of the New York Genealogical & Biographical Society

In the July 1930 RECORD, I contributed three generations of the Abbott family in Bishop's Stortford, Co. Herts, England, up to George Abbott (bap. May 22, 1617), who settled in Andover, Mass. in 1643. Since then a personal search of Parish Registers of nearly thirty churches in and near Bishop's Stortford has yielded valuable data respecting early ancestors of the Abbott and Denison families, who emigrated from Bishop's Stortford to New England between 1630 and 1640. This new data makes it necessary to modify and add to my July 1930 contribution.

John Denison, the father of William Denison of Roxbury, Mass., died of the plague and was buried in Bishop's Stortford, Dec. 4, 1582, leaving his widow Agnes Denison, who married John Gase (Gace) the "first daye of Maye 1584." In several genealogies, notably one published in Cutter's New England Families (1913 ed., p. 57), it was asserted that the widow Agnes was a sister of Thomas Miller, Bridgett Abbott and Margaret Hake. This error apparently arose from a misinterpretation of the following:

Feet of Fines, Herts, Easter, 38 Elizabeth, 1596.

Final agreement made in the Queen's Court at Westminster, from Easter Day in one month, 38 Elizabeth, before the Queen's Justices there, between John Gace & Thomas Myller, plaintiffs, & George Abbott & Bridget his wife, Edward Hake, gent. & Margaret his wife, deforciants, of 2 messuages, 1 barn, 2 gardens, one orchard & 5 acres of land in Bishop's Stortford als. Stortford, whereof a plea of covenant was summoned between them, that is, that the said George, Bridget & Edward & Margaret have acknowledged the same to be the right of John, as of their gift & that they have remised & quit-claimed for themselves & their heirs to the said John & Thomas & the heirs of John, for ever. And further for themselves & the heirs of George & Edward have granted to warrant John & Thomas & the heirs of John in the same against themselves & the heirs of George & Edward for ever. For which grant, acknowledgement, &c., John & Thomas have given them 80 sterling. (Herts).

This new data proves that John Denison's widow was Agnes Willie; George Abbott's wife was Bridgett Willie; Edward Hake's wife Margaret may have been a Willie. But to interpret the relationship of John Gace, tanner, (2nd husband of Agnes Willie, widow of John Denison) & Mr. Thomas Miller, M.A., owner of Dane O'Coys, is most difficult. If Thomas Miller married Agnes Denison, sister of John Denison, or a Willie sister, he would be brother-in-law to John Gace's wife and George Abbott's wife. Furthermore, if Thomas Miller married the sister or daughter of John Gace, then the relationship would be understood. However, the identity of the wife of Thomas Miller is not established, excepting that her name was Agnes to her later children and possibly all of them.

The Will of John Gace (29 Aug. 1602), published on p. 655 of Waters Genealogical Gleanings in England, provided for the use of the poor a sum to be paid "to James Morley, Gent, Thomas Perye, Gent, John Miller the elder and 'Maister' Thomas Miller". This Will was witnessed by four men, one of whom was *George Abbott.

Thomas Miller lived 11 years after the birth of Joseph Miller, the last of 13 children, and his mother Agnes lived 27 years after Joseph was born.

Thorley Search

The history of Thorley reaches back before the year 1086, for the Manor of Thorley is mentioned in the Doomsday Book. St. James Church was more than 200 years old before the Parish Register began (1539). Its first pastor was instituted in 1327. Rev. Robert Wylly was rector from 1474 to 1493 and may have been the grandfather of John Willie who married Joan Marsead. Thorley is 29 miles north of London. Its population as late as 1801 was only 269—in 55 houses. In 1901 it had 622 in the Ecclesiastical Parish.

With the aid of the Rev. J. E. I. Procter, M.A., Rector of St. James Parish, Thorley, in the rural deanery of Bishop's Stortford, I transcribed from the Thorley Parish Register the following:

1540, Oct. 30, John Willie, married Joan Marsead.†
1541, Aug. 4, John Willie, baptized.
1543, Nov. 8, "Emmerit" Willie, baptized (possibly intended for Emma, and possibly changed to Agnes).
1548, Nov. 13, Mary Willie, baptized.
1551, Feb. 1, Bridgett Willie, baptized.
1561, May 11, John Denison married Agnes Willie.

This last entry establishes the family name of Agnes, widow of John Denison, to be Willie and not Miller. In the writing of the period, a capital letter M was quite similar to the capital letter W. The Rev. Procter long experienced in deciphering the early writings pronounced the word to be Willie and the proof appears in the Wills of John Denison and John Willie, abstracts of which follow.

No more entries of Denisons or Willies were found between 1561 and 1583, for John Denison had moved to Bishop's Stortford.

1583, Jul. 21, Joan Willie, dau. of Edward (son of John Willie) bap. Witnesses: George Willie, Susanna Adams.
1583, Sep. 13, Mary Dennison, dau. of William (bro. of John Denison) bap.

1596 John Gace & Thos. Miller: (buys of) George Abbott & Bridget his wife, Edward Hake gent. and Margaret, his wife, two messuages and land in Bishop's Stortford.*
1602 John Gace bur. Sept. 2. Will mentions "Maister" Thomas Miller and Geo. Abbott.
1610 Will of Nicholas Brett of Much Hadham, Co. Herts, Eng., mentions dau. Mary Willie & her husband George Willy (Herts Genl. vol. 3, p. 82).
1612 Will of George Willey of Thorley dated 10 Sept. 1612—wife Mary (Brett) (Ibid. p. 83).

THE WILLIE FAMILY OF THORLEY & BISHOP'S STORTFORD

Spelled Wyllaye, Wylleye, Welley, Willie, Willey, Wylly.

The will of Agnes Wylleye of Thorley, dated 13 June, 1555, leaves everything to her son John Wylleye. This Agnes Wylleye, evidently a widow, is probably she who in 1545 paid a subsidy tax of 12 pence in Thorley. In the same year, 1545, a John Willeye of Thorley paid a subsidy tax of 10 pence (Herts. Gen. Vol. 2, p. 276).

In STORTFORD in same year John Willeye paid 22 shillings and Edward Willey paid 3 shillings & 4 pence (Ibid. p. 277).

In "1548 John Wylley, Senior: (buys of) John Wylley, junior, 3 messuages and land in Thorley" (Herts Gen. Vol. 1, p. 201).

Thus we conclude that this Agnes was the widow of "John Wylley, senior" of Thorley and the mother of John Willie who married Joan Marsead. Also that in Bishop's Stortford a separate branch of the Willey family existed.

The will of John Wyllie of Thorley, Co. Herts is dated:—1 May 1574.—John Wyllie of Thorley Co. Hertf. yeoman. To be buried in the churche of Thorley agaynst my stole where commonly I sit—To my son Edward Wylleye the ten^{t}. where I now dwell & all its lands etc in Thorley & Sabridgworth (my free lands & 1 acre of copy in Donnynges) & 2 acres more copy in Broodly comonfeld—to him & his heires males with revercion to his brother George Willie. I have surrendered all my other copyholds in Thorley or elsewhere to my son George Willie & his heirs males with revercion to his brother Edward. Wit. Christopher Taton, clark, William Osborn, Wilm Barnard Pd at Stortford 8 March 1575. [Comm. London; Essex & Herts. (Original)]

This will mentions John's wife Joan and three children—Edward, George and Grace, not transcribed by the writer. Daughters Mary, Bridget and Grace receive £20 each, but fails to mention his daughter Agnes, wife of John Denison, whom she married in 1561, altho he appoints as his overseer "my son-in-law John Denison". Mary and Grace were probably unmarried and we know that Bridget was not then married to George Abbott for they had no children until 1581. Evidently Agnes had previously received her share.

A search through the Stortford (St. Michaels Church) Parish Register from 1561 fails to find any Denison marriages, baptisms or burials earlier than Dec. 4, 1582, the date of burial of John Denison. Glasscock's Records of St. Michaels fails to mention any Denison until 1582 (p. 61), "John Denyson pd. 9 pence".

In the three volumes of Herts Antiquary & Genealogist the earliest reference to a Denison is in the index where a William Denyson is listed among payers of subsidy tax 1545 in Hadham Parva (Little Hadham), a small town four miles west of Bishop's Stortford, where the Parish Register contains several references to Denisons (Vol. 1, p. 166). The next reference was in 1563 where John Denyson, who in 1561 had married Agnes Willey in Thorley, was recorded as purchasing a home in Bishop's Stortford from John and Joane Chandler. These Chandlers, by the way, had a daughter Margaret Chandler who married Wm. Denison in 1603 (Vol. 1, p. 338).

After 1631 the Denison family scattered to many lands leaving "Mr." George Denison, born in March 1582, (three months after his father John Denison had died with the plague). "Mr." George Denison was buried 1640. His son George and his wife Mary both died in 1678. There are no further entries in the Parish Register of Denison baptisms up to 1652.

Digest of Wills of George and John Denison—1676 and 1678—are published in N.E.H.G. Reg., Vol. 47, p. 409. These Wills name Robert Wolley, Mathew Wolley Executor—Cousen Wm Powell, Cousin Ann Read, bro.Thomas Goose—sister Ann Powell, etc. but no Denisons are mentioned.

Denisons lived in Bishop's Stortford from 1563 to 1678—115 years.

The Will of John Denison of Thorley, County Herts (Tailor), is dated, 10 November, 1582. (buried Dec. 4, 1582).—I commend my body to the earth, from whence it came.

I bequeath to my wife, Agnes (Willie), my tenement in Stortford, now in my tenure, for life, with remainder to my eldest son, John & the heirs of his body, with contingent remainders, in default of issue, to my 2nd son, William, my 3d son, Edward, to my unborn child, (George) if a male; to my daughters, to Edward Willey & their heirs; in case it comes to said Edward Willey, he to pay my brother William & my sisters, Jane & Agnes, £10 each.

To my son, John, my bedstead in the parlour & £6.13.4 at the age of 21.
To my 2nd son, William, £20, at age of 21 (bap. 1571).
To my 3d son, Edward, 20 marks, at age of 21 (bap. 1575).
To my daughter, Luce, £20 at age of 18 (bap. 1567. bur. Dec. 9, 1582).
To my daughter, Elizabeth, 20 marks at age of 18 (bap. 1579).
To my unborn child, 20 marks (George bap. 17 Mar. 1582).
To George Grene's widow, of Much Hadham, 5s.
To George Abbott's wife, 10 s. (Bridget Willie, bap. Feb. 1551).
To Mary Willey, 20s. (bap. Oct. 10, 1553).
To Grace & George Willey, 10s each & to Edward Willey, 20s.
To the poor of Thorley, 6s. 8d.

Residuary legatee:—my wife, Agnes. Executors:—my wife & brother-in-law, Edward Willey. Overseers:—Piers Palmer, Nicholas Brett.

Signed:—(mark). Witnesses:—Willm. Hampton, John Clarke, Symon Nycoll.

Proved:—1 March, 1582–3, by John Brampton, proctor to the executors. (Commissary Court of London, Essex & Herts, 1 Mar. 1582–3).

This will of John Denison mentions his brother Wm. Denison and sisters Jane and Agnes. He bequeathed "To George Abbott's wife (Bridget Willie) 10s" and mentions "brother-in-law Edward Willey"—further proof that George Abbott's wife was Bridget Willie, sister of Agnes (Willie) Denison.

Denisons of Thorley, Co. Herts, England

John[1] Denison of Thorley had a brother William Denison and sisters Jane and Agnes Denison. John Denison moved to Bishop's Stortford before 1566, for in that year he was "collector for the poor" in Bishop's Stortford and in 1582 paid a tax in Stortford (Glasscock's Records).

John[1] Denison of Thorley, b. about 1540, died of the plague, buried in Stortford, Dec. 4, 1582; m. Agnes Willie, dau. of John & Joan (Marsead) Willie, bp. about 1544 died ——: m. 11 May, 1561 in St. James Church, Thorley; m. 2nd John Gace, tanner, who died Sept. 1602.

NOTE. Seven of these children were given the same names as those given the Denison and Willey children in Bishops Stortford and Thorley; to wit: Elizabeth, John, Edward, Margaret, Mary, Sarah, William.

The will of Edward[3] Willey, son of John[2] and Joan (Marsead) Willie, of Thorley, Co. Herts, yeoman, dated, 11 September, 1615. I bequeath to my daughter Joan (bap. 1583) £20, & to my daughter Sarah Willey, £5 & £15 more at her age of 32, if she marry with consent of my wife Elizabeth, my son Edward, my cousin William Dennyson of Stortford. To my daughter Elizabeth, £5. & £15 (as above). To my daughter, Mary, the like. To my sons, George & Daniel Willey, £20. each at their ages of 24. To my wife my freehold tenement in Thorley called Allgooddes and my crofts called Eatherscroft and Gayeshall, with remainder to my son Edward. If my daughter, Joan, be dead, her legacy to be divided among her children by Mr. Richard Woolley. Residuary legatee & executrix:—my wife, Elizabeth. Overseers:—William Dennyson of Stortford. Signed:—Edward Willey. Witnesses:—Robt. Dukes, Edward Warner (mark). Proved:—10 January, 1615–16. (Commissary Court of London, Essex & Herts, 10 Jan. 1615–16 [torn], Abstract.)

This will proves Edward to be the son of John and Joan Willie, because Edward refers to "my cousin William Dennyson of Stortford." His wife Elizabeth, named as executrix, was Elizabeth Jardfield and their marriage was recorded in the Parish Register of the Church of St. Michaels, Bishop's Stortford, as follows:

1581 Edward Welley and Elizabeth Jardfeild—Jan. 18.

The Wylley Family of Bishops Stortford

About 1483 John Wylley paid 12 pence church rental in Stortford on Lynchwell, meadow (page 140 Glasscock's Records St. Michaels church) and in 1490 William Willey "harness maker made repairs to the church" (Ibid. p. 21).

This clearly indicates that the Wylley family was established in Bishops Stortford at least 60 years before the Parish Registers were begun in Stortford; viz, 1561.

became the real leader of the great unorganized army of the Indians. His warriors far outnumbered the other tribes, besides being better trained and equipped, despite the severe losses they had met at the great fort.

There is little doubt that the confederated tribes determined to drive the English out from the Connecticut valley, and to hold it. After locating his people in safe retreats, Canonchet, with a large party of his warriors, returned towards his own country, in order to recover some of the large quantities of corn secreted there, and especially for seed-corn to plant the English fields, from which they had driven the owners. A large raiding party from the various tribes came southward also. It is probable that the two companies were not far from each other, when Capt. Peirse arrived at Rehoboth, and they probably united in his destruction, as related above.

After the battle with Capt. Peirse (March 26, 1676) the Indians made a furious attack upon Rehoboth upon the 28th day, burning some forty houses and nearly as many barns. Upon the 29th they appeared at Providence, and though the aged Roger Williams, the life-long friend of the southern tribes, went forth to meet them, unarmed, and leaning upon his staff, he was met by their old men, and warned by them that it would not be safe, even for him, to venture amongst them; and they said also, that there were many "stranger Indians" mixed with their tribes. He was thus forced to retire to the garrison-house with the rest of the inhabitants, while the Indians advanced and burned some thirty houses of the town. Robert Beers was slain, it is said, at this time. The Indians seem, after that, to have broken up into small prowling bands, which scouted upon the borders of the outlying towns, making an assault here and there, as opportunity seemed to offer, — April 9th at Billerica; April 19th at Andover, where they killed Joseph Abbot and captured his younger brother Timothy, burned the house of Mr. Faulkner and wounded Roger Marks; while another band, the same day, burned the deserted houses at Marlborough; and still another party appeared at Hingham and Weymouth, where they killed two men, one at each place.

On April 20th they renewed the attack upon Hingham, where they burned the houses of Israel Hobart, Anthony Sprague, Joseph Jones and Nathaniel Chubbuck. On April 21st the main body of the Indians in Massachusetts swept in around Sudbury, of which attack detailed account has been given heretofore. Account has been given also of other attacks and operations in the Northern parts.

In the meantime the Connecticut people were bestirring themselves, and had quietly enlisted some eighty of the friendly Indians of the Mohegans and Pequods, and a band of the Niantics, whose Sachem, Ninigret, although a Narraganset, had remained neutral, in appearance, at least. Forty-seven English soldiers were joined with these, under command of Capt. George Denison of Stonington, and Capt. James Avery of New London, Connecticut. The Niantics were led by the chief Catapazat; the Pequods by Casassinamon; the Mohegans by Oneco, son of Uncas. This force, apparently unknown to the scouts of Canonchet, approached Pawtucket, and captured one of his guards in the vicinity, with two women, one of whom confessed that Canonchet was near at hand with but a small guard. With this news, confirmed by their scouts soon afterwards, the force pushed on and soon came in sight of the wigwam of the Sachem whom they sought. When the quick ear of the chief caught the sound of an approaching body of men, he sent two of his attendants to the top of a hill near by to ascertain the cause, and these not returning, but fleeing for their lives, two more were sent, one of whom returned with the word that the enemy was close upon him. He seized his gun and sought to escape, but in his flight he came near a party of the scouts, who gave chase so closely that he was unable to elude them, and finally was forced to cross a small stream, where, entering hastily, his foot slipped on a small stone and he fell, wetting his gun, which was thus rendered useless, and he was left defenceless; and at the mishap, he confessed afterwards, "his heart turned within him, and he became as a rotten stick, void of strength." Monopoide, a Pequod Indian, was nearest him, and overtook him within thirty rods of the river, and captured him without any attempt at resistance. The pursuit was thus strenuous, because the chief had been obliged in his flight to cast off his blanket, and then his lace-coat, which he had of late received from the English, and then his belt of wampum, and was thus recognized.

But though helpless and captive, he was still the proud and unconquered chief; and when young Robert Stanton, an interpreter, and among the first of the English to come up, began to question him, he turned away haughtily, saying, "You much child, no understand matters of war; let your brother or your chief come, him I will answer." Even Mr. Hubbard was struck by his noble bearing and heroism, and in his "Postscript," written after the first part of his history was printed, compares him to one of the old Romans, Attilius Regulus, since he would not accept of his own life upon compliance with the English. The condition seems to have been that he would send one of his Counsellors commanding his people to yield to the English, and thus save his life. His resolution was not to be shaken by any threats or bribes; and when he was told of his sentence of death, he replied that he "liked it well, that he should die before his heart was soft, or he had spoken anything unworthy of himself." He was taken to Stonington and there shot by Oneco, son of Uncas, his life-long enemy, and two Sachems of the Pequods, of equal rank.

Denison

Taken from a tombstone in the Old Ipswich Burying Ground, Massachusetts, as illustrated in Eugene Zieber's Heraldry in America.

The cusped form of the shield came into use in the 15th Century and was very popular during the Tudor Period. The closed helmet denotes an 'Esquire' or gentleman, and the cutlass in the crest probably refers to military or naval services. The motto, Domus Grata is translated literally 'hospitable house,' by implication 'friendly house' or 'beloved home.'

The Society and the Homestead

By Helen Wheeler Denison

AUGUST 16, 1930, nearly 700 descendants of Capt. George and Ann Borodell Denison gathered on the hillside east of the Denison Homestead. Beneath a tent spread in the orchard—birthplace of the famous Denison Redding apple—they were guests of Ann Borodell Denison Gates at a delicious luncheon. Afterward they organized the Denison Society, thus realizing a long-cherished dream of their hostess.

A daughter of seafaring Capt. Edgar Denison, Mrs. Gates was brought up in the Homestead by her aunts Sarah and Phoebe from whom her husband, N. Stanton Gates, purchased it and presented it to her. Both envisioned this historic home as a family shrine and museum. With this in view, the Denison Society was incorporated. When she died in 1941 she bequeathed to it the house, some 150 acres (part of the original land grant to Capt. George), and after some personal legacies, "the residue of her estate."

Mrs. Gates was of the eighth generation to live on these premises; of the sixth whose home was the present house, built in 1717 by George Denison 3rd. Thus the Homestead has never been out of the family. When he moved here from New London in 1654, Capt. Denison built a lean-to surrounded by a palisade. Here the family lived until 1663 when he tore down the stockade—since the victory in King Philip's War the Indians were no longer a menace—and built what he call "my mansion hous." It has long been known locally as Pequotsepos Manor.

The following list of owners and their children born here was prepared by Mrs. Herbert S. Davis of Mystic, for many years Secretary of the Society.

Capt George Denison m Ann Borodell lived here in his palisade until he built his "mansion hous." Their son:

William Denison b 1655 in the palisade, m Sarah Stanton. Their son:

George Denison b 1692 in the mansion hous, m Lucy Gallup:

Edgar Denison m Margaret Manderville; their children:
Lydia M. b 1862 *Ann Borodell b 1866

Ann Borodell Denison m Nathan Stanton Gates; one son who died in early youth. Upon her death, Feb. 9, 1941, the property was deeded to the Denison Society, Inc.

"Aunt Annie's" ideals have been the Society's inspiration. To realize her oft-expressed intention, the house was restored accurately under supervision of a distinguished antiquarian architect, the late J. Frederick Kelly. It is a unique restoration, successively; that is, each room of a different period; a 1717 kitchen, Revolutionary and Civil War bedrooms, etc.

Since nine generations of Denisons had thrown away nothing but burned matchsticks, ample furniture and household equipments were available to furnish every room authentically with family heirlooms. This was done with the expert advice of Mrs. R. T. H. Halsey, an adviser of Williamsburg. No other house open to the public in New England is so restored and furnished. The Homestead is in a class by itself: a vivid, authentic picture of American homelife during two and a half centuries.

Mrs. Gates was a great nature lover. So as a memorial to her, the Society organized the Pequotsepos Wildlife Sanctuary. We incorporated the embryo organization and gave it minute and financial books and a nest egg of $100. Then our members went out and enlisted 100 Sanctuary members and we turned over to them our 150 acres under a 25-year lease at a rental of $1 a year.

Besides up-keep of the Homestead, the Society maintains the old Denison Cemetery at Pequotsepos Brook—Ann Borodell Denison is buried there—and restored Capt. George's gravestone in the yard of the Center Church at Hartford. We publish the Denison Newsletter, to keep members up-to-date on Society and family happenings. Our annual meetings, the first Saturday in August, are a big, friendly family reunion.

But we have always been much more than a mutual-admiration, ancestor-

PEQUOTSEPOS MANOR

This unique museum of American homelife during eight generations and headquarters of The Denison Society, Inc., was built, just west of Capt. Denison's original house, by his grandson, also George Denison, in 1717. Charred oak beams in its frame were salvaged, according to family tradition, from the earlier home which was destroyed by fire.

The Lady of Pequotsepos*

Ann Borodell Denison Gates (1866-1941)

By Williams Haynes

THE Lady of Pequotsepos is no longer here to welcome us and to each it makes a great difference. This day, that grand, old house, this company, can never be quite the same without Ann Borodell Denison Gates. Her friendship did not touch our lives in passing, it gripped us firmly like the strong clasp of her hand. She was a great friend—a warm, loyal, soul to whom friendship was a vital thing of deeds, not words.

Annie Gates, the gracious hostess, would not have us sad and sorrowing on this day of all days. Hers was a forward-looking, joyous spirit. From girlhood she bubbled over with mischievous merriment—

> Quips and Cranks and wanton Wiles,
> Nods and Becks and wreathed Smiles
> Such as hang on Hebe's cheek
> And love to live in dimples sleek:
> Sport that wrinkled Care derides,
> And Laughter holding both his sides.

Even the great pain she suffered almost constantly during the past few years could not quench her "jests and youthful jollity." Her oldest friends all strike the same chord:

"Nobody ever had a keener sense of humor."

"How she did relish a good joke, even a thrumping practical joke on herself."

"What a story-teller she was!"

"She was always the life of the party"—another reason why she is so sorely missed here today.

The best remembered anecdote of her youth links her name with Annie Williams, who later became Mrs. Noyes Palmer, "the two Annies," a pretty pair of madcaps who kept the class taught by Prof. Kimball in the Mystic High School in an uproar. The distracted teacher was but a few years older than his pupils, a handsome young man with violet-blue eyes and a fine tenor voice, the most favored beau of the village. After some particularly outrageous prank played by the two Annies, he lost his temper and ordered them peremptorily to his desk in front of all the class. The birch rod was not spared in those days. The schoolroom was tense with suppressed excitement. They stood there, the guilty pair, cheeks flushed, their eyes downcast. His eyes blazing, Prof. Kimball regarded them fixedly for several minutes. Would he whip them or send them home in utter disgrace? At last he spoke:

"I beg and beseech you, young ladies, please to behave better in school."

The father of Mrs. Gates was Edgar Denison. A strong man with bushy eyebrows, a generous mouth, and a great flowing beard; a sea captain who sailed his vessel 'round the Horn in the prosperous California trade. From one of his voyages he brought back a beautiful bride, Margaret Mandeville whom he had married in Brooklyn. They lived here with his father, Oliver Denison, and two sisters, Sarah and Phoebe, and here their two daughters Lydia and Ann Borodell were born. When Ann was five years old the elder sister died and her father took the grieving mother off with him on his next voyage. She too, died at sea; and so Annie was brought up by her aunts, Sarah and Phoebe. Every Sunday morning her grandfather drove her over to the Road Church, and she sat between those two good ladies in the family pew while Oliver Denison with his famous long cane sat at the end. And every weekday she trudged two miles over to Mystic Bridge to school.

It was a simple life, but not without its pleasures. She joined the popular Rural Reading Circle, a club of young people over which our own Grace Wheeler for many years presided as president. They met in each other's houses and at each meeting one member read a paper. The two Annies became ringleaders in this group, too, and when Grace Wheeler wrote a great epic poem about the Reading Circle members, she penned the following stanza:

> One Denison among the ranks
> Whose name is hard to rhyme
> We give her, though, our heartfelt thanks
> For recitations fine.

Over on the Groton side, a stocky, young man, full of energy, brimming with high spirits, had been growing up along with Annie Denison. He went to work in Ben Morgan's Meat Market and being ambitious, soon opened a fish market of his own. He began buying direct from the fishermen and shipping to New York. Everybody said that Stan Gates was a rising young man who would go far.

He and Annie were kindred spirits, alert and alive, full of fun. They were married on December 11, 1888, in the Denison Homestead. It was a stormy night: only a few intimate friends of the family were there. The young couple went to New York for their honeymoon and then settled down in a tiny house on Pearl Street in Mystic.

Stanton Gates continued to push ahead. He built the icehouse over the hill on what, when I was a boy, was known as the Slaughter House Hill Road, but which we have squeamishly rechristened Mistuxet Avenue. The old building, long a landmark, was destroyed during the 1938 hurricane. Urged on by ambition, Stanton Gates moved to New York, establishing a wholesale fish business in the famous Washington Market. They had a child, Stanton, Jr., a bright little chap, but never robust, who died of appendicitis when he was seven years old.

While living in New York, they came back for summer vacations, Thanksgiving Day, the Christmas Holidays, and most often they stayed here at Pequotsepos. Aunt Sarah had died. Aunt Phoebe had married Reuben Ford and 25 years ago when he too passed on, Phoebe was anxious to move into the village. This old family home was very dear to Ann Borodell Denison Gates. Her husband bought it from Aunt Phoebe and presented it to her.

After Stanton Gates retired they came here to live. Twenty years ago the man who was her life's comrade died; and she carried on alone, living in our midst the useful, hospitable, inspiring life we knew and shall miss.

One hot, muggy summer day several years ago there had been a great many Denison visitors here to see the old Homestead. Seven times she made the trip from attic to cellar, telling these relatives from Maine, from Ohio, from Carolina the story of this house, pointing out its choice relics, answering their innumerable questions. And she was very, very tired. The shadows of the elms stretched far across the beautiful Pequotsepos meadow as the last party drove off and she went out into the kitchen to brew a cup of tea. Suddenly a peremptory rap on the kitchen door, and when she answered it, there stood a big, bluff, hearty man, an utter stranger.

Something of her weariness must have shown in her face because he said, "Yes, here comes another of those damn Denisons to see your house."

She burst into a hearty laugh. "Come in, come in," she called, shoving open the screen door, "I'll bet your mother was a Gallup."

"By George!" he exclaimed, "how did you know that?"

"Because," she answered slyly, "you said 'damned Denison' so naturally."

And, of course, she showed him the house, from attic to cellar, and answered all his threadbare questions. She was never too tired to welcome a Denison to Pequotsepos.

During her later years this Denison home was the core of her existence. She loved it, every plank and every shingle, every stone in the old walls. She cherished all of its memories, her own and those of the family, and she conceived of Pequotsepos as a shrine for all of us of Denison blood. She organized this family into the Denison Society in order that this home might be preserved as a monument to our ancestors; a graphic document of New England history.

We need in these times just such a stimulating tonic for the good Denison blood in our veins. In these days of trial and the more bitter days that seem to lie ahead, we need encouragement from the memory of the hardships and the handicaps that our forefathers here in Connecticut met and conquered. We all need to cherish the example of the unlagging industry, persistence, and hard-bitten courage of Captain George Denison and his sons, yes, and his grandsons even unto the third and fourth generations.

My kinsfolk, Ann Borodell Denison Gates has left to every one of us a precious heritage. Here in Pequotsepos Manor we have something peculiarly, indubitably our own, our household gods, the lares and penates of an American family. It is her monument; the memorial of our great friend. It is our responsibility; our glorious opportunity.

The Ancestry of Capt. George Denison

The earliest known ancestor of Capt George Denison was

I John Denison lived in Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire, England. It is not known where he was born but probably about 1530. The record at Bishop's Stortford shows that John Denison m Agnes Willie 1554. (See sketch of the Willie family) John and Agnes bought home in Stortford of John and Joan Chandler 1563. He died of the Plague Dec 4 1582. His widow m John Gace, May 3 1584. John and Agnes children:

III WILLIAM DENISON (John) b Bishop's Stortford, about 1570; bpt Feb 3 1571; m Nov 7 1603 Margaret Chandler (Monk). (See sketch of Chandler family) William came to America on the Lion with his wife and 3 youngest sons; settled in Roxbury, Mass 1631. John Eliot, Pastor of the First Church of Roxbury and Apostle to the Indians was a tutor of George, his youngest son. Eliot had arrived on the same ship. William was a merchant and must have been a man of means and good education. He was deacon in the First Church of Roxbury, and had a large influence in the Colony. One record states his wife did not unite with the church until some years later. William Denison built a house in Roxbury, Mass; was still standing in 1882. William d Jan 25 1653; wife d Feb 3 1645; both buried in Old Eliot St Cemetery at Roxbury. Their children:

Eliot Quoted on Denisons

WILLIAM DENISON—"John Eliot was grieved when his old friend William Denison and son Edward who scarcely disguised their sympathy for Anne Hutchinson, were disarmed for 'seditious libel' and thrown out of the church. Another son enlisted in Irish Wars. That the Denisons were not banished was perhaps because one son married Patience Dudlay, dau of Gov. Dudley, with whom they lived. That particular Sunday he was pleased to see William Denison and his sons Edward and George back in the church after all these years, and sitting squarely in the Dudley pew. They had made their peace at last.

from "John Eliot" by Carleton Beals, published by Julian Messner, Inc., 8 W 40th St, New York 18, New York.

From church records at Roxbury, Mass.—

"Margaret, wife of William Denison, Sr. It pleased God to work upon her heart and changed it in her ancient years, after she came to this land and joined the church in the year 1632."

Denison

Taken from a tombstone in the Old Ipswich Burying Ground, Massachusetts, as illustrated in Eugene Zieber's Heraldry in America.

The cusped form of the shield came into use in the 15th Century and was very popular during the Tudor Period. The closed helmet denotes an 'Esquire' or gentleman, and the cutlass in the crest probably refers to military or naval services. The motto, Domus Grata is translated literally 'hospitable house,' by implication 'friendly house' or 'beloved home.'

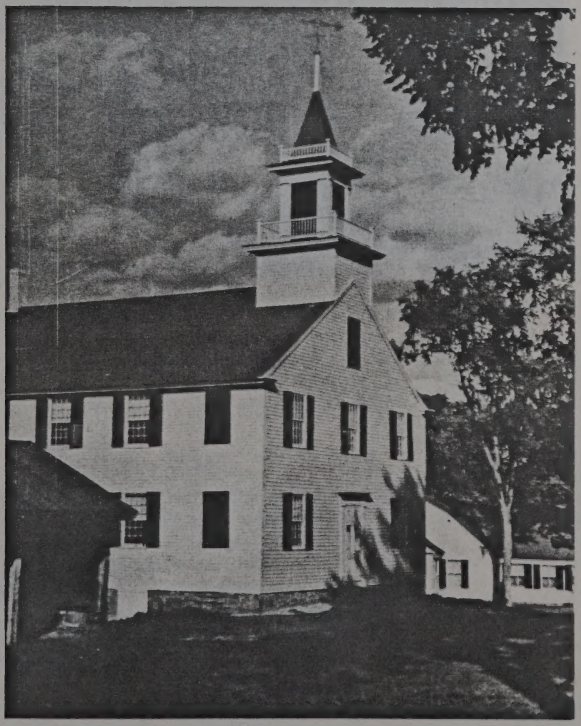
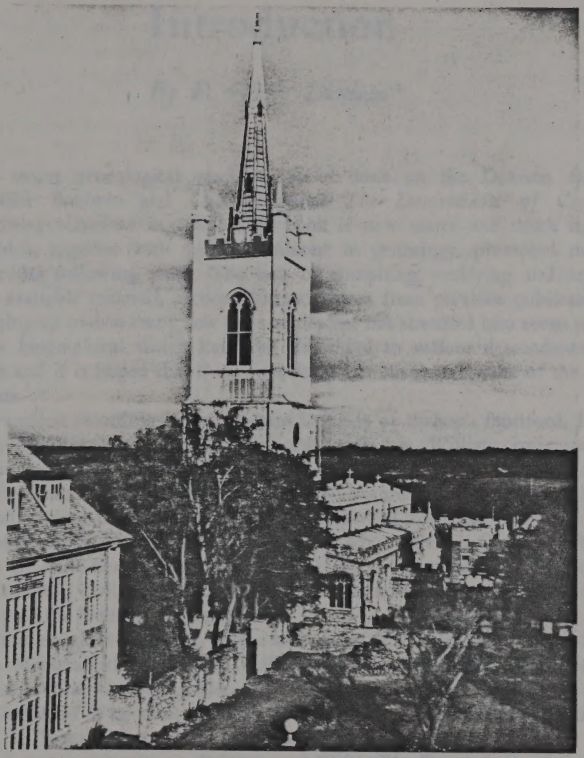
GRAVE OF CAPT. GEORGE DENISON

During 15 sessions George Denison was Deputy for New London or Stonington at the Connecticut General Court, and he died at Hartford, while discharging this public duty, on October 24, 1694. His gravestone, which was cut by an illustrious craftsman, James Stanclift, Sr., is in the yard of the old Center Church, Hartford. His wife is buried in Elm Grove Cemetery, Mystic.

The Old Road Church

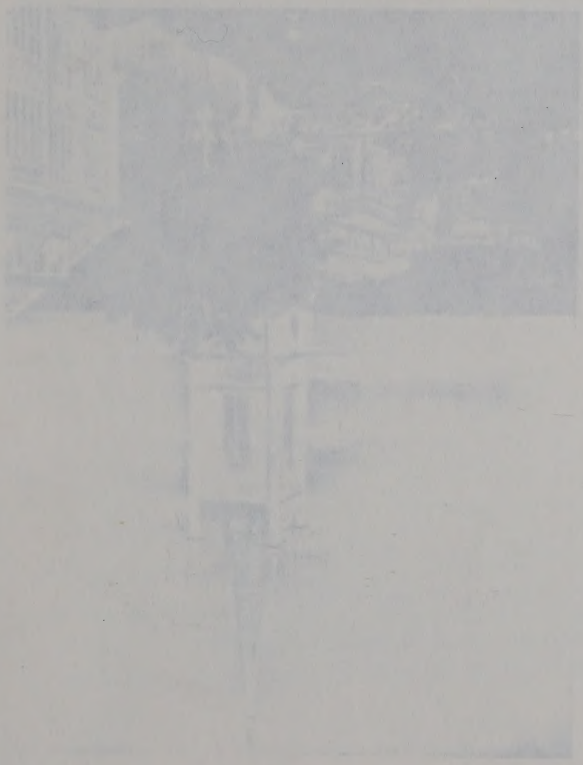
Since September 10, 1674, when Ann Borodell Denison was a "pertaker" at the ordination of James Noyes as first minister, the Denison family have been prominently identified with the 1st Congregational Church of Stonington. Her husband became officially a member in 1684. The Rev. James Noyes, who was pastor for 55 years, was chaplain of the expedition led by Capt. Denison when the Narragansett chief Canonchet was captured and four Noyes grandchildren married Denisons. The present church building (the third on this site) was dedicated October 29, 1827.





ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH

The parish church at Bishop's Stortford was the house of worship of the parents and grandparents of George Denison and here he was baptized in 1620. The greater part of this beautiful building was built about 1400, possibly earlier. Inside, the baptismal font was made about 1150 and the organ was installed before 1490 since the church records show that in that year John Cosyn was the salaried organist. The bells were hung in the tower in 1431.



Introduction

*By E. Glenn Denison

NO major genealogical work has been done on the Denison family since Baldwin and Clift compiled The Descendants of Captain George Denison in 1881. That book is now scarce and much in demand which, together with my own interest in genealogy, prompted me to undertake the following work. The task of compiling, verifying and organizing all available material, incorporating the data from previous publications, and bringing up-to-date many new lines of descent has stretched into seven years. Each new biographical sketch has been submitted to various descendants for correction and it is hoped that this re-checking has eliminated most of the possible errors.

The earliest recording is that of John Denison of Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire, England, born 1530 and died 1582. His son, William, emigrated to Massachusetts in 1631 with three sons, Edward, Daniel and George. The first two left few descendants, and these will be found in the Appendix. The ancestry in England of these three brothers is in the fore part of this book.

Another early emigrant was John Denison who settled in Ontario. His descendants are quite numerous in and near Toronto and several have been prominent in Canadian civil and military affairs. A brochure on these Denisons is in the library of the Denison Homestead.

A third emigrant settled in Maine and one of his descendants founded the Dennison Manufacturing Company, makers of well-known paper specialties.

Several of Captain George Denison's descendants, who were loyalists during the Revolutionary War, went to Nova Scotia where numerous descendants are found today. Several of them are listed in the following pages.

Part I contains the data in Baldwin and Clift's The Descendants of Captain George Denison (1881) supplemented by Descendants of Isaac Denison by Rosalie D. Bowman (1904); Denison Genealogy by George B. Denison (1884); and Ancestors and Descendants of James Post Denison by Harry E. Bolton and E. Glenn Denison (1939), with additional facts and corrections supplied by Donald Lines Jacobus and Josephine Middleton Peck as a result of their researches in original town and church records.

*It is a matter of deep regret that Mr. Denison died December 11, 1962, before the publication of this his magnum opus. The debt all members of the family owe him can never be repaid, but everyone who uses this work should hold him in grateful memory.

Part II is made up of sketches of collateral descendants, chiefly those born since 1881, from family Bible records and individual, personal reports. My plan was to include only those surnamed Denison with the daughters' marriages and lists of their children. But so many descendants of these daughters, especially members of the Denison Society, wished to be included that the descendants of daughters have been added. A few Denisons mentioned have not confirmed their ancestry back to George Denison, but indications lead one to believe they belong to this family.

The records show many variant spellings of the surname. It appears as Deneyson in the Hundred Rolls of England, but Denyson, Denisone, Deniston, have also been found. On the register of St. Michael's Church, Bishop's Stortford, the name of our ancestor is written in 1563 as John Deneysen.

Several theories are propounded as to the origin of the name. I do not know which, if any, is correct. One states it was from the given name, the son of Denis or Dennis, Denison or Dennison. Some connect it with the patron saint of France, St. Denis, a common baptismal name in northeast France from where it is not unlikely the family came to England. Others hold that the name is purely English, derived from the Anglo-Saxon, Denisca, signifying Danish.

I wish to mention especially the following who have contributed greatly to this work:

Mrs. Howard F. Peck, secretary of the Denison Society, and Donald L. Jacobus, distinguished editor of The American Genealogist, my valued collaborators, who have performed the tedious tasks of checking and styling the entire manuscript and whose searches of the original records of Stonington, Groton, Ledyard, New London, Lyme, Branford, New Haven, Hartford, and several towns in Vermont and New Hampshire have added to, verified and corrected many entries in Baldwin and Clift, increasing importantly the accuracy and completeness of Part I.

Mrs. Herbert S. Davis and Mrs. George L. Denison, active members of the Denison Society, have supplied many valuable facts.

Denison H. Hatch, during whose presidency the Society sponsored this work, gave me unfailing encouragement and support.

Williams Haynes served this project well in handling the publishing details and also by permitting the reprinting of his excellent sketch of Captain George and his graceful tribute to Mrs. Gates.

Mrs. William Wylie, a Denison Homestead hostess, copied the family records in the library of Mrs. Gates, now in the Homestead.

Those who sent many biographical sketches include Anne E. Denison, Eber Denison, Mrs. Edward F. Denison, Frederick K. Denison, Lorna Denison, Robert F. Denison, Kate Mills, Alpha D. Peister, Daniel Tomlinson, and Sallie Coy. And many others who have added to the records: their names are in the Sources of Information in the Appendix.

Captain George Denison*

By Williams Haynes

DENISON—an ancient English surname, the son of Denis. Since Denis was the patron saint of France, it suggests that the first English Denison landed with William the Conquerer. However, long, long before 1066 the name Denisca, signifying Danish, appears in the old Anglo-Saxon Hundred Rolls. So possibly the first Denison leaped ashore from the dragon prow of a Viking longship.

Norman soldier or Danish pirate, somewhere in the past there must have been a strong prepotent ancestor; a bold, brave man, a big man with sandy red hair, blue eyes under bushy brows, a large, high-bridged nose and a jutting jaw. George Denison, the founder of the family in America, was just such a man. Even today the family recognizes this description of him as the true Denison type.

In 1618, George Denison was born in Stortford, England; son of William Denison, described as a man of "goodly estate." Of this we may be sure, for George's three older brothers went to Cambridge University. His Uncle Edward moved to Ireland and his son John, also a Cambridge man, was a major in Cromwell's army and later deputy governor of Cork. The Denisons were obviously a family of some position.

George came to America on the Lion, a boy of thirteen, accompanying his parents and two older brothers. The eldest son, a clergyman, remained in England. During their two months' passage across the Atlantic, his father engaged the Rev. John Eliot, the future Apostle to the Indians, to tutor the boy. Under that godly man George continued his schooling at Roxbury in Massachusetts where this ship's company settled. Denison's life-long friendliness to the Indians was one result of Eliot's influence.

The first clear picture we have of George Denison is as a young man of twenty-three standing in the burying ground at Roxbury watching his wife's coffin being lowered into her grave. At the sound of the hollow thud when the first shovelful of earth fell on the rough pine box, he swung about and elbowed his way through the throng of friends and neighbors. He ran quickly out of the churchyard to his home. Without stopping to pick up a handkerchief, he galloped off to Boston and embarked on the first ship for England.

In England he enlisted in Cromwell's Ironsides to fight the Royalist forces and was commissioned a captain of the cavalry. During the battle of Naesby he was taken a prisoner, but he escaped, and at Marston Moor he was severely wounded. For his recovery he went to Cork, doubtless to be near his cousin John, and there stayed in the home of a well-to-do leather merchant, John Borodell. Like many another widower, he fell in love with his beautiful nurse, Ann Borodell, his host's daughter. They were married and just short of three years after his precipitous flight they returned to Roxbury.

The young couple were royally welcomed. The governor of Massachusetts, John Winthrop, noted in his diary "the return of the young captain out of the wars in England" and he became quite a local hero. His bride charmed everyone. She was tall with brown hair and blue eyes, very pretty. But more than that, she was so kindly and gracious, so true a gentlewoman that the neighbors called her "Lady Ann," an affectionate nickname that she carried all of her long life. She was joined to the church, and her husband was admitted a freeman of the town. Captain George and Lady Ann had thus been officially accepted into the tight little Puritan community.

The young men of Roxbury wanted this dashing cavalry officer for the captain of their Train Band, the local militia company in which every Massachusetts male from 16 to 60 was obliged to serve. Despite his military experience and distinguished war record, the conservatives of the town favored a cooler, steadier head and Denison was beaten by a close vote. Piqued at what he justifiably considered an insult to his obvious qualifications for this position, he left Roxbury a second time. With his wife, their two children, John and Ann, and the two little girls by his first wife, Sarah and Hannah, he moved to the new settlement at New London in Connecticut.

At once he took a prominent part in the affairs of this frontier community. He was elected captain of the Train Band, which must have gratified him greatly. The local records are filled with his activities—census taker and tax assessor, on the building committee of the church, partner in a business project to drain some marshlands, inspector of the port, which paid him fat fees, and finally, deputy to the General Court at Hartford, corresponding to our present state senator. During the year 1654, there are two exceedingly interesting, significant entries about Denison. For services to the community, he was given a land grant of 200 acres. For selling rum to one of his Indian friends, he was fined 24 shillings.

The Captain's land was a dozen miles east of New London in the heart of the old Pequot Indian country. Twelve years before Sassacus, chief of this brave and haughty tribe, had been the first American Indian to realize that the coming of the whites meant the end of his people. He blazed that desperate, bloody, futile warpath, followed by King Philip, by Pontiac, by Geronimo, Crazy Horse, and scores of other chiefs who bravely fought this losing fight. During one dreadful winter the Pequots ravished the Connecticut settlements with firebrand and tomahawk, killing more than sixty of the English, many of them with terrible tortures. The inevitable end came when Major John Mason destroyed the Pequot fort on the Mystic River and followed the remnants of the tribe down the coast to a ruthless slaughter in a swamp at Fairfield west of New Haven.

Across the Mystic River from the charred ruins of the Pequot fort, over the hill skirting the east bank, a smaller stream tumbles down a ledge and winds through a broad meadow to the sea. The Indians called it Pequotsepos, the little river of the Pequots. This pleasant valley was George Denison's land. Here, in 1654, on a rocky knoll overlooking the meadows, he built a rough lean-to of poles and thick slabs of bark, little better than a square, slant-roofed wigwam with a stone fireplace and chimney at one end. Here, he installed his family. Indian attacks still threatened, so with a soldier's instinct he surrounded this rude home with a stout stockade, enclosing a spring and a couple of acres of land.

This old realm of the conquered Pequots, extending from the Thames eastward to the Pawcatuck River, was disputed territory. It was held nominally by Connecticut, but claimed by right of conquest in the Pequot War by Massachusetts. It was the real frontier of the colonies.

Half a dozen self-reliant pioneers had taken up land along the coast. 'Way to the east at the Rocks of the Pawcatuck, the official interpreter of the colony, Thomas Stanton, had built his Indian trading post. Five miles to the west were the first settler, William Chesebrough, and his friend, Walter Palmer, a 68-year-old giant of six-feet-three. Another five miles westward, Palmer's son-in-law, Thomas Miner, located at the head of Quiambaug Cove, while to the west, between Denison's land and the Mystic River, were 300 acres bestowed upon Captain John Gallup, Jr., for his and his father's services in the Pequot War.

This vanguard, and those who joined them during the next few years, were all men of bold, independent spirit. But all of them and their families were devout Puritans. It disturbed them deeply that they could not go to church regularly at New London. It was a half day's journey over a rough Indian trail with two big rivers to cross. But it also irked them that they were ordered to pay tithes for the support of that church and its minister. They appealed twice to New London and twice to the General Court at Hartford for the right to set up their own church and town. Four times their petition was rejected.

Since Massachusetts claimed this territory and the case was now up for decision before the Commissioners of the United Colonies, Captain Denison proposed that they turn to the Bay Colony for permission to "gather" their own church and organize their own local government. This rebellious suggestion was heartily approved. The Captain wrote the petition and because his brother Edward was the son-in-law of the Massachusetts governor, he was elected to deliver it by hand in Boston.

The Commissioners of the United Colonies settled this boundary dispute by giving the territory east of the Mystic River to Massachusetts, and the Captain became the most important figure during the Massachusetts jurisdiction. He was principal town officer, also town clerk, and one of the judicial committee of three to try small cases. Because there was no local minister he was given the unusual right to perform marriages. Four years later, however, the new charter from King Charles II moved the boundary west to the Pawcatuck River, automatically restoring Stonington to Connecticut.

The authorities at Hartford welcomed back all the inhabitants except Captain Denison. He had been the ringleader of the Massachusetts insurgents, so they not only refused him civil rights but fined him 20 pounds for "illegally" performing marriages. These odious distinctions made the Captain boiling mad. He refused to pay the fine and brazenly performed two marriages, one of them of his own daughter. The Hartford Court raised his fine to 100 pounds—a vast sum in those days—and ordered him to appear before them in person: a fine and order he simply ignored.

The Captain was an important figure: he had many friends and influential relatives. Accordingly, after two years' deadlock, the Connecticut General Court remitted its uncollectable fine and begrudgingly forgave him. The Captain seems to have gloried in his invidious position. For years he delighted in "affronting the authority and dignity of the magistrates," questioning their edicts, ridiculing their decisions, plaguing them with all sorts of petitions and complaints.

This spirited, private rebellion tickled his neighbors. They encouraged it by electing Denison to a number of responsible town offices. He was an excellent surveyor and was named to fix the boundaries of the new town of Stonington and also to lay out a road from the ford at the Pawcatuck to the ferry at the Thames "eight rods wide and following so closely as possible the old Indian path." For years this highway was known simply as "The Road." It became a link in the old Boston-New York post road. Now, by-passed by superhighways it is still locally known as the Old Pequot Trail.

The Commissioners of the United Colonies also called upon Captain Denison's services. They appointed him and their interpreter-general, Thomas Stanton, to set aside 8,000 acres as a home for the scattered remnants of the Pequot tribe, the first Indian reservation in North America.

These two firm friends of the aborigines picked a good piece of land, partly wooded hills and partly a fine river bottom, about ten miles back from the coast. Their fellow settlers protested violently that the Indians should be located farther inland, back in rocky hills, away from the settlements. Denison and Stanton stood up stoutly for the rights of their red-skinned friends. Since the arguments of the whites sprang from fear and land greed, two powerful motives, the dispute was bitter and drawn out. Throughout the Captain and the Interpreter fought in the Pequots' interest and worked out a compromise much better for them than the English had first proposed.

The colonists' fears of another Indian uprising were well-founded. Even in the midst of this reservation dispute, the English settlers in Massachusetts discovered that King Philip was sending emissaries to all of the New England tribes, seeking to enlist them in another war of extermination. History repeated itself. As forty years before, Roger Williams' friendship with the Narragansetts kept them from joining the Pequot War, so now the influence of Denison and Stanton induced the tribes of southeast Connecticut—Pequots, Mohegans and Niantics—to become active allies of the whites.

When King Philip struck with the bloody attack on Swanzy, the Connecticut regiment under Major Treat, some 300 men, gathered at Captain Denison's stockade. However, the massacre in Deerfield threatened all western Massachusetts and most of the Connecticut troops hurried to the rescue. The New London companies, seventy-odd men, remained to guard the home front, and they fought in the Great Swamp Fight, December 19, 1675, near Kingston, Rhode Island. Two captains, John Gallup, Jr., and James Avery, and some twenty men were killed. Many were wounded and more crippled by frozen feet and hands. The battered survivors were discharged from active service, leaving Stonington without defences. In this emergency Captain George Denison was commissioned Provost Marshall of the New London and Narragansett countries.

Taking advantage of the withdrawal of most of the colonial troops to the western front, Canonchet, the able war chief of the powerful Narragansetts, led his braves on the warpath. He attacked and burned six settlements, slaughtering men, women, and children, all who did not escape into the snow-drifted woods. Two different Massachusetts companies of fifty men each, he ambushed and wiped out. The booty gathered up represented to the Indians fabulous riches—guns, powder and shot, all sorts of metal implements and utensils, droves of livestock. Canonchet's exultant warriors proudly displayed over two hundred scalps. Cold terror stalked through the English settlements clutching at the bravest hearts.

These disasters called like a bugle to Cromwell's old cavalry officer. Hastily Captain Denison enlisted a company of seventy-five dragoons—mounted soldiers armed each with a musket and a sword—and called together a hundred Pequot and Mohegan allies. He rode deep into the enemy's territory, halted and sent out his scouts. When they reported an unguarded Narragansett village or a war party stealing through the woods, the little troop galloped off to an unexpected attack. Half a dozen such sharp, stunning blows and the Captain and his dragoons would be back at the palisade at Pequotsepos before Canonchet could locate them and muster a counterattack.

During the winter the Captain carried out three such raids. Each was a masterpiece of strategy in this savage guerilla warfare. Timed and planned upon information received from his Indian spies, executed quickly and boldly, they were well-calculated to take full advantage of the surprise attack. In these three daring expeditions Denison lost not a single white cavalryman, and only five of his Indian auxiliaries.

Dismay spread through the Narragansett villages. Doubts and misgivings began to gnaw at the Indians' fickle resolution. Though they continued to burn lonely farmhouses and to tomahawk isolated individuals, their savage attacks on the towns stopped. Their food supplies too, were running low, and with the return of spring, Canonchet picked thirty braves to accompany him on an expedition into the Pawcatuck Valley to gather seed corn for the season's planting.

This risky, but necessary move was promptly reported by Denison's spies. Immediately he grasped this opportunity to come to grips with this crafty sachem. Without waiting to muster the full force of his company, he set off with forty-seven white troopers and about fifty Indians. The order of the day was "Canonchet, dead or alive."

Warned of the English approach, the Narragansetts scattered and fled. Four young Pequots discovered Canonchet creeping up a thickly wooded valley. During the wild chase, he discarded, first, his blanket, then the silver-embroidered coat the English had given him, his gun, and finally his wampum belt, the insignia of his rank. His youthful pursuers closed in and as he was scrambling up the bank of a little stream, he was tackled, thrown, and quickly bound.

The English carried him across the ford of the Pawcatuck into Connecticut territory and at the broad Anguila plain held a council to determine his fate. The proud chief refused to surrender his people, rejected an armistice, and when threatened with death replied boldly, "It is well. I shall die before my heart is soft, before I have said anything unworthy of Canonchet to say."

His execution was approved by George Denison, the commander of his captors, who ordered that he die without being tortured and according to the Indian custom at the hands of three sachems of rank as high as his own. This judgment was scrupulously carried out.

The brutality of the brave chief's death appals us. But we should not forget that after two years of merciless warfare, he refused haughtily any terms of peace. The memories of his broken faith and treacheries, his burnings and bloody slaughters were fresh in every English mind. And, as the Captain clearly foresaw, and pointed out at the time, the removal of this implacable enemy, King Philip's most able lieutenant, would be a death blow to the Indian cause. So it proved. The Narragansett War was over: within six months the power of King Philip was completely broken. It was the last great Indian uprising in New England.

George Denison was one of the great heroes of that desperate struggle. He was honored with resolutions and rewarded with large land grants by the Colony of Connecticut, and the Town of Stonington. Oneco, the Mohegan chief who led his Indian allies, gave the Captain a great feast and presented him with 2,000 acres of tribal lands. Even the Governor of Massachusetts declared that "the services of Captain Denison well deserve never to be forgotten."

He was without doubt the first citizen of Stonington. Almost continuously he was elected to represent the town at the General Court, until the second session of 1694 during which he died on active duty in Hartford and was buried there.

After the Indian war Captain Denison tore down his famous stockade, a gesture of victory, and no doubt he burned its big stakes in the yawning six-foot fireplace of his fine new home. In his "mansion hous," as he described it in his will, he and Lady Ann delighted to give famous dinner parties, "grate feasts," to friends and family (three sons and six daughters, all now married and with a little army of grandchildren) to the Captain's old comrades in arms, to all sorts of visiting notables, even to illustrious Indian sachems.

Pequotsepos Manor, as this hospitable house was called, burned in 1717 on the eve of the wedding of George Denison 3rd, the grandson who had inherited it and the adjoining 200 acres of the original land grant. He at once rebuilt west of the site. Thriftily he salvaged some of the big charred oak beams in the frame from the older building.

TUNIS DENISE OF FREEHOLD, NEW JERSEY, 1704-1797.

CONTRIBUTED BY HELEN LINCKLAEN FAIRCHILD, Cazenovia, N. Y.

For many years the writer, one of his descendants, has sought to trace the descent of Tunis Denise of Freehold, New Jersey, and to reconcile the little that can be found concerning him with the account of his parentage given by the Rev. G. C. Schenck in a letter to the late Mrs. Charles Haight Conover of Freehold, now through her kindness in my possession.

I now submit the following to show that this Tunis Denise was the youngest son of Helena, daughter of Jacques Cortelyou of Nayack (who died between 1692 and 1693) and her husband Dionys Teunessen, and married Catherine Van Dyck, whose eldest child Helena, married Samuel, son of Judge Jonathan Forman of Middletown Point, New Jersey.

While Dr. Schenck was an acknowledged authority on New Jersey history and genealogy, his statement to Mrs. Conover that Tunis Denise of Freehold was indentical with that Teunis Denyse, son of Dionys Teunessen and Helena Cortelyou (daughter of Jacques Cortelyou), who was "baptized April 2, 1692," and "died about 1788," must be incorrect, since the will of Tunis of Freehold with whom we are concerned, was executed April 2, 1792, and probated Jan. 16, 1798.

We may scarcely assume that the probate would have been delayed for nearly six years in any event, or that the testator had already reached his hundredth year on the day that he signed the will, so that neither date given by Dr. Schenck can be reconciled with the authoritative dates of the will and probate.

It was plain that something more was needed to establish the times of Tunis of Freehold's birth and death, but for years my search was unsuccessful. His first wife was Catherine van Dyke, as shown by the inscription on their daughter Helena Forman's gravestone, in the old burial ground at Freneau, New Jersey, and by Hendrick van Dyke's will.* His second wife was Francynthe Hendrickson, as shown by entries in the records of the old Freehold Dutch Church, kept by the pastor at Marlboro, in 1895. Both were interred in the "Scotch Lanes" burying ground, near Freehold, well known locally as the last home of all the Denises, and situated nearly opposite the farm still spoken of as the "Tunis Denise place." His granddaughter, Mrs. John Baird, sent me word that he too had been laid there, but not one monument bearing the name of Denise is among the few that remain in the neglected thicket, long since plundered of most of its headstones, on the little hill on the Colt's Neck Road. Nor could any trace be found of this generation of the family in any other of the "Burying Grounds of Old Monmouth" and when the search for the tombstones was finally abandoned, the hunt for the genealogy seemed hopeless.

* N. Y. Probate Records, Oct. 30, 1751.

From other authorities however, it can now be shown that Dr. Schenck was correct in saying that Tunis of Freehold was a son of Helena Cortelyou by her second husband Dionys Tunis or Teunessen, though not her son of the same name baptized April 2, 1692.

An old Dutch silver-clasped Testament and Psalter, printed in 1758, shown me by the kindness of its owner, Mrs. Lilian Denise Snyder of Freehold, which was the property of her ancestor Daniel, son of Tunis Denise of Freehold and contains his family record, has upon a fly-leaf at the end of the book, the following entries, which though not giving his parentage, do furnish the long sought dates. They read thus:

"In the year of our Lord one thousand and seven hundred and four, 15th of June, Tunis Denise was born."

"Tunis Denise departed this Life, the 10 Day of December, in the year of our Lord 1797."

While it seems as if this record might be accepted as final authority for the birth-date of Tunis of Freehold, as well as for that of his death (the latter moreover being borne out by the date of the probate of his will), the copies by Onderdonk in the Long Island Historical Society of the Reformed Dutch Church of Kings County Records, on the contrary, to which I turned for his baptism as well as for that of the other children of Helena Cortelyou and Dionys or Denyse Teunessen, as also for their marriages, again baffled me. For there the baptism of Tunis Denise, their second son of that name* was given as on April 2, 1692, Dr. Schenck's date again, probably derived by him from this very source.

Though these copies of the records of this Church of Kings County—while the best that remain—are incomplete, like the original, the absence of all corroboration of the Dutch Testament entries could not fail to suggest that Tunis of Freehold might have been a collateral only of Helena and Dionys Teunessen, and that all clue to his parentage had hopelessly vanished in the general mist of Teunessens, Denises, and other variations of the name, were it not that the baptismal records are missing from 1691 to 1710. But the Kings County Real Estate Records remained still to be consulted, and there I found, in a series of documents, from the two last of which I now quote (in abridged version), mention of a third Teunis Denise, son of Helena and Dionys, as follows:—

Liber 4 of Conveyances, p. 257, Brooklyn Real Estate Records:

"Nov. 3, 1780. I Jaques Denyson of New Utrecht in Kings County on Nassau Island in the Province of New York, yeoman, am bound unto Hendrick Hendrickson my ffather-in-law (i. e. stepfather), and Helena Hendrickson, my mother," etc.

* The first, baptized April 24, 1687, died young. See p. 93, Early Settlers of Kings County, by Teunis G. Bergen.

Ibid, p. 198. Bond.

"1717, Aug. 15. I Hendrick Hendrickson, of New Utrecht in Kings County, yeoman, am bound unto Jaques Teunissen of Town and County aforesaid in 400 pounds, the condition being if Hendrick Hendrickson conveys to Jaques Teunissen all the right and title which by certain letters Patent the said Hendrick Hendrickson now hath in and to a certain ferry at the Narrows between Nassau Island and Staten Island at decease of his now wife, or when her youngest son called Teunis Teunisen shall attain to the age of twenty one years, this obligation to be void," etc.

Now, it being well known that Helena Cortelyou (the widow first of Nicholas Rutgerz Van Brunt, then of Dionys Teunessen), married (before Sept. 12, 1709)* Hendrick Hendrickson for her third husband, it seems in the absence so far as I can learn of any conflicting testimony, that "her youngest son Teunis Teunisen" who was under age in 1717, may be identified beyond reasonable doubt with Tunis Denise of Freehold, who by the Dutch Testament entry was born June 15, 1704, and died Dec. 10, 1797,—and whose will we find in Trenton, N. J., probated Jan. 16, 1798. With this chain of evidence the case must rest. It is however strengthened in more than one point still to be mentioned, nor does the change of the name "Teunis Teunisen" to that of Tunis Denise present a difficulty to any one having a slight knowledge of the peculiarities of the system of names among the Dutch.

His brother Jaques Teunissen, also mentioned in the bond, became Jaques Denise. Morover, Bergen says that the children of Helena and Dionys Teunessen kept Denise as a surname, while that of his brothers' descendants became Teunessens in various forms of spelling.

I may add that it is probable that part of the land in Monmouth County deeded Oct. 27, 1718, by Hendrick Hendrickson to "Jaques and Tunis Denise, both of New Utrecht," and described in the deed (see Brooklyn Real Estate Records, Liber 4, p. 204) is the same with that now known as the Tunis Denise place.†

His grandson, my great-great-uncle, Major Samuel S. Forman, who died at Syracuse, N. Y., in 1862, aged 97, in an unpublished memoir in my possession, written in his old age, states that "Mrs. Garret Rapelje and my mother" (Helena Denise, wife of Samuel Forman, daughter of Tunis by his first wife Catherine van Dyke) "were both named after the same lady, a relative on Long Island." This also fortifies my theory, for according to Bergen this Mrs. Garret Rapelje was Helena Denise, born 1732, second daughter of Jaques Denise, oldest son of Dionys Teunessen and his wife Helena Cortelyou, by his wife Reymeriga Simonson.

Jacques lived at the homestead at the Narrows, doubtless the one referred to in the deeds, already quoted, to Jacques.

* On this day she signed her name Helena Hendrickson as witness to baptism of Elena, daughter of Abraham van Tuyl, at the same time as Hendrick Hendrickson. See "Staten Island Baptisms."

† For map showing position of old Cortelyou house, see Long Island Historical Society Memoirs, vol. ii.

These two Helena Denises were therefore first cousins and were both, I believe, named for their grandmother Helena Cortelyou. Garret Rapelje, the husband of the younger, was a New York importing merchant, who remained loyal to the Crown, and later removed to New Orleans. He lived at the Wallabout, and was of the well known family founded by his grandfather, Joris de Rapelje, the exile from "fair Rochelle" and his wife Catalyntie Trico, parents of Sara de Rapelje, "the first born Christian daughter of Nieuw Nederlandt."

If my reasoning be correct, it furnishes the link long missing in the genealogy of Tunis Denise of Freehold.

We begin to trace it on the first page of the Trouw (Marriage) Boek of the Reformed Dutch Church of the City of New York, where "Theunis Nyssen, j. m. van Bunninck in't Sticht van Uÿtr, en Phaebea Faelix, j. d. van Jarleston in Engelt." [Theunis Nyssen, young man of Bunninck in the diocese of Utrecht, and Phebea Felix,* young woman of Jarleston in England] are recorded as married "den 11, Febr., Anno 1640." In 1646 he owned a house and lot on the Great Highway, opposite the company's garden on Manhattan Island.

The baptismal records of the same church give the christenings of their many children, of whom Nÿs (Dionys) Tunis was the seventh, baptised April 12th, 1654. He married (1) Oct. 22, 1682, Elizabeth Polhemus, daughter of Domine Theodorus Polhemus; m. (2) April 12, 1685, "Helena Cortelyou, daughter of Jacques Corteljou," and the respectability of the fathers of both his wives would seem to show that he was a man of standing in the community, for not only was a Dutch Domine usually a much regarded personage, but Jacques Cortelyou, 1st, though he did not wear the cloth, held offices of trust, and was a man of distinction. While it is on the distaff side that Tunis Denise descends from him, we should not pass by this ancestor unnoticed.

By the Catalogues of the Dutch and English Manuscripts in the New York State Records at Albany, we find the first mention of Jacques Cortelyou under date of July 21, 1654, when he declines to be Sheriff of New Amsterdam.

Aug. 23, 1656, he was ordered by the Council to survey lands; Jan. 23, 1657, he was appointed and sworn in Surveyor General or "Surveyor of the Kings Woods," and petitioned, as Agent of the heirs of Cornelis van Werckhoven, for leave to found and erect a village on Long Island at the bay of the North River (New Utrecht) which was granted, provided the plot of proposed village be submitted to the Director or Council.

Aug. 30, 1658, he was ordered to prepare a map of lots within the city of New Amsterdam, and May 3, 1660, commissioned with others to examine the vicinity of Breuckelen, report how many plantations can be laid out there, and prepare map of the same. Again in 1660 he is ordered to survey and make map of lots within New Amsterdam, in 1663 to make more surveys, and in 1656 to survey lots at the Delaware. In 1670, he is with others, Commissioner for affairs of Esopus, and new villages adjacent, and in 1685 commissioned to be justice of Kings County.

His affairs had been complicated with those of the heirs of his principal, Cornelis van Werckhoven, but this matter can scarcely be disentangled now, nor can we know why he mortgaged his "Bouwery at New Utrecht," both in 1674 and 1684, or why in 1692 he was "to be brought before the Council to answer for contempt." Perhaps the infirmities of age caused this, for on July 27, 1693, his widow Neeltje van Duyn of New Utrecht, gives power of attorney to her sons to settle his estate.

The ferry, between Long Island and Staten Island, he seems always to have owned, for in 1719, his sons petitioned against any hindrance therein from their brother-in-law Hendrick Hendrickson, "for they and their father have had the privilege for almost fifty years."

The Civil List of the State of New York, edition of 1888, gives Jacques Cortelyou's name as Surveyor General in 1671, and in 1674 as one of the delegates "from the Dutch towns" to confer with Governor Colve.

Leaving now the official records we may turn to the Journal (in the Long Island Historical Memoirs, vol. 1) of the Labadist Fathers, who during their sojourn in America in 1679 and 1680, saw much of Cortelyou, then "advanced in years." They described his hospitality, sincerity, cordiality and kindness to them when they repeatedly visited him at his stone house in Nayack,* near which the Nayack Indians, whom he permitted to remain, much interested and astonished them. "He came from Utrecht in quality of tutor to the children of Cornelis van Werckhoven of that city, first patentees direct from the West India Company of Nayack or Fort Hamilton." Mr. Bergen states that he married Neeltje van Duyn, and lived first at New Amsterdam, but later owned and occupied the Nayack tract in New Utrecht. He was supposed to have made the first map of the City of New York on New Utrecht patents in 1668. He was an accomplished man, versed in languages and mathematics, in medicine and other sciences, with a philosophical turn of mind and a practical ability equally valuable in pioneer life.

He died about 1693.

The Labadist's mention of Jacques' French blood, and Major Forman's impression of his grandfather Tunis Denise's "French funds," recall an old tale of some ancestress who escaped once upon a time from imprisonment and danger, though when and where no one now can tell. Succeeding in making the sentry dead drunk who guarded their door, she with others of the family stepped over his body as he lay asleep across the threshold and made their way to safety. It would seem that this story, so often told in so many families, if it has any foundation in our own, may also point to Jacques' French descent, his mother or grandmother, the days of St. Bartholomew, and a flight to the Low Countries where later we find him, before the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.*

[From Vol. I, Memoirs, L. I. Historical Society.]

When the Fathers made their voyage hither, one of their fellow-passengers was Cortelyou's brother-in-law, Gerrit van Duyne. With "the good old people his parents" they later lodged in New Amsterdam, and they describe with sympathy the tears of joy with which his father-in-law, Jacob Swart, greeted him on his return. Gerrit had lived here long, and had married the daughter here, though she and her children were now living in Zwolle. They came back to New Amsterdam before the journal closed.

It being September the profusion of apples and other fruits—more peaches lying on the ground in the road than the pigs would eat—much impressed the travellers. When they first visited Jacques Cortelyou on his Nayack tract, near the "Hoofden" or headlands at the Narrows, they found him "a man advanced in years, born in Utrecht but of French parents, as we could readily discover from all his action, looks and language. He had studied philosophy in his youth and spoke Latin and good French. He was a mathematican and sworn land surveyor. He had also formerly learned several sciences and had some knowledge of medicine. The worst of it was he was a good Cartesian and not a good Christian, regulating himself and all externals by reason and justice only; nevertheless he regulated all things better by these principles than most people in these parts do, who bear the name of Christian or pious persons. His brother-in-law and ourselves were welcomed by him and his wife. He treated us with every civility, although two of his sons being sick and he much confined in attending upon them, he was much interrupted in attending to us. . . .

There were many good stone houses in New Utrecht, of which Jacques' was one, where we returned to spend the night. After supper we went to sleep in the barn upon some straw spread with sheep skins in the midst of the continual grunting of hogs, squealing of pigs, bleating and coughing of sheep, barking of dogs, crowing of cocks, cackling of hens, and a goodly quantity of fleas and vermin and all with an open barn door through which a fresh north west wind was blowing. Though we could not sleep, we could not complain, as we had the same quarters and kind of bed that their own son usually had who had now on our arrival crept in the straw behind us." Again on "Tuesday, Oct. 3, we arrived at Jacques' house, where we were welcome; we slept for the night in our old place. In the morning the horses were harnessed to the wagon for the purpose of carrying us to the city, and bringing back some medicines which had arrived for Jaques from Holland in our ship. We breakfasted to the full, and rode first to the bay, then to Vlacke Bos, then thro Breuklen to the ferry and leaving the wagon there, crossed over the river and arrived home at noon. We sent back to Jaques half of our tincture calimanaris, and half of our balsam sulphureus and some other things. He had been of service to us in several respects as he promised to be, and that with perfect willingness."

On Staten Island they met Pierre le Gardenier, formerly gardener to the Prince of Orange and who knew him well.

Nov. 10. "Jaques had promised to show us the laws of the country," so they went to Breukelen, Vlacke Bos, and Nieu Uytrecht "on a large fine wagon road again to Nayack, where we arrived about three o'clock. It had been very warm and we were tired. Jaques' wife bade us welcome, but he was in the fields. After we had rested ourselves and eaten something we went outside upon the banks of this beautiful bay, to breathe a little air and look at several vessels, going and coming. In the meantime he came with his son to meet us. They had been to the fish fuyck which they had lying there upon the shore, and out of which they had taken at noon some fine fish, but at present the water was too high. Another of his sons had been out shooting but had not shot anything; though the day before he had shot a woodcock and a partridge before the door of his house, which we must taste this evening with some other things. While we were standing there the Fuyck was lifted again, from which they took out two fine bass. We ate of them also in the evening and found them very fine. . . . The game suited us very well. We had much conversation together, and informed ourselves in relation to various matters. He gave us some medicinal roots. He also let us look at the laws, which were written in a folio volume, but in very bad Dutch, for they had been translated from English into Dutch. As it was a large book and we could not copy it there, we requested him to let us take it home with us for that purpose. He consented upon condition that if we left for the South, we would then deliver it to his brother-in-law Gerrit who would hand it to him. We lodged that night somewhat better than we had done before in the barn, for we slept in his dwellIng, and could feel where we had slept."

11th Sat. . . . "We left about eight o'clock after taking some breakfast. He conducted us to New Utrecht. We lent him Les Pensées des Pascal, which we judged would be useful to him." . . .

12th. "We copied the laws."

13th. "We took care that Jaques should receive the papers back again."

They again spend a night with Jaques.

3 Jan., 1690. "While we were getting some oysters at Gowanus, Gerrit with Jaques and his son and daughter rode up in a wagon. Jaques had come in the purpose of attending to a sick horse of Simon which had a certain disease they call here the staggers."

15th May, 1680. "Arrived at 11 at Jaques—he had been sick with a large ulcer on his neck but was better. We were welcome. He had suspected Theunis (a neighbor) of stealing a cow of his. Theunis later confessed, asked pardon and paid. Jaques who is one of the justices said, I forgive you from the bottom of my heart but I do this only to cause you to reflect and desist from your wickedness and to show you that you do not know or fear God, and that you may fear him more. Thereupon Theunis went away much affected and entirely subdued and we told Jaques that better things were now to be expected for him, at which Jaques was pleased.

We dined with Jaques, and his grandson came and presented us a humming bird he had shot. Jaques impressed us very much with his sincerity and cordiality in everything we had to do with him or wherein he could be of any service to us. We left with him the little book which we had lent to him, and which he said he had found much pleasure in reading, Les Pensées de M. Pascal. We took our leave of him and went to Gowanus."

Returning to the Denise line we find that Cortelyou's son-in-law Dionys Teunessen, survived him some years, having died, Bergen says, "previous to 1707." His child Teunis of Freehold was then, according to the Dutch Testament, about three years old. The boy was perhaps born in Midwout, or Flatbush, where his father was a master-carpenter, held property, and lived for many years, but his mother "Helena had received as her portion from her father the Nayack tract, now Fort Hamilton," and his later home doubtless was in the "dwelling house" mentioned in the bond of Nov. 3, 1720, as being near the "Ferry between Nassau and Staten Islands,"* concerning which ferry there appear many family agreements and disagreements, both in the Brooklyn Records and the Colonial Records of the State of New York.

Later prints agree with earlier ones in showing the old stone Denyse house near the water's edge by the landing, which may easily have been the one to which Jacques welcomed the weary Labadist travellers.

As we have seen, Helena, in 1720, with her third husband Hendrick Hendrickson, conveyed to her son Jaques Teunessen† her dwelling house and property there under conditions which secured to them its use and occupation for their lives.

Truly their lives had fallen unto them in pleasant places, along the gateway of the great harbor, and it was not only a beautiful possession but a valuable one, controlling as it did the important ferry at the Narrows, and a landing on the Long Island shore for boats from vessels wherever bound.

* Denyse's Ferry is now Bensonhurst.

† One of Jacques' sons was Denyse Denyse as shown by his will in New York probate records, and Miss Flint says in Early Long Island that so late as the Revolution the broad roofed stone house of Denyse Denyse was then standing on the site of Fort Hamilton. From this house "General Howe issued on Aug. 23 the proclamation which was his ultimatum before the battle of Long Island, and here at Denyse's the British disembarked." The place was known down to this time as Hendrickson's, Jacques', and Denyse's, and these names correspond with the successive ownerships of Helena Hendrickson; her son Jacques Denyse, and her grandson Denyse Denyse.

Whether Tunis in his youth dwelt at Flatbush or Nayack, the old Road Book of New Utrecht will show that every time that he passed over "the road from Gowanus to Yellow Hook, by the Narrows and New Utrecht fishing beach," he went by the house of "Hendrick van Dyck of the Yellow Hook, of the town of Brookland, Kings County, yeoman," along "the used road, till you come back to Hendrick Hendrickson's."

Neighbors, therefore, as well as sweethearts, his marriage to Catherine van Dyck, Hendrick's daughter, must have taken place by 1727. In 1728 their daughter Helena was born.

By this time the tide of Dutch emigration was fast setting from New York to East New Jersey, and Tunis and Jacques Denise were already, as we have seen, holding property in that State. Whether Tunis migrated to Monmouth County directly, or lived for a time on Staten Island, in all probability he soon built for Catherine and himself the house still standing, known today as the "Tunis Denise place."

It is at the head of a little lane planted on both sides with cherry trees, running up from the Colt's Neck Road near Freehold, and is considered, as I was told some years ago by a resident of Freehold, to be about one hundred and seventy-five years old, which tallies well enough with our dates. It is of the Long Island Dutch type of dwelling, tent roof, small stoop, Dutch door, shingled from top to bottom with long narrow shingles, rounded at the lap, and all but worn through with the weather. A small formal flower garden, with box borders, is in front. Passing through this to the stoop, unless you rest on the benches on either side, you enter through the massive Dutch door to an interior, with rooms not large, but arranged for substantial comfort and convenience as to size and number.

We know little of the builder of the house except from the Memoirs already quoted of his grandson Major S. S. Forman, youngest child of Helena, who was born 21 July, 1765, and who died at Syracuse, N. Y., July, 1862.

"My maternal grandfather, Tunis Denise," he says, "was a remarkable still, quiet man, farming was his occupation, active and industrious, never sought for office. He was middle size in person, rather quiet and amiable, pleasant in countenance, astonishing memory, could call all his numerous grandchildren by name and always salute them with a kiss. I am inclined to think that he was of a French and Holland connexion. He was wealthy and it seemed to me that he had some French funds. He was a very affectionate man, loved and esteemed by everybody—he had no enemies. He enjoyed remarkable health and rode horseback when upwards of 80 years old. When he lost his second wife he seemed to spend all his time in riding about to visit his numerous children. He retained his faculties to the last, and must have been nearly a hundred years old when he died. In his family all talked Dutch—white and black. His two wives were buried in the Dutch burial ground at the Dutch lanes in Freehold. I can just remember his second wife's funeral, the procession was immensely long, with carriage and horseback. She was buried in a burying ground in the Dutch lanes. It was customary in those days to send out invitations only to relations to attend the funerals. On the day of burial a man and a woman are appointed to carry spirituous liquors to the people—the man to the males, the woman to the females; the liquor carriers, so called, are furnished with white gloves. The people never leave the grave till the interment is all completed—the minister then returns compliments and thanks."

Though our concern is not with the generation later than Tunis, it may be said here that his first born child Helena, lies in the old cemetery near Middletown Point (Matawan), New Jersey, at the place called Freneau, in honor of her famous son-in-law, the poet, and in fields once given to the church before the Revolution by her husband Samuel Forman, who is there interred by her side.

During the war the church edifice, to the construction of which he had been a liberal contributor, was occupied by the British, burned down and never rebuilt, the enclosure, remaining however, as to this day, sacred as a place of burial.

Besides his daughter Helena, Tunis Denise's children, on Major Forman's authority, were as follows:

Catherine, m. Garret Hendrickson.
Nelly, m. John Forman.
Phoebe, m. Rev. Benjamin Dubois of Dutch Reformed Church.
Jane, m. Cornelius Couwenhoven (now Conover).
Anna, m. Daniel Forman.
Polly, m. John Schenck.
Denise Denise, 1st son, m. Miss Francis.
Daniel Denise, 2nd son, m. Jane, sister to John Schenck.

"All these aunts were fine looking and strong," he writes, "except Aunt Phebe, yet she outlived them all, and died in her ninety-sixth year; all were amiable and affectionate, and blessed with fine children. Their husbands were gentleman farmers, settled in Monmouth County within a short ride of each other, all active friends to their country in the Revolutionary War. I well remember when ladies wore scarlet or blue cloth cloaks. My aunts when they visited put on blue fine cloth cloaks, long and full, with large hoods to cover a close black silk bonnet or cap. They always looked so well and comfortable."

Dr. Welles, in his Brick Church Memorial, states that Domine Benjamin Dubois of the Freehold Church was present in 1777 at the first meeting of the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America. The Elder, Mr. Tunis Denise, signed subsequently with him the articles of agreement which formed the Dutch Churches of America into one ecclesiastical body."

This Elder was probably Tunis Denise of Freehold. In the ancient vellum bound volume of the records of the Freehold Dutch Church, which was shown me in 1895 by the kindness of Mr. van Zee, the pastor at Marlboro, New Jersey, I find his name as Elder of the congregation after 1764, and already in 1740 he and his second wife Francynthe Hendrickson were in the list of communicants. In the same book are written the baptisms of their many children, beginning with "Trintje" in 1732. I have, by the way, failed to find anywhere the baptism of Tunis himself, the wills of his parents, stepfather or grandparents on either side, but the will of his father-in-law Hendrick van Dyke, a well-to-do man, is in the New York Probate Records, and gives "unto my grandchild the child of my daughter Trintje deceased, the wife of Tunis Denise, the sum of one hundred and fifty pounds." His own will is in the Secretary of State's office, at Trenton, New Jersey.

It is an open question as to the history of the other Teunis, born 1692. He may have lived and become the "cordwainer," for it was not unknown for the Dutch to give more than one living child the same name, and dates in this case might seem to imply it. Thus either might have been the executor named by their brother Jacques, who by the way seems never to have left the Nayack home. His will is also in the New York Probate Records, dated and probated 1739.

If one chooses to drive out from old Utrecht, in Holland, to the town of Bunnik, one goes under broad alleys of huge beech trees, and finds a picturesque and tiny hamlet of exquisitely neat little houses, lying on both sides of a small stream. Beyond the bridge stands the church, and all is embowered in the stems and foliage of great trees that sift the sunlight on the greenest of turf. All about are deep-tilled meadows, woods, and peaceful country-seats.

The name De Nyse today is not unknown in the Bishopric—the "Sticht"—of Utrecht, and would we follow "Tonis Nyssen, young man from Bunnick," further back than this, his point of departure from the old world to the new, it might be easier to trace his "line" there, than through the half preserved, though originally well kept, church and state records of New Netherland.

TEUNTJE TEUNIS AND HER DESCENDANTS.

Tracing the families of van Huyse, van Schaick, de Nys and Hellakers.*

Dankers (or Danckaerts) and Sluyter, the Labadists, had sailed, after many delays, from Texel, Holland, on June 26, 1679, and had finally put off from Falmouth, England, on July 21st. After a stormy and unpleasant voyage, which they graphically describe, they arrived at New York City on Sept. 23, 1679. Their boat was the "Flute-ship Charles," owned by Margaret Philipse, the wife of Frederick Philipse. She was a passenger on the same trip, and the Labadists do not give a very flattering account of her in their journal. Their own story of their arrival cannot be improved:—

> "We stepped ashore about four o'clock in the afternoon, in company with Gerrit, our fellow passenger, who would conduct us in this strange place. . . . We went along with him, but as he met many of his old acquaintances on the way, we were constantly stopped. He first took us to the house of one of his friends, who welcomed him and us, and offered us some of the fruit of the country, very fine peaches and full grown apples, which filled our hearts with thankfulness to God. This fruit was exceedingly fair and good, and pleasant to the taste; much better than that in Holland or elsewhere, though I believe our long fasting and craving of food made it so agreeable. After taking a glass of Madeira, we proceeded on to Gerrit's father-in-law's, a very old man, half lame, and unable either to walk or stand, who fell upon the neck of his son-in-law, welcoming him with tears of joy. The old woman was also very glad. This good man was born in Vlissingen, and was named Jacob Swart. He had been formerly a master Carpenter at Amsterdam, but had lived in this country upwards of forty-five years. After we had been here a little while, we left our traveling bag, > and went out to take a walk in the fields. . . . When we had finished our tour and given our guide several letters to deliver, we returned to his father-in-law's, who regaled us in the evening with milk, which refreshed us much. We had so many peaches set before us that we were timid about eating them, though we experienced no ill effects from them. We remained there to sleep, which was the first time in nine or ten weeks that we had lain down upon a bed undressed, and able to yield ourselves to sleep without apprehension of danger." (J-109-110.)

The next day was Sunday, and the Labadists went to church, finding there "truly a wild worldly world." (J-111.)

> "After preaching, the good old people, with whom we lodged, who, indeed, if they were not the best on all the Manathans, were at least among the best, especially the wife, begged we would go with their son Gerrit, to one of their daughters, who lived in a delightful place, and kept a tavern." (J-113.)

"Especially the wife!" Who was this wife, that called forth such high praise from the Labadists? Readers of the journal know how sparingly the Labadists bestowed praise; so their curiosity is aroused as to this woman, "the best on all the Manathans." They never call her by name, and usually speak of her as "the old woman." She was Teuntje Teunis, the wife of Jacob Hellakers, or Jacob Swart.

The references to Teuntje Teunis in the old records of New York City are few—ten in all—though there may be others. But with these meager records and the journal of the Labadists, we are able to piece together an account of her life and family which give us a more vivid picture than can be obtained, probably, of any other woman of early New York.

She had a son born in 1639, so her own birth must have been in 1619 or earlier. So "the old woman" was probably in her early sixties when the Labadists arrived. She had lived in Nordingen, as one of her daughters had been born there. She had married first a man named Ide ——, as his children were known as Idens or Idensen. The son of his son adopted the surname van Huyse, so it is easier to think of him as Ide van Huyse. He probably died in Holland, and after his death his widow and her three children came to New York. She married second Jacob Hellakers, or Jacob Swart, probably in New York, as her son by this marriage was born at Gravesend about 1657, and we know from the Labadists that Jacob Swart had been in this country since about 1634.

When Dominie Selyns made up his list of Church members in 1686, "Jacob Swart, en syn huysv. Teuntje Jacobs," were living at "'s Smits Vallye"—Smith's Valley, the East River Shore above Wall Street (HSYB—1916-33). Jacob Swart must have died soon after, for on March 31, 1687, the banns of the third marriage of "the old woman" were proclaimed (M-61), and on April 22, 1687, she was married to Jan Stryker at Flatbush (HYSB—1898-92). She is last mentioned on April 4, 1697—now really an old woman—as the widow of Jan Stryker (B-243). It is not known when she died.

Her first name is given as Theuntie, Theuntje, Teuntie, Teuntje, and Tuntie; so there is no excuse for calling her Truytje or Tryntje, as some modern commentators have done. Her surname is variously given as, (i) Theunis, Teunis or Tunis, evidently her father's name; (ii) Idens, the first name of her first husband (Teuntje, Ide's wife); and (iii) Jacobs, the first name of her second husband (Teuntje, Jacob's wife).

The ten times her name appears in the early records are as follows: 5 times at the baptism of various grandchildren as a witness (B-122-132-136-157-243);

THE CITATION:
A KEY TO THE DESCENDANTS OF JACOBUS[4] VAN NUYSE THROUGH HIS GRANDSON AARON MURPHY

By B-Ann Moorhouse, C.G.

One helpful set of documents in a probate file is the Citation and petition for and proofs of service of same. Simply, at the time a testator's Will is offered to the Surrogate's Court of New York State for admission to probate, those persons not named in the Will who are distributees of the decedent (i.e., the legal heirs entitled to share in the estate if there had been no Will) must be notified that the Will is being offered for probate and be given an opportunity to appear at a specified time and place to show cause why the Will should not be admitted to probate. The form of such notification is called a Citation. When the names and/or whereabouts of the distributees are unknown or incompletely known, the Citation is published or advertised in the local newspaper. When the whereabouts of the distributees are known and if they do not waive the issuance of a Citation, it then is personally served upon them. The Surrogate's Court also requires that proofs of such service be filed in Court with the other papers in connection with the probate proceeding.

An excellent case in point is in the probate file of the Estate of Aaron Murphy, deceased, under Kings County Surrogate's Court File 7:247. Aaron Murphy died a resident of New Utrecht on 1 January 1840, leaving a last Will and Testament dated 1 April 1837 and a Codicil thereto dated 6 April 1837. In those instruments he named 14 legatees; no degree of kinship was given for any except to describe five of them as "my relatives." He was aged about 73 years, 3 months and 18 days when he died[1] and, according to his executors, his immediate family and any close relatives having predeceased him, he was survived only by maternal first cousins and first cousins once and twice removed. Although there is a paucity of records concerning him, a 1795 deed[2] identifies him as an heir and grandson of Jacobus[4] Van Nuyse, deceased, through the latter's daughter Maria[5], also deceased. The same 1795 deed also identifies Magdalena, wife of John Van Duyne; Sarah, wife of Petrus Hegeman; Annatie, wife of Simon Lott; and Magteltie, wife of John Hegeman, as the surviving daughters of Jacobus[4] Van Nuyse.

Jacobus[4] (William[3], Jacobus[2], Aucke[1] Jansen) Van Nuyse and his wife Sarah (Tunis) Rapalje were of New Utrecht. In his 14 December 1763 Will, proved 18 May 1770[3], Jacobus[4] named as his children, daughters

3. WNYC. 7:394.

Magdalena[5], Sarah[5], Jannettie[5], Annatie[5], Machtelje[5], and Maria[5], but did not name the husbands of his then married daughters.

Aaron Murphy may have had a deep interest in genealogy, for in 1832 he deposed in the Kings County Surrogate's Court concerning the kinships of the heirs of a Van Duyne family[4], and in only two or so short weeks after his death, Aaron's executors were able to list his distributees, as the following shows:

To Richard Cornwell, Surrogate of the County of Kings:

The petition of Charles Lott of the City of Brooklyn in the County of Kings and State of New York and Denyse I. Denyse in the town of New Utrecht in said County, respectively showeth that Aaron Murphy late of said town of New Utrecht departed this life at said town of New Utrecht on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred forty, having previously made and executed his last Will and Testament in and by which he devised and bequeathed both real and personal estate and in which he nominated and appointed your petitioners as executors thereof. The testator left him surviving no widow nor lineal descendants nor father nor mother nor brothers nor sisters nor descendants of such brothers or sisters nor brothers or sisters of his father nor descendants of such brothers or sisters to be [sic] best of their knowledge, information or belief, but that he left him surviving descendants of sisters of his mother as follows, that is to say, Garret Van Duyne and Denyse Van Duyne both residing in the City of Brooklyn, James Van Duyne of Flushing in Queens County, Jane Van Duyne of Flatbush in the County of Kings singlewoman, Adrianna Van Duyne in the City of Brooklyn all of whom are of full age and are children of Helen Van Duyne deceased who was a sister of the mother of the said Testator, and Nathan Furman, Jacob Furman, Helen Storms the wife of George Storms, Sally Pearsall widow of Jacob Pearsall deceased, and Abigal Van Duyne all of the County of Kings and of full age, and Lydia A. daughter of William Furman deceased, and Catherine Storms, Cynthia Storms, Ann Storms, Maria Storms, Margaret Storms and William Storms and David Storms minor children of Jane Storms deceased, and William Baldwin of full age, Garret Baldwin of full age and Sarah Baldwin a minor child of Ann Baldwin deceased, and Charles Edgar, Sarah Amanda, Maria Louisa and Josephine Eliza children of John Furman deceased, which said Nathan and Jacob Furman, Helen Storms, Sally Pearsall, Abigal Van Duyne, William Furman deceased, Jane Storms, deceased, Ann Baldwin deceased, and John Furman deceased were children of Cynthia Furman deceased who was also a child of the said Helen Van Duyne, and which said Lydia Furman, Catherine, Cynthia, Ann Maria, Margaret, William and David Storms, Sarah Ann Baldwin, and the said Charles Edgar, Sarah Amanda, Maria Louisa and Josephine Eliza Furman, respectively, are infants under the age of twenty one years residing in the County of Kings and neither of them have [sic] a general guardian as your petitioners are informed and believe, and Jane Hunter of Newtown, Queens County widow, and Nancy Furman of the City of Brooklyn widow, and Maria Wiggins of said City widow, all of whom are of full age and are children of Sarah Ward, deceased, who was a daughter of the said Helen Van Duyne.

"And the following descendants of Jane Vanderbilt who was also a sister of the mother of the said Testator, viz.: Cynthia Hegeman of Dutchess County in the State widow, Sarah Hegeman of said town of Flatbush widow who are of full age and are daughters of said Jane. And also the children of Matilda Hegeman deceased who was also a sister of said testator's mother, viz.: Rem Hegeman and John Hegeman of the town of Flatbush and of full age, and James Hegeman of full age of Lockville in the town of Arcadia and County of Wayne, and William Hegeman of full age of Port Gibson in the County of Ontario.

And also the following descendants of Ann Lott deceased who was also a sister of the mother of the said Testator, namely: Charles Lott, Simon Lott, and Ann the wife of Andrew Stockholm, Catherine the wife of John Titus all of whom reside in the County of Kings and are of full age, and Sarah the wife of Sylvester W. Brouer residing in Dutchess County of full age, and James Lott, Francis Lott and Aaron Lott all of the city of Brooklyn infants under the age of twenty one years and have no general guardian, which said Charles, Simon, Ann, Catherine, Sarah, James, Francis and Aaron are children of Jacobus Lott deecased who was a son of the said Ann Lott deceased.

Also, Ann the wife of Cornelius W. Brouer who is a daughter of said Ann Lott of full age residing at Poughkeepsie in the County of Dutchess, And your petitioners further show that said Testator was at or immediately previous to his death an inhabitant of the County of Kings, by means whereof as your petioners has [sic] been informed and believes the proving and registering of said will and the order and granting of administration of all and singular the goods, chattels and credits whereof the said Testator died possessed and also the auditing and allowing and final discharging the account thereof doth belong unto the Surrogate of the County of Kings.

And your petitioners being desirous that the said Last Will and Testament should be duly proved and that letters testamentary should be granted thereon in pursuance of the statutes in such case made and provided, respectfully pray that a citation may issue out of and under the seal of the court requiring the said heirs at law and next of kin of said deceased, personally to be and appear at a time and place therein mentioned and attend the probate of said will.

And Your petitioners will Ever Pray, etc.

Denyse I. Denyse

Dated Brooklyn
January 16, 1840.

The Citation, not quoted here, was issued by the Surrogate on 21 January 1840. It repeats the names of the distributees listed in the petition and adds to it the names of Ann Moore, Simon Denyse, Jaques Denyse, Denyse I. Denyse, Garret Cozine and Jane Cozine, his wife, Edward Titus and Catherine Titus, his wife, and William Haviland and Sarah Haviland, his wife[5], all of Kings County, as well as of Sarah Ann Denyse and Jane Denyse[6], minors of New Utrecht. The proofs of service, dated between 21 January and 29 February 1840, verify that each of those named in the

5. Children of Sarah Lott, wife of John Denyse and predeceased daughter of Annatie[5] Van Nuyse, deceased maternal aunt of the Testator.
6. Children of Jacobus Lott, predeceased son of Annatie[5] Van Nuyse, deceased maternal aunt of the Testator.

Citation was personally served at the place of residence given for each in the Citation.

De Nyse (or Nyssen), Cornelis Teunise, a minor in 1667, m. 1st, Aug. 27, 1687, Neeltje da. of Teunis Gysbertse Bogaert; m. 2^{d} Rebecca ——. Settled about 1683 on the Raritan in the vicinity of Somerville, N. J., and a mem. of the R. D. ch. of that locality in 1710 and '23. His children adopted "Tunisen" as their surname, which has been continued by his descendants, who are numerous in Somerset Co., N. J. In 1703 he was a member of the Assembly of N. J. Issue:—Tunis Tunisen, bp. Apl. 22, 1688, in N. Y., m. Adriaentje ——; Ab^{m} Tunisen, bp. Mar. 8, 1699, in N. J., d. young; Ab^{m} Tunisen, bp. Sept. 26, 1700; Jan Tunisen, bp. Apl. 20, 1704, m. Aeltje Schenck; Sara Tunisen, bp. Apl. 3, 1706; Denyse Tunisen, bp. Apl. 28, 1708, m. Saertje ——; and Neeltje Tunisen, bp. May 23, 1718.

Denyse or Dionys Tuenessen, bp. Apl. 16, 1654; m. 1st, Oct. 22, 1682, Elizabeth da. of the Rev. Theodorus Johannes Polhemius of Fl^{h}; m. 2^{d}, Aug. 12, 1685, Helena da. of Jacques Cortelyou and wid. of Claes or Nich^{s} Van Brunt of N. U.; d. prior to 1707. Was a master carpenter, and bought land in 1687 in Fl^{h}, where he then resided and took the oath of allegiance, his name appearing on the patent of said town in 1685. After his second marriage he removed to the lands of his wife on the Nayack tract in the vicinity of the Narrows, and also owned lands at Yellow Hoek. Owned lands on S. I., where he appears to have resided a portion of his time and held the office of justice of the peace. Dec. 30, 1701, as of S. I., he signed a petition of the anti-Leislerian faction. Bought lands at Millstone, N. J., in 1701, and assessed for 80 A. in N. U. in 1706. After his death his wid. m. Hendrick Hendricksen. His descendants adopted Denyse as their surname. Issue:—Jaques; Theunis, bp. Apl. 24, 1687, and d. young; Neeltje, bp. Sept. 22, 1689, m. Jacob Vanderbilt of S. I.; Tunis, bp. Apl. 2, 1692; Femmetje, m. —— Gerretsen of Six Mile Run, N. J.; Cornelis, bp. Apl. 26, 1696; and Helena, b. 1700, m. Mar. 9, 1717, Frederick Van Leeuwen or Liew of J^{a}, who settled at Three Mile Run, N. J., d. Mar. 6, 1784. Signed his name "Denys Tuenessen."

Jan Teunise, bp. Apl. 12, 1654; m. Nov. 16, 1679, Cataline da. of Tunis Gysbertse Bogaert. Resided at the Wallabout, taking the oath of allegiance in Br^{n} in 1687. Removed to the Raritan, N. J., where his descendants, the same as those of his brother Cornelis, adopted Tunisen as their family name, dropping that of Denyse. In 1704 he was a member of the Assembly of N. J. May 22, 1723, Cornelius Ewetse and Mary his wife, of Kings Co., conveyed to "Jan Tunise Van Middleswart" of N. J. a house and lot at Br^{n} ferry, as per p. 26 of Lib. 5 of Con. The "Van Middleswart" in this tends to confirm the conclusion that the "Van Middleswarts" of N. J. are descendants of Teunis Nyssen or Denyse. Issue:—Femmetje, bp. Aug. 5, 1680, at Fl^{h}; Teunis, bp. July 16, 1682, at Fld^{s}, m. Adriaentje ——; Sarah, bp. Feb. 1, 1685, at Br^{n}; and Abraham, bp. Sept. 19, 1699, in N. J. —all residents of N. J. and using Tunisen as their surname.

He attended the public schools of Atlantic City, Pennington Seminary, New Jersey, and then matriculated in the College of Pharmacy, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, graduating therefrom in 1879, and after some service as a druggist, entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1882, graduating as Doctor of Medicine in 1884, and since then has been engaged in the successful practice of his profession at Atlantic City. He is a member of the American Medical Association, New Jersey Medical Society, Atlantic County Medical Society, and Philadelphia Medical Club. He served as vice-president and secretary of the Atlantic County and New Jersey Medical associations, and was a member of the Atlantic City Board of Health for four years. He is a member of the Methodist church of Atlantic City, and a Republican in politics. He is a member of the City Troop of Atlantic City, an independent military organization, and a charter member of the Morris Guards of Atlantic City, of which he was elected surgeon for life, ranking as lieutenant. Dr. Reed derives pleasure and recreation from the rod and gun, being an enthusiastic sportsman. He married, October 4, 1892, Lilias May, daughter of J. A. and Elizabeth Sweigard, the former of whom was general superintendent of the Reading railroad.

DENISE

Tunis Denise, ancestor of the branch of the Denise family here under consideration, emigrated from Binnick, province of Utrecht, Holland, in 1638. He married Phebe F. Searles, of English parentage. They settled in Kings county, New York.

(II) Denise, son of Tunis and Phebe F. (Searles) Denise, was born in 1664. He married Helena Cortlejon. They located in Monmouth county, New Jersey, near Marlboro.

(III) Tunis (2), son of Denise and Helena (Cortlejon) Denise, was born June 15, 1704. He married (first) Catharine Van Dyke, 1726. They had one daughter who married, 1759, Samuel Forman. He married (second) Francinche, daughter of Daniel Hendrickson, 1791. They had nine children, two sons and seven daughters, among whom were: 1. Catharine, married John Forman, judge of county courts. 2. Anna, married David Forman, brigadier-general of Monmouth militia in the revolution. 3. Jane, married Cornelius R. Conover, December 5, 1758, and their daughter Catharine married John Van Derveer, and was maternal grandmother of Vice-President Hobart. 4. Phebe, married, October 19, 1765, Rev. Benjamin Du Bois, pastor for fifty-eight years of the Dutch Reformed Church of Marlboro; they were the parents of ten children, and all were communicants of the church. 5. Mary, married, July 31, 1767, John Schenck, a famous leader of the militia during the revolution; the British offered a large reward for his capture; upon one occasion, when they were searching for him, he was hidden under a hay stack and heard them talking of firing the same. 6. Denise, married, 1771, Catherine, daughter of Garrett and Jane (Conover) Schenck; Denise Denise was a major of militia, also a judge of county courts during and subsequent to the revolution. 7. Daniel, see forward.

(IV) Daniel, son of Tunis (2) and Francinche (Hendrickson) Denise, was born in 1748. He was a farmer by occupation. He was honored by the people of his town, having held the office of county collector for forty years, keeping the money and disbursing the same from the old Denise homestead, there being no banks at that period. The homestead was located about two miles out of Freehold, on the road to Long Branch, this having been in the family for about two hundred years. Mr. Denise was a member of the Dutch Reformed church, and an old line Whig in politics. He married (first) April 18, 1771, Jane Schenck, born 1754, buried beside her husband in the old burying-yard near East Freehold. Their children: Garret, Catharine, Tunis, William, Jane, Sarah, Daniel, John Schenck, see forward, Denise. He married (second) Mary Stilwell. Daniel Denise died in 1823, aged seventy-five years.

(V) John Schenck, son of Daniel and Jane (Schenck) Denise, was born at Freehold, New Jersey, September 30, 1796. He followed the occupation of farming, having extensive land interests. He was prominent in the affairs of his native town, serving as president of several business organizations, director in a bank, and president of public road improvements. He was a member of the Dutch Reformed church, and was a Republican in politics. He held a lieutenancy in the militia, those being the times when all able-bodied men were obliged to drill. He married, February 3, 1819, Catharine, born April 1, 1800, daughter of W. I. and Margaret (Denise) Thompson, and granddaughter of Joseph and Sarah (Conover) Thompson. Margaret (Denise) Thompson was born March 25, 1775, of Dutch descent. Children: 1. Tunis, born May 21, 1821; married (first) Mary Cook, (second) Alice Hendrickson, (third) Matilda Tunis; children: William and Frank. 2. William, July 12, 1824; married Jane Campbell; children: William, John and Fred. 3. Daniel, December 14, 1827; married Jane Post; child, Ada. 4. Sarah Jane, October 20, 1831; married Peter Jackson; children: William, Kate and Florence. 5. John Henry, December, 1833, see forward. 6. Sidney C., January 8, 1839; married Lydia Conover; children: Edwin and Mary. 7. David D., September 23, 1840; see forward. 8. Rasha, November 5, 1842; married Louisa Miers; child, Charles. All the children of Mr. and Mrs. Denise were born at the Denise homestead at Freehold, New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Denise celebrated their fifty-fifth anniversary, and enjoyed a married life of sixty years duration.

(VI) John Henry, son of John Schenck and Catharine (Thompson) Denise, was born on the homestead farm at Freehold, New Jersey, December, 1833, the property being in the possession of the Denise family for six generations. He was educated in the local district school and the Freehold Institute, graduating from the latter institution. After conducting farming operations for thirty years, Mr. Denise added the manufacture of commercial fertilizers, connecting this with novel experimental work with different formulas for special crops, and the outcome of this experimental work has been a great uplift to the agricultural interests of that section of the state. Since attaining his majority he has affiliated with the Republican party, and has held a few minor public positions, not being so greatly interested in politics as in religious work. He is a member of the Baptist church of Freehold, in which he has served as deacon for forty-six years, Sunday school superintendent and teacher for fifty-one years, and treasurer for twenty-eight years, these offices clearly showing the interest he has taken in the same. He has also served as president of the Monmouth County Sunday School Association, member of the executive committee of the state work, president of the Monmouth County Baptist Association, and member of the executive committee of the state work. He is also serving in the capacity of president of the Monmouth County Board of Agriculture; vice-president of Monmouth County Agricultural Society; president of public improvement organizations, such as road building, and master of Monmouth Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, holding positions of trust in the state work of the same organization. Thus it will be seen that his life has been active, and that his work has been such as has added to the general welfare of the community in which he resides. His work has been widely extended, and he has used his influence for good in the affairs of his town and county.

Mr. Denise married, at Freehold, New Jersey, January 26, 1859, Jane Conover, born August 21, 1835, eldest daughter of ex-Sheriff Horatio and Helena (Conover) Ely, of Freehold. Ex-Sheriff Ely conducted farming on a large scale, having large land interests, and in addition to that of sheriff held several minor public offices. His chief delight was in fostering religious interests. Children of Horatio and Helena (Conover) Ely: Jane Conover (Mrs. Denise), John, Helena, Adelaide, Anna, Horatio, William, Mary, Emma, Kate and Charles. Children of Mr. and Mrs. Denise: 1. Lillian C., born December 25, 1861; graduated from Freehold Young Ladies' Seminary; married, May 4, 1882, Clifford C., son of C. H. and Amanda (Gaskill) Snyder, of Milhurst, New Jersey; Clifford C. Snyder is a graduate of Brown University, Rhode Island; child, Cecil Denise Snyder, born November 19, 1889, now a student at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. 2. John Elmer, October 1, 1864. 3. Charles H., July 26, 1867. 4. Helen Adelaide, November 6, 1870. 5. Horatio E., December 25, 1875, deceased.

(VI) David Demarest, son of John S. and Catharine (Thompson) Denise, was born September 23, 1840, on the old homestead in Freehold township, Monmouth county, New Jersey. For his early education he attended school at first in the immediate neighborhood of his home, and after that entered Freehold Institute. During his school days his parents had removed to Freehold, and here Mr. Denise became interested in agriculture and farming, which has ever since that time to a greater or less extent engaged his attention. In 1864 Mr. Denise removed out of Freehold township and for eight years devoted his energies exclusively to farming, after which he returned to the town which is his present home. He has made agriculture the study of his life, and has been largely identified with every known farm in the county, having at heart the advancement of the agricultural interests of the county and state. He is director of the Monmouth County Agricultural Society, and was one of the leading spirits in the Grange which resulted in the organization of the Monmouth Grange, No. 92, of which he was the first secretary and in which he has held various other offices. He is secretary of the Monmouth County Board of Agriculture, and holds the appointment of delegate of the county to the state board of agriculture, and gives much attention to the agricultural statistical work. Mr. Denise is largely interested in religious and church work and has held the office of both deacon and elder and acting as superintendent of the Sunday school of the Second Reformed Dutch Church of Freehold. January 20, 1864, David Demarest Denise married Julia, daughter of Abel R. Taylor, of Mercer county, New Jersey. Their only child was Edith Taylor, born October 11, 1876, died August 31, 1879.

DENNIS

Robert Dennis, the first member of this family of whom we have definite information, died in Woodbridge, Middlesex county, New Jersey, in 1696 or 1697. He was a son of Robert Dennis, of Yarmouth, Massachusetts. Robert Dennis, of Woodbridge, was a member of the East Jersey assembly in 1668-69-72, and was one of the original patentees of Woodbridge in 1666. He married Mary ———. Children: Jonathan, referred to below; Joseph; Elizabeth, married Thomas Bloomfield.

(II) Jonathan, son of Robert and Mary Dennis, came with his father to Woodbridge, and died in Cohansey, Salem county, New Jersey, in 1719 or 1720. He lived in Woodbridge until 1694, and then, with his family and his brother Joseph, removed to Cohansey. He married, in Woodbridge, March 14, 1677-8, Rachel, daughter of Samuel Moore, who survived him. Children: 1. Elizabeth, born January 8, 1678-9. 2. Mary, April 7, 1682; married Moses Shepard. 3. Rachel, born October 30, 1683. 4. Jonathan, born January 29, 1685; died 1718 or 1719; married Sarah Clowes. 5. Joseph, referred to below. 6. Charles, born January 4, 1689; married Priscilla ———. 7. Sarah, twin with Charles. 8. Hannah, born January 26, 1691. 9. Samuel. 10. Naomi, married John Tyler. 11. Philip, died February 15, 1768; married Lucy Bacon.

(III) Joseph, son of Jonathan and Rachel (Moore) Dennis, was born in Woodbridge, New Jersey, February 18, 1687, and died in Sussex county, New Jersey, in 1770. He was taken by his father to Cohansey. He removed while a young man to Bucks county, Pennsylvania, where he received a patent of land in 1739. This land he conveyed to his son

GREVER, HENDRICK, on muster-roll of Bu^{k} militia in 1663.

GRICKSEN, HENDRICK, of Lymme, obtained a patent Oct. 1, 1652, for land E. of Joris Rapalie's valley, as per p. 128 of Cal. of Dutch Man.

GRIDY, GREEDY, or GREEDYE, THOMAS, from Devonshire, England, b. 1586; m. Maria Roberts or Robertsen wid. of John Seals of N. A.; was among the first settlers of G^{d} in 1646, and allotted a plantation-lot, but publicly whipped and banished in the same year for theft, as per p. 103 of Cal. of His. Dutch Man. He appears, however, afterwards to have been allowed to return and obtain or hold property, which he sold May 26, 1653, to David Provoost, as per town rec. In 1656 he was again banished for 12 years, as per p. 161 of Cal. of Dutch Man. For a further account of him see p. 99 of the second edition of the Bergen Genealogy. His will is da. Oct. 10, 1658, pro. Nov. 4 of the same year, and rec. on the G^{d} town rec. In it he makes John and Peter Tilton his heirs, from which it may be inferred he left no male children. Made his mark "T" to documents.

GRIFFIN or GRIFFING, EDWARD, of N. A. and Fl^{h}. He appears to have emigrated as a servant of Capt. Clever or Clebers of Va., and was claimed Aug. 27, 1640, by the Gov. of Maryland as a runaway, as per p. 73 of Cal. of Dutch Man. Feb. 28, 1653, he bought of "Gerrit Bricker" 25 morgens of land in Fl^{h}. This land he sold July 28, 1653, to "Bartel Loot and Peter Loot" (Lott), describing it as "on the west side of the road near the Flat bush, next the ministers land N^{o} 9, as conveyed to the grantor by Gerrit Strycker:" the above "Bricker" should be "Strycker." See pp. 377 and 378 of Cal. of His. Dutch Man. He appears also to have owned land in G^{d}, selling Apl. 5, 1661, to Richard Stout plantation-lot No. 26 in said town, as per G^{d} rec. Dec. 14, 1678, he sailed for England in the ship Blossom, and afterwards returned. There was an Edward Griffen, capt. of the ship Barbadoes Merchant, in 1679, and an Edward

PREFACE

BY VIVIAN HILL JORDAN, CGRS

The Medical Case History Journal that Dr. Henry Dye kept through the Civil War was his private listing of his cases and his thoughts on the problems that faced him. He often would add short comments on the geography of the places where he served as well as how this contributed to the type of cases, (other than gun shot wounds) that he was having to treat. He also lists the formulas for the contents of the medical prescriptions provided for his patients.

Dr. Dye made very graphic drawings of the exact locations of some of the more challenging wounds which he encountered. In reading this Journal, one gets the feeling that the good Doctor was very conscientious and truly cared for those that he treated.

In almost every case, when he was working with a female patient, he gave only her initials or just her first name. This is in the small section, when he goes into private practice. The typical physician's handwriting presented some problems in a few instances.

To help the reader decide whether or not a person is the one he/she seeks, all identifying Army Company and Regiment numbers and names have been listed. When the reader finds a '?', this indicates some difficulty in deciphering the word or number. If the reader is interested in reading the patient's entire case history, the Journal was filmed by the Medical Center Library, Duke University, Durham, NC.in 1964. A copy of the film is located at the Clayton Genealogical Library in Houston, TX., Miss Maxine Alcorn, Head Librarian.

The Name Index will show the page numbers for the film with a 'F'in front, the other numbers are the pages for this publication.

The General Army Hospital locations, in Arkansas, that Dr. Henry Dye mentions are as follows: Crystal Hill, Pulaski County; Bayou Mitre, Lonoka County; Princeton, Dallas County; Camden, Ouachita County; Washington, Hempstead County; Lewisville, Lafayette County; Magnolia, Houston County.

After 'The War', Dr. Henry Dye went into private practice in 'Plains, TX and vicinity' on the 19th day of May 1869 (Yoakum County). Almost all patients in this small segment have been identified by initials. The last recorded date that was decipherable was 1873. The last pages of the Journal were subjected to some harsh treatment through the years. The reader is urged to personally examine the film if possible.

The Medical Case History Journal that Dr. Henry Dye kept throughout the CIVIL WAR was his private listing of his cases and his problems on the hospital floor, or the large open wards of Wm Isom Infirmary (Yoknapatawpha County). Almost all hospitals in this small section of Mid Mississippi, at that time, were private, Dr. Henry Dye went into private practice in 1853. The last recorded date that was definitely identified by initials. The last records of the journal were destroyed by fire, or misplaced after the death of Dr. Dye. Only a few unidentified pages remain.

After the war, Dr. Henry Dye went into private practice in Yoknapatawpha County: Mississippi. Homeopathic County: Deltaville, Oaksmith County: Mississippi, Hemphasad County: Delmarville, Nelson Little, Rooks County: Extraction, Dallas County: Cahaba, Henry Dye mentions six as follows: Crystal Hill, Dunbar County: Jonesboro, Mississippi, Mississippi, Homeopathic County.

The General Army Hospital locations, in Arkansas, Chas Dr. Jonesboro of the Clayton Generalogical Library in Honeon, AK., Duke University, Durham, NC.In 1861. A copy of the Civil War Miss Maxine Alcorn, Head Librarian.

The Name Index will show the page number for the Civil War Era, the other number is for the page number for the Baptismal.

On page 281 of the Journal, a new handwriting appears, identified personally as Dr. T. C. Dye. Unfortunately, he does not tell his relationship to Dr. Henry Dye specifically. He does mention 'Grandfather's prescriptions' on one of the back pages. It seems that in April of the year 1903, Dr. T.C. Dye began his first year of medical practice. He started his writing in the Journal on November of 1903 in Tyler, TX. (Smith County). He stayed with this hospital for a year and then went into practice with a Dr. Collom in Tyler, TX. Their practice was mostly with workers in the saw mills in the vicinity, and their families. He kept the Journal for a very short time.

MEDICAL CASE HISTORY JOURNAL

by
Dr. Henry Dye and Dr. T. C. Dye

Abstracted and Indexed by Ms Vivian Hill Jordan, GRS

Film located at Clayton Library, Houston, TX.

Doctor Henry Dye begins his Journal with his opinion of the locations of the various hospital sites where, it appears he had been stationed. He states that most of the troops are from Texas 'this summer of 1862' and describes the location of Crystal Hill, the first camp site...'bad drinking water, (the Trinity River), diarrhea and dysentery are prevalent'. In August of 1862, the camp was moved to Bayou Mitre...'a place still more objectionable'...where rubella, dysentery prevailed.

In Nov, of 1862, it became necessary to set up another hospital. On the 12th of Nov, Dr. Dye was ordered to 'use the Brook Hotel and adjacent buildings as a hospital...these would accommodate 185 sick. The Dittes(?) Building was fitted up and placed in charge of Surgeon McDowell, nephew of Dr. McDowell of St. Louis...this would take care of 200 more sick & wounded.'

'During this time, General Hindman was retreating from Prairie Grove, through Little Rock (Dec.)...these troops were in very poor condition...Beeke(?) House was also set up as a hospital by J. N. Thompson...capacity of 80 beds. Next the Hill Hospital... capacity of 60 beds....Main Street Hospital, Walker in charge... capacity of 400. Presby. and Epicso. churches also set up to receive wounded.'

'Through the winter of 1862 and 1863, 2500 sick were in the hospital...prevailing disorders were pneumonia and camp fevers... approximately 8 deaths per day during January and February. Healthier conditions prevailed in the Spring of 1863...number of hospitals were decreased from nine to three...by June, all hospitals closed except St. John's. During the month of July, from the Battle of Saline...we received 60 wounded.'

'At this time, Little Rock was preparing for an attack from the Feds, so most of the wounded had been sent to the General Hospitals...but as the battle came closer, our capacity swelled to 270...all were captured after evacuation of Little Rock.'

(The Doctor then begins to list some of the wounded)

PREFACE

BY VIVIAN HILL JORDAN, CGRS

The Medical Case History Journal that Dr. Henry Dye kept through the Civil War was his private listing of his cases and his thoughts on the problems that faced him. He often would add short comments on the geography of the places where he served as well as how this contributed to the type of cases, (other than gun shot wounds) that he was having to treat. He also lists the formulas for the contents of the medical prescriptions provided for his patients.

Dr. Dye made very graphic drawings of the exact locations of some of the more challenging wounds which he encountered. In reading this Journal, one gets the feeling that the good Doctor was very conscientious and truly cared for those that he treated.

In almost every case, when he was working with a female patient, he gave only her initials or just her first name. This is in the small section, when he goes into private practice. The typical physician's handwriting presented some problems in a few instances.

To help the reader decide whether or not a person is the one he/she seeks, all identifying Army Company and Regiment numbers and names have been listed. When the reader finds a '?', this indicates some difficulty in deciphering the word or number. If the reader is interested in reading the patient's entire case history, the Journal was filmed by the Medical Center Library, Duke University, Durham, NC.in 1964. A copy of the film is located at the Clayton Genealogical Library in Houston, TX., Miss Maxine Alcorn, Head Librarian.

The Name Index will show the page numbers for the film with a 'F'in front, the other numbers are the pages for this publication.

The General Army Hospital locations, in Arkansas, that Dr. Henry Dye mentions are as follows: Crystal Hill, Pulaski County; Bayou Mitre, Lonoka County; Princeton, Dallas County; Camden, Ouachita County; Washington, Hempstead County; Lewisville, Lafayette County; Magnolia, Houston County.

After 'The War', Dr. Henry Dye went into private practice in 'Plains, TX and vicinity' on the 19th day of May 1869 (Yoakum County). Almost all patients in this small segment have been identified by initials. The last recorded date that was decipherable was 1873. The last pages of the Journal were subjected to some harsh treatment through the years. The reader is urged to personally examine the film if possible.

On page 281 of the Journal, a new handwriting appears, identified personally as Dr. T. C. Dye. Unfortunately, he does not tell his relationship to Dr. Henry Dye specifically. He does mention 'Grandfather's prescriptions' on one of the back pages. It seems that in April of the year 1903, Dr. T.C. Dye began his first year of medical practice. He started his writing in the Journal on November of 1903 in Tyler, TX. (Smith County). He stayed with this hospital for a year and then went into practice with a Dr. Collom in Tyler, TX. Their practice was mostly with workers in the saw mills in the vicinity, and their families. He kept the Journal for a very short time.

MEDICAL CASE HISTORY JOURNAL

by
Dr. Henry Dye and Dr. T. C. Dye

Abstracted and Indexed by Ms Vivian Hill Jordan, GRS

Film located at Clayton Library, Houston, TX.

Doctor Henry Dye begins his Journal with his opinion of the locations of the various hospital sites where, it appears he had been stationed. He states that most of the troops are from Texas 'this summer of 1862' and describes the location of Crystal Hill, the first camp site...'bad drinking water, (the Trinity River), diarrhea and dysentery are prevalent'. In August of 1862, the camp was moved to Bayou Mitre...'a place still more objectionable'...where rubella, dysentery prevailed.

In Nov, of 1862, it became necessary to set up another hospital. On the 12th of Nov, Dr. Dye was ordered to 'use the Brook Hotel and adjacent buildings as a hospital...these would accommodate 185 sick. The Dittes(?) Building was fitted up and placed in charge of Surgeon McDowell, nephew of Dr. McDowell of St. Louis...this would take care of 200 more sick & wounded.'

'During this time, General Hindman was retreating from Prairie Grove, through Little Rock (Dec.)...these troops were in very poor condition...Beeke(?) House was also set up as a hospital by J. N. Thompson...capacity of 80 beds. Next the Hill Hospital... capacity of 60 beds....Main Street Hospital, Walker in charge... capacity of 400. Presby. and Epicso. churches also set up to receive wounded.'

'Through the winter of 1862 and 1863, 2500 sick were in the hospital...prevailing disorders were pneumonia and camp fevers... approximately 8 deaths per day during January and February. Healthier conditions prevailed in the Spring of 1863...number of hospitals were decreased from nine to three...by June, all hospitals closed except St. John's. During the month of July, from the Battle of Saline...we received 60 wounded.'

'At this time, Little Rock was preparing for an attack from the Feds, so most of the wounded had been sent to the General Hospitals...but as the battle came closer, our capacity swelled to 270...all were captured after evacuation of Little Rock.'

(The Doctor then begins to list some of the wounded)
